Sir William Dawson is the chief Canadian authority on the geology of this country and kindred subjects, and the Somerville course of lectures on Canadian matters is one of the most interesting institutions of Montreal. The inaugural lecture of this winter's course was delivered a few days ago by the famous geologist, who discussed Canada's area, mineral resources and other capabilities.

From the appended quotation for Sir William's outline of the course, as printed in the Montreal Witness, some idea may be formed of the rich natural resources of the Dominion:

"Roughly speaking, Canada includes the northern half of North America. Canada extends east and west over 3,400 miles and has an area of 3,000,000 square miles. Its center is very near the line of the Red River and while the greater part of the agricultural land lies west of this and the bulk of the population to the east of it, the western half must in the future assume greater importance. While at present most of the people are settled around the southern margin, there are large areas in the north, aggregating nearly a million square miles, which are not only not inhabited, except by hunters, but are practically unexplored.

"Canada may be divided into six natural divisions: The Maritime Provinces, the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, the great plateau between the great lakes and the Rocky Mountains; British Columbia, the great North and Newfoundland. As the second lecture is to be on the mining resources of Canada, we find in the maritime district a large coal area. Then in the western plateau another series of extensive coal deposits are found, besides those of British Columbia, where every variety is found from brown coal, which is little more than hardened peat, to the finest kind of anthracite. It is estimated that the total area of coal land in Canada is about 97,000 square miles. The total annual output does not exceed 4,000,000 tons, an amount which the little island of Cape Breton could supply for an indefinite period. Newfoundland has also its area of coal which are of a special value with reference to the future command of the navigation of the North Atlantic.

"The next subject of the course refers to agricultural products. The results of the researches carried on at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa show that, compared with the land under cultivation, our agricultural resources are yet in infancy. The remarkable development which in a few years certain departments of agriculture have shown indicate what can be done. In 1893 Canada exported 134,000,000 pounds of cheese, besides $7,500,000 worth of cattle. We need not fear should our staple of wheat fall off. One lecture will be devoted to the consideration of the wheat question. It should be borne in mind that the cultivation of wheat rapidly exhausts the soil, while dairy products merely deplete the land of very little of its phosphates, which are easily replaced.

"The fifth lecture deals with the forests, which are, under present management, in a critical condition. Canada still has more timber than any other country in the world, but for that reason we ought to be careful not to give away too much or waste it at home. The time has come for scientific forestry, and proper attention to these matters might enable us to supply the world for centuries, besides leaving us abundance for ourselves. Our present export of $26,000,000 worth, and much more, might be obtained from the natural increase of our forests. We have still a million acres of forest land in the North outside the boundaries of the Provinces.

"Of our native animals we have taken little thought, except how to kill and destroy them. The bison in the West and the eider down in the East furnish lamentable examples of this wasteful destruction. But we have still abundance of fur-bearing animals which, should they be properly cared for, will continue to supply the world for years to come. The last of the lectures will deal with the fisheries. Ours are the most extensive in the world, yielding more than $20,000,000. It is well that the Government is waking up to their improvement. We should, however, have our shore fisheries to ourselves, and it is quite as criminal for foreign poachers to make inroads on these preserves as it would be on our cultivated fields. To round out our fishing resources and enable us properly to protect them, Newfoundland should join us and France should be removed from her shores and from those little islands which by their smuggling proclivities are demoralizing the people of the Lower St. Lawrence. To complete the Dominion we should induce our generous neighbors to the south to hand over to us their not very profitable territory of Alaska, with its dependent islands, which their benevolent regard of the fur seal makes so costly to them. We could protect the seals less expensively and more effectively and sell them the fur cheaper than they can produce it themselves."

A Splendid Market.

There was a splendid market on Saturday and a large influx of country people who left a good deal of money with the merchants. In consequence business was brisk.

The Fortnightly Club.

The Fortnightly Club will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Judge's chambers. The following is the programme: Paper, "The Mineral Resources of Ontario," J. A. Fife, B. A. Special speakers, Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, C. E., H. T. Strickland and J. M. Irwin.

Be Sure and Attend

A Sunday Raid.

The police made a descent upon the premises of Martin Connors, yesterday afternoon in search of liquor, during the absence of the proprietor. In a private apartment a keg containing a quantity of ale was found, which the owner claims was purchased on the advice of a physician for one of his family, who has been in poor health for some time. The case will come up for trial on Tuesday morning. The charge will be that of keeping and selling liquor on the premises. A number of witnesses are to be subpoenaed.

Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Garvin.

DEAR SIR:—Having noticed in the public press of Saturday the refusal of Mr. McCarthy to allow Mr. Garvin to discuss the public questions of the day on Thursday the 28th., I beg to make the following proposition to Mr. Garvin, That he challenge Mr. McCarthy to a skating contest of five miles for five hundred dollars. The race to take place in the Charlotte street rink on Friday, the 22nd. If the challenge be excepted the money to be deposited in the window of gough bros' along with the other valuable prizes there displayed.

SPORT.

A False Alarm.

The chief of police saw smoke arising from the roof of a building on George street yesterday afternoon, and immediately sprinted across the market square and rung the fire bell. After the hose wagon and the hook and ladder had left the fire hall and about 800 people had gathered around the market square, it was discovered that the smoke was serenely curling from a chimney, minding its own business and doing no harm. It looks as if even a chimney can't go on tending to its own business in this town without police interference.

The Ice Races.

Peterborough's ice races will come off this week. It will be a two days' "meet" extending over Wednesday and Thursday. A great deal of interest is centering in this racing event, not so much on account of the purses, but owing to an existing friendly rivalry between owners of trotters, who are anxious to prove the superior merits and speed of their respective animals. The track has been nicely staked off and cleared of snow and the ice is in excellent condition. Quite a number of entries have been made and more will be today and tomorrow. A string of trotters is expected today. Some of the local entries are "speeding" on the track these mornings and "trials" are not infrequent.

The Business World.

James Allan & Co., general merchants Bramsville, have assigned to Henry Barber. A. C. Aiken, general merchant, Cornwall, has assigned. J. L. Drainie, hardware, Fergus, has sold out to Nichols & Co. Mitchell & Smellie, grocers, Fergus, have dissolved. Henry Mitchell continues. F. G. McCracken, wholesale cigars and smallwares, Harriston, has assigned to A. R. McCallum. David Anderson, banker, Hastings, is dead. C. Fraser & Son, general merchants, Pembroke, are offering 40 cents on the dollar. R. S. Robinson, boots and shoes, Stratford, has assigned to C. B. Armstrong. John Gilmore, furniture, St. Catharines, is offering 50 cents cash on the dollar. E. S. Hubbell, hardware, Thamesville, has been succeeded by Hambly & Hodgson.

KILLED BY A TREE.

The Violent Death of Robert Moncrief of North Monaghan.

The mangled remains of Robert Moncrief, 27 years of age, were brought into town on Saturday morning and will be interred today.

Moncrief was almost instantly killed by a falling tree at Apsley on Friday, while he and his brother were cutting timber. The awful accident occurred in this way. A large tree had been cut and in falling had caught in another tree. It was decided to cut this one also. After chopping until the tree began to fall, the deceased stepped aside to watch the direction it was coming. The first tree relieved of its support swerved to one side and in falling was swerved again by glancing against another tree. Before Moncrief could get out of the way he was struck square on the head and knocked to the ground.

He was picked up in an unconscious condition, placed in a sleigh and taken to Lakefield where Dr. Fraser was summoned. Before he arrived the victim of the accident passed away.

Deceased resided with his mother and two brothers on the Howden farm just outside the town limits.

PETERBOROUGH WON.

Peterborough Hockeyists Vanquish the Kingston's by a Score of 8 to 7.

The Peterborough hockey team went to Kingston on Saturday and defeated the crack team of Eastern Ontario, the Kingstons. When the news flashed over the wires late on Saturday night and was bulletined at the telegraph offices, everybody felt like shouting, for the citizens generally feel a justifiable pride in the Peterboroughs, who so far have represented the town in a highly creditable manner, until now it bears the enviable distinction of possessing the best hockey aggregation in Ontario.

The Kingston team is a strong one individually and as a team. The Peterboroughs realized that the game would be the hardest in the series and their adversaries the strongest. But the boys went to the fray determined to put up a strong and good game and they did it. The match was hotly contested from start to finish as is evidenced by the fact that only 15 goals were scored. In the first half the Peterboroughs scored five to their opponents three. In the second half Kingston scored four times and Peterborough three. The game was won by good playing and superior combination work.

The boys left here on Saturday afternoon at 1.40. About 75 of their friends went with them. It is safe to say that the Peterborough representation in Kingston on Saturday night made Rome howl!

The boys will be home this morning.

INS AND OUTS.

The matter of re-organizing the police force simply resolves itself down to this: Is there any need of keeping four men to do the police work of this town? We do not think so. One man to act as chief and one as an assistant can cover the ground, do all the work, and maintain order, enforce the laws and do it just as efficiently if not better, than the present force which costs the town $2 600 annually. Night watchman Gordon maintains a vigilant watch at night, and the ground he covers is recovered by the night officer of the force. The latter simply dogs the former, following almost in his foot tracks. One man is all that is necessary. The other night officer sets in the station ready to answer the telephone. At the same time there are two paid firemen removed only by a thin wall from the station room. One of these men could answer telephone calls and notify the chief if necessary of any serious disturbance or brawl which the nightwatchman could not suppress lone-handed. There would be as many men then to stop a disturbance as there are now. The cost of present police maintenance can be cut down nearly one-half without impairing the efficiency of the department. It isn't a question of sentiment but of economy. Two men can do the work. Four men have a snap, and the ratepayers pay for it. If this isn't so where does the chief find time to go hunting around the country after county prisoners. Is he getting a side rake-off from the county!

⁂

No law-abiding citizen objects to the enforcing of the law, but there are different ways of doing it, and therein may a man have objections and still be a law-abiding citizen and a respector of the law. And therein lies the greatest objection to the present head of the police force and some of his subordinates. A man who will close his eyes to a case of gross and open adultery, which recently existed in this town, and then break into the private living rooms of a business man on a Sunday afternoon in search of liquor, has but a faint conception of his duty. Presuming for the sake of comparison that the latter had liquor on his premises, which was the greatest offense? The one a grossly depraved case and an open disgrace to society and public morals, and the other a violation and misdemeanor but hardly a crime. Yet, in the discriminating judgment of the chief of police, the first case was a trifling affair, and the second a monstrous crime. Is a man who discriminates in this wise capable of that efficiency expected of the head of the police force? The citizens want to see the law enforced and so does THE TIMES. When it is properly enforced and less personal spite vented, and less meddling and sneak work done, the police force will be efficient. But the present force has had five years to show some evidence of efficiency. Each year it has become worse, and it is time to call a halt. Any man who has done so little for his five years' pay as the chief, has little claim upon the consideration of the ratepayers. It isn't a question of sentiment but of efficiency.

⁂

There is a class of men in every community who like nothing better than to work up sympathy. If an old tree is to be cut down to make way for a magnificent edifice that will be a credit to the town, they will whine and talk in mournful tones and write letters to the papers and raise a great hullabaloo. If an old fire horse dies they will actually shed tears and pronounce for a public funeral and a procession headed by the Mayor and the band playing on muffled drums. If the old town pump, full of worms and microbes, is to be replaced by a modern drinking fountain they find fresh cause for an ebullition of sympathy and will grow so maudlin that one would think their hearts to be as soft as their heads. There is a certain number of men of this calibre who are exciting sympathy for the chief. It's a shame, they say, to cut him off from a living. Is it right, they ask in indignant tones, is it just? This talk of right and justice is all rot; pure bosh. What right has the chief to the sympathy of the ratepayers. Is he here because he loves them, or the town? He is here for the stuff, and he has been getting it for five years and more. In that time has he expended one dollar of it in land or buildings in this town? What does he care for the town? If he got the offer of a position elsewhere at an increase of salary, would he consider that Peterborough had kept him for five years? No. He would light out for that job so fast that a cup of coffee could ride on his coat-tails without spilling. Certainly, that's every man's privilege; but why talk of sympathy. It isn't a case of sympathy, or of sentiment, but of efficiency, economy and retrenchment.

Sir James T. S. Richardson, secretary of the Order of the Thistle, is dead at London.

COLLECTED THE DEBT.

Charles Stevens Pursued by Peterborough's High County Constable.

High Constable Cochrane, of Peterborough, came to Toronto this morning and had Charles Stevens, a printer in the Yonge street Arcade building arrested on a warrant of commitment for $21. He was convicted in October last of ill treating a horse, for which he was fined $5 and costs.

Stevens paid the money and was allowed to go free. He is the young man whose escapades with his sister-in-law, Louise Goodwyn, at Peterborough, recently created a big sensation.—Toronto News.

TURNBULL'S

DURING THE LAST FEW WEEKS
Fresh Spring Goods

Have been coming to us from all quarters, and we are busy opening them up and placing them on exhibition. This week we show a window of English Prints at 7c a yard, in neat patterns, every piece having the stamp of freshness about it. Also quantities of Prints with turkey red grounds in black spots and flowers, cardinal ground and white flowers, also heavy drillettes with cardinal stripes, flowers and spots. Neat patterns in lilacs and the old reliable madder browns in light and dark shades. Duck Suitings a new feature in Dress Goods last year, are this year shown in great variety. Call and see our stock in plain and fancy stripes, spots, etc.

GRAY AND WHITE COTTONS

We believe, have reached Rock Bottom Prices. Just received an immense stock, special value. No old goods in this department. See our 8x4 Grey Sheeting at 15c, New patterns in Crettones and Tickings, are very choice. In our stock will be found all the desirable patterns.

We have received an immense range of

TWEEDS AND COTTONADES

Our Tweeds for boys are exceptionally good value. You will be surprised to see the goods we can give you for 35c. and 40c. Just received a consignment of American Chenille Curtains and Table Covers in in all the new colorings.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

TRAGIC END OF A WELL-KNOWN DOCTOR IN CHICAGO.

Wreck of a Santa Fe Train—Riot in a Mining Town—A Steamer Eleven Days Over-due—Families in Distress.

Special to the Times.

GUTHRIE, O. K., Feb. 18.—Through the misunderstanding of orders the south bound Galveston express on the Atcheson, Topeka and Santa Fe railway, heavily loaded with excursionists, and a north bound live stock extra collided at 11.45 last night, when rounding a curve five miles south of Guthrie. One man was killed, two fatally injured, and eighteen received serious wounds. The stock train had orders to stop at Sewards, three miles south of the wreck, to allow the passenger train to pass, and it probably will never be known why the orders were not obeyed, as buried under the engine and crushed to death was the freight engineer, Charles Upletty. Many passengers were badly bruised and cut by broken glass, but none fatally injured. The injured were brought to this city. Seventy head of cattle were killed. The loss to the company will exceed $50,000.

A DOCTOR'S SAD END.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Dr. Godfrey Dyas was picked up at the 69th street and Lake Shore tracks this evening in a dying state and died after being taken to his residence. When found his skull was fractured and his left hand cut off. It is thought the doctor was struck by a train. The deceased was one of the foremost practitioners in the west.

RIOT IN PENNSYLVANIA.

WILKESBARRE, Feb. 18.—The mining village of Midville was the scene of a riot last night. Saturday was pay day and the Hungarians, Slavs and Poles drank freely. During the night the Slavs and Poles engaged in a pitched battle.

SMALLPOX PLAGUES.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 18.—Two cases of smallpox were found today, one of them in the city gaol and one in the work house. The Madison race track managers have arranged with the Illinois Health Board to resume the racing. This causes much indignation here, as the race track is charged with the spread of the disease.

TRAIN WRECKED.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 18.—A passenger train on the Santa Fe Railroad was wrecked near Pittsburg, Kas., last night and eight passengers were injured. The wreck occurred at a crossing of the Missouri Pacific, and was caused by a mistake in signals.

STARVING FAMILIES.

HENNESSY, Ok., Feb. 18.—An appeal for aid has been issued by settlers in this strip. Hundreds of families are starving and cattle have been dying in droves owing to the severe weather.

GONE TO THE BOTTOM.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The steamer City St. Augustine, which sailed from Jacksonville on February 2, for this port, is now 11 days overdue, and there is very little chance of her ever being heard from again. The ship Constance, which arrived from Dunkirk, reports that on February 11 she passed through large quantities of new pitch-pine lumber, railway ties and square timber, covering the surface of the sea for miles. The fact that the City of St. Augustine's cargo was identical with the material reported afloat goes far to strengthen the theory that the missing steamer has foundered.

BIG STRIKE PROBABLE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Another strike is expected to take place, when some 1200 electrical workers stop work. The men are members of the K. of L. They demand that eight hours shall constitute a day's work instead of 9, as heretofore, but all other trades as well, if the bosses try to fill the places of the electrical workers with non union men. The Central Labor Union at a meeting today agreed to call every mechanic union in the building trades if necessary.

MAY MARRY MARLBOROUGH.

Said Miss Vanderbilt Will be His Bride.

Special to The Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—A London special to the World says: The report is revived in London society that a marriage is in course of arrangement between Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt and the young Duke of Marlborough. This union was first mooted last summer, when the Duke paid several visits to Mrs. Vanderbilt's residence at Marlow-on-Thames. But it was subsequently said he was paying attention to Miss Darcy, the daughter of an Australian millionaire, the proprietor of the Mount Norman gold mine. Miss Darcy is now engaged to marry an officer of the Guards, and it is stated negotiations are proceeding for a settlement for a Marlborough-Vanderbilt marriage.

It is quite generally recognized that the Duke must marry money if he is to keep up Blenheim. His income is only £8,000 and Blenheim costs £14,000 a year.

ELBE'S MAIL MATTER.

Some of it Picked Up on the Beach Near Deal.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The Lloyds signal station at Deal reports that forty six stamped letters, addressed to places in and around New York, were picked up on Deal beech, near Sandown Castle, last evening. There were not damaged in the slightest degree, and were all handed over to the post office authorities. One of the Elbe's life buoys was picked up shortly afterwards.

COLD BENUMBS THE TROUT.

Truthful North Carolinians Pick Out Big Fish by the Thousand.

Special to the Times.

POLLOCKSVILLE, N.C., February 18.—The excessive cold weather has benumbed the trout in the New River. Countless numbers of the fish can be seen floating on top of the water, and people are picking them up in large quantities. One party secured 1,000 to day, and there were 130 barrels shipped by express for Jacksonville, some of them weighing forty pounds.

BUFFALO BLAZE.

Music Hall and Other Costly Buildings Destroyed.

Special to the Times.

BUFFALO, Feb. 18.—It looks at this moment as if a music hall would be destroyed. The building cost $300,000 and was erected on the site of the old Music Hall, which was burned, together with St. Louis Church, twelve years ago. The library and societies rooms of German societies already have been destroyed.

SHOT AN ACTRESS.

Miss Madge Yorke, of the Baggage Check Company, Refused to Kiss Her Lover and He Instantly Shot Her Dead.

Special to the Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18.—Madge Yorke, aged 22 years, a member of Chas. E. Blaney's "Baggage Check" Company, was shot and almost instantly killed in a room at Zeiss' hotel this evening, by Jas. B. Gentry, an actor. After doing the shooting Gentry escaped and has not yet been arrested. Gentry is said to have been engaged to be married to Miss Yorke and it is supposed jealousy was the motive for the crime. Miss Yorke filled one of the minor singing parts in the "Baggage Check" Company, and was a member at one time of the Marie Tempest Co., and the Casino Opera Co. Gentry is a comedian, but at present he has no employment.

Later—It was learned from members of the company that Gentry had been attentive to Miss Yorke, and that they had not seen each other for the past five weeks. They probably had an appointment to meet each other in New York, as the girl went there yesterday morning, but for some reason she did not see Gentry. Miss Clark, who was in the room when the shooting occurred, says Gentry said: "Why didn't you meet me in New York as you promised?"

Miss Yorke replied: "I did keep my appointment with you." Gentry then said: "Madge, won't you kiss me?" and the girl replied: "No, not till you have given me an explanation of your conduct." These were the last words spoken before Gentry drew a revolver and shot and killed the girl. It is said that Gentry must have come to this city with the idea of murder, as he was not in the habit of carrying a revolver.

A ROW IN THE CABINET.

CABINET MINISTERS QUARRELLED AT SATURDAY'S MEETING.

Hon. J. C. Patterson Left the Meeting and it is Rumored That He Will Resign Did They Talk of Dissolution.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 18.—Politicians are hardly yet reconciled to their disappointment at the failure of council to announce the date of dissolution.

Premier Bowell drove down to Rideau Hall this morning and had an interview with the Governor-General. The approaching dissolution was, it is understood, the subject of the interview.

It has leaked out that there was a row in council during Saturday's sitting over the Manitoba school question. So excited were some of the ministers that two of them continued their controversy outside in the corridor.

Hon. J. C. Patterson left the council altogether and it is reported that he intends to resign.

SKULL FELL TO PIECES.

RESULT OF THE POST MORTEM ON WELL'S REMAINS.

A Check of $5,000 Sent to Defray the Expenses of Hyams Bros' Defense—Two Private Detectives in Their Aid.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 18.—It is rumored that a check for $5,000 has been received by the counsel for the defense of the Hyams brothers and that two of the most skilful private detectives in the United States are on their way to this city to assist in getting the defence ready for the trial.

The money, it is reported, was sent by a party in the Southern States, but who that party is has not been ascertained.

Barrister Murdoch said that he could not say whether or not the report was correct as he had not seen Mr. Horne, the Hyams' solicitor, but it was possible that the rumor was not all fiction.

At the post mortem examination on Saturday the defence succeeded in having their case looked after by Doctors Teskey and Spencer.

HIS SKULL IN FRAGMENTS.

At the post mortem at the Morgue on Saturday afternoon on the body of W. C. Wells, the interests of the defence were watched by Barrister W. G. Murdoch and Drs. Luke Teskey and Bertram Spencer. County Crown Attorney Curry, Undertaker B. D. Humphrey and Mr. E. A. Aylesworth were present when Drs. Caven and Johnson began the examination.

The lid was removed from the shell, and the casket was taken out and placed on the slab. In order not to disturb the remains, the casket was broken away piece by piece, until the body was finally exposed. It was the head in which the interest centered, and it was easily noticeable that both sides of it were compressed, as though it had been subjected to heavy pressure. The head was taken and placed on another slab, and the doctors proceeded to cleanse the bones, but the skull fell apart in their hands. Two of the pieces were almost as large as a hand and half a dozen fragments. The pieces were cleaned separately, and Dr. John Caven sealed them up in a box, and carried them away with him. The body was carefully examined, but none of its bones were broken and no indications of organic disease or poison were discovered.

A SECOND BURIAL.

Yesterday the remains of the trunk were placed in a new casket. They will be kept here in the city until after the trial, when the skull will be replaced and the remains will be taken back and interred in their former resting place in the cemetery, near Oshawa.

Photographs and plans of the Colborne street warehouse, where Wells met his death, are being prepared for presentation to the jury as Crown evidence. The hoist weight that Hyams claimed fell upon Wells has been taken to Police Headquarters, hook, rope and all. The police also have a chisel, which was picked up in the warehouse cellar shortly after the tragedy.

Denounced by the Catholic Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—The Emperor roused the ire of Roman Catholics by singling out Count Hoensbroech for a long conversation at last week's court ball. Hoensbroech deserted the Jesuits and published pamphlets against it, joining the Evangelical church and ever since has been denounced bitterly by the whole Catholic press.

THE TOTTENHAM MURDER.

FULL PARTICULARS OF THE COLD-BLOODED MURDER.

Newbury Was Doubtless Insane—His Niece Tells of the Attempt on Her Life—An Inquest to Be Held.

Special to the Times.

TOTTENHAM, Feb. 18.—The circumstances of the terrible murder and suicide which occurred here on Saturday are as follows: Mrs. Newbury was preparing some garments for her niece and went upstairs for the key of the linen drawer, in which a revolver was also kept. Missing the key from its accustomed place she suspected her husband of having it and asked him for it. He refused to give it up and told her to use another one. He left the room, passed through the kitchen and went out to the stable. His wife and niece followed him as far as the kitchen. The former then turned back and went upstairs and the niece returned to the sitting-room.

MURDER OF THE WIFE.

Newbury came back almost at once and followed his wife upstairs, which he climbed in a noiseless manner, for the little girl heard nothing, and from the position of his wife's body and of the bullet wound it was evident her back was turned towards him. He crept up probably close behind and discharged the revolver direct at her head. The bullet entered the back of her head and lodged in the brain. It must have killed her instantly, as she was found on her knees with her hand in the linen drawer.

SHOT THE NEICE.

The neice, Annie Martin, ran to the stairs as she heard the report and meeting her uncle asked what the noise was. He said nothing but swung his hand round from behind his back and pointed the weapon at her. Crying "Don't shoot me, uncle!" she ran out into the yard and hid behind a hen house, where he came up to within a few feet and fired at her face. The bullet struck her in the lower jaw below the nose and lodged in the palate. He evidently thought he had killed her for he returned to the house. The child ran towards the street as soon as she saw her uncle enter the house and on the way heard two reports.

NEIGHBORS ON THE SCENE.

By this time her screams and the noise attracted the attention of the neighbors and Mrs. Adams, who lives a short distance off, was the first to arrive. Annie Martin told her story and Mrs. Adams took the young girl to her home.

Some men arrived at the house and in the parlor found lying on his back near the door the body of Robert Newbury. The blood was pouring from a bullet wound in his forehead, and there were no signs of life. Upstairs the searchers found the body of Mrs. Newbury in the position described.

AN INQUEST OPENED.

Coroner Law empannelled a jury, before which Miss Jennie Wilson gave her evidence. She lives next door and saw Newbury chase his neice, but did not imagine anything wrong until she heard the shot. She saw him return to the house and heard two more shots, one of which must have missed aim, as only one bullet was found in his body. The inquest was then adjourned until tomorrow morning.

DEED OF AN INSANE MAN.

It is admitted that the deed was that of an insane man, and that there is hereditary insanity is proved by the history of the family, his father having died in an insane asylum at Armagh, while his mother died in the lunatic asylum in Hamilton.

Newbury emigrated from Ireland and settled in Massachusetts, where he married, but whom it is not known. His wife died and he married a Miss Betty Hall, with whom he came to Canada 35 years ago and settled on a farm at Pennville, five miles from Tottenham. His wife died in 1879 and five weeks after he married Mrs. Ann Eliza Jones, daughter of Wm. Martin. The marriage was peculiar, as it was not certain that Mrs. Jones' husband was dead, in fact he was believed to be alive. He was a herbalist who a few months before marriage of Newbury, to Mrs. Jones had gone to gather roots in the forest.

He never returned, but was reported to have been seen on Manitoulin Island. Four years ago, things having prospered with the Newburys, they sold the farm and returned to Tottenham. They were worth about $8,000, all of which was in the wife's name.

AN ATTACK OF INSANITY BEFORE.

About eight years ago Newbury had a violent attack of insanity, which disappeared in a few weeks, but since then he has been very peculiar. He said at times that his wife was going to poison him or shut him in an asylum, and he was troubled about the disposition of her money. For the past few weeks he had eaten very little and brooded constantly.

The funeral will take place tomorrow to the Presbyterian cemetery.

HANGED WITH A ROPE.

A HAMILTON HOTEL MAN TAKES HIS OWN LIFE.

His Wife's First Husband Who was Supposed to be Dead Came Upon the Scene, and the Shock Evidently Turned His Brain.

Special to the Times.

HAMILTON, Feb. 18.—Henry Geiger, a German who for many years kept a quiet hotel at King and Queen streets, was found this morning hanging by a rope from the top round of a ladder leading to the loft in his barn. He left a short note in German saying that he was tired of life, and that business and other troubles had led him to determine on suicide.

Recently Geiger lost considerable money by backing a note for a friend. Two months ago he separated from his second wife, whom he had supposed was a widow before he married her, but about a year ago the husband returned after being thought dead for many years.

Geiger was 65 years old and left a grown-up family. No inquest will be held.

CHILDREN'S HOME BURNED.

But the Little Ones Were Drilled and Escaped.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The Westchester Temporary Home for Indigent Children, in North street, a mile east of White Plains, was burned to the ground last night. The building contained two hundred children, ranging in age from one to fifteen years. So well had the children been drilled in the case of fire, that not one life was lost nor a single person injured.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 19, 1895.

Good morning!

If China does not make peace before long, Japan will make pieces of her.

The strongest test of the stability of the Salvation Army is to come. Can it stand prosperity?

If the Japs would consent to go back to first principles and fight with bows and arrows, the Chinese are inclined to think that they might stand some chance of whipping them.

Li Hung Chang is being congratulated right and left because his yellow jacket and his three-eyed peacock's feather have been restored to him, and they say the man is as happy as a laughing jackass over the unexpected turn of affairs. Life without yellow jackets and peacock's feathers is as sad and solemn as the Dead March in Saul

French Canadians continue to return home from the United States, and others are making a new emigration from the United Statee to parts of Canada a long way from their native provinces. The net result of the backward flow of Canadians last summer and fall was a probable net loss to New England of some 40,000 or so of this class of its population. Many Canadians also have left copper mining districts of Michigan to take up homesteads in the Nipissing country. There are something like 600 families in this party under the leadership of a Roman Catholic priest, whose purpose is to form a Roman Catholic French Canadian colony.

The Australian colonies are making wonderful stides in the development of the export of dairy produce. For some time they have regarded Canada's pre-eminent position in the cheese trade with a certain amount of envy, and it is an open secret that they mean to endeavor to get a share of the trade which they are also trying to do in the case of live cattle. Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, although it may not always be palatable, and this will probably be the feeling of Canada in reference to the announcement that about a ton of cheese has been made at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College in New South Wales on the Canadian cheddar system with the object of sending it to England to test the market. Specimens of the cheese are to be sent to the Government analyst of the Agriculture Department before shipping in order that they may be compared with cheese of Canadian manufacture.

The announcement recently made of a German method of producing glass which will transmit light freely, but not heat, is founded upon the following statement of details, presumably from the source of operations:—A plate of this material, four-tenths of an inch thick, containing 2.8 per cent. of iron in the form described as ferrous chloride, allowing only 4 06 per cent, of radient heat to pass through it, while another plate of equal thickness and containing quite as much iron as ferric chloride, permitting 11.2 to pass. The chemical diffinction is exceedingly small, but the effect is very marked. Using oxide instead of chloride, and again having it in a ferrous condition, one per cent. produced a glass having a very faint blue tinge, but even more impervious to heat than the other sample. A layer 332 inch in thickness allowed only 0 4 per cent. of the heat from a bat's-wing gas flame to pass through, 0 72 of that from an argand burner, and 0 73 of the heat from a lime light; but it would transmit twelve per cent. of heath from sunlight, ordinary window glass, on the other hand, letting some eighty-six per cent. through.

TOO MANY MONGOOSES.

The man who imported rabbits into Australia because he wanted something near him to remind him of old England made a grand mistake. So did the man who carelessly imported the gypsy moth into Massachusetts. So did the man who imported the mongoose into Jamaica. The mongoose comes from the East Indies, and it is an animal not unlike the ferret. It was introduced into Jamaica about twenty years ago by a sugar planter for the purpose of destroying rats that did great damage to the sugar cane. The experiment at first seemed so advantageous that quite a number of these animals were introduced, with the result of greatly lessening the damage to the sugar plants by the rats. But in the process of time the mongoose increased and spread all over the island, with the result that nearly all the ground birds, as well as snakes, toads and insect-destroying birds have been exterminated. This has lead to a tremendous increase in grass lice, beetles, flies and destructive insects of all kinds. Ticks have spread themselves allover the island, so that the horses are frequently killed as the resuly of their attacks, and the local government is, therefore, earnestly desirous of finding some means of exterminating the mongoose. Curiously enough the rats have adopted themselves to new conditions, and instead of building their nests in the ground, as they formerly did, now build them in banana and cocoanut trees, so as to get out of reach of the mongoose, while the latter, not finding its own food, has begun to attack farm yard fowls and even young pigs, lambs, calves and other defenseless animals.

All of which show that there may be worse things than rats.

THE WINTER WEATER.

The present month, February, in the year 1895, is likely to go on record as one of the coldest in the north temperature zone for many years. In North America a very frigid wave has been followed by another of much greater severity. Low temperature has prevailed to the far southern portion of the United States to an extent unprecedented within the memory of the oldest inhabitants. In Arkansas the thermometer actually dropped below zero point. A heavy snow storm then took place as far south as Tampa, Florida. Theorange groves of the latter state, which were badly damaged by a previous cold snap, are now almost irreparably destroyed. Early garden truck in all the states South of Mason and Dixon's line is so badly nipped that the greater portion of it will have to be replanted. In Canada and the so-called northern states, including those as far west as the Rockies, there has been a series of cold snaps and heavy blizzards, whose extent and parlyzing effect have been phenomenal. There has been a complete interruption of railway traffic in many portions of the country. Cities, towns have been overwhelmed by snow, and in Montreal some three thousand men have been employed clearing away the streets; and in some cities there has been an unusually large loss of life from freezing. Taking our own district, and all over Western Ontario, the roads have been completely blocked, and on the Proof Line road this week 100 men have been employed cleaning away the drifts. In some of the back roads the way will not be passable until a general thaw sets in. The damaging effect of the storm in Ontario is as great as any on record, if greater. So far as the railways have been concerned, they appear to have been in a worse shape even than they were during the famous storm of March, 1888.

At one point in this Province, White River, a spirit thermometer fell to 60 degrees below zero, and in this city the thermometer recorded 25 degrees below zero. In Europe the cold snap has been far-reaching. A temperature of six degrees below zero was reached in the Midland Counties of England, which is the coldest weather experienced there in 60 years. Railways in Wales, and even Ireland, have been blocked by snow. In Austria birds have been frozen on the trees. In some portions of Italy there are three or four feet of snow on the lowlands, while the seaport of Ancona is actually frozen over.

BENSFORT.

The weather is so moderated as to permit farmers of this vicinity to engage in the construction of an approach to the new bridge. The work commenced on Monday last, and the men are making very good progress. Mr. Joseph Wood, the foreman, is sparing no pains to make this work a success. Each man speaks in glowing terms of Mr. Wood's ability to perform his duty efficiently.

A merry party from Peterborough and adjoining districts drove out to the residence of Mr. P. Powers. Although the weather was intensely cold and the road difficult one to find, they succeeded in reaching their destination about ten o'clock, and the hospitality of Mr. Powers made them forget that the night had been so cold.

A successful entertainment in connection with the Bensfort Sunday school was held in the Methodist Church on Friday night.

Miss Payne, of Warsaw, who has been on an extended visit to Mr. John Fletcher's, intends returning home soon.

Miss. Hamilton is visiting at Mr. J. Woods.

Miss McAllister is visiting friends in Otonabee.

A great many of the fair sex mourns the departure of their friend, Jack, he having gone to reside in Otonabee; but we earnestly hope that their loss will prove his gain.

THE AREA OF CANADA.

SOMETHING ALSO OF HER MINERAL AND OTHER RESOURCES.

Sir William Dawson Outlines the Nature of the Geological Products and the Agricultural Capabilities of the Dominion.

Sir William Dawson is the chief Canadian authority on the geology of this country and kindred subjects, and the Somerville course of lectures on Canadian matters is one of the most interesting institutions of Montreal. The inaugural lecture of this winter's course was delivered a few days ago by the famous geologist, who discussed Canada's area, mineral resources and other capabilities.

From the appended quotation for Sir William's outline of the course, as printed in the Montreal Witness, some idea may be formed of the rich natural resources of the Dominion:

"Roughly speaking, Canada includes the northern half of North America. Canada extends east and west over 3,400 miles and has an area of 3,000,000 square miles. Its center is very near the line of the Red River and while the greater part of the agricultural land lies west of this and the bulk of the population to the east of it, the western half must in the future assume greater importance. While at present most of the people are settled around the southern margin, there are large areas in the north, aggregating nearly a million square miles, which are not only not inhabited, except by hunters, but are practically unexplored.

"Canada may be divided into six natural divisions: The Maritime Provinces, the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, the great plateau between the great lakes and the Rocky Mountains; British Columbia, the great North and Newfoundland. As the second lecture is to be on the mining resources of Canada, we find in the maritime district a large coal area Then in the western plateau another series of extensive coal deposits are found, besides those of British Columbia, where every variety is found from brown coal, which is little more than hardened peat, to the finest kind of anthracite. It is estimated that the total area of coal land in Canada is about 97,000 square miles. The total annual output does not exceed 4,000,000 tons, an amount which the little island of Cape Breton could supply for an indefinite period. Newfoundland has also its area of coal which are of a special value with reference to the future command of the navigation of the North Atlantic.

"The next subject of the course refers to agricultural products. The results of the researches carried on at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa show that, compared with the land under cultivation, our agricultural resources are yet in infancy. The remarkable development which in a few years certain departments of agriculture have shown indicate what can be done. In 1893 Canada exported 134,000,000 pounds of cheese, besides $7,500,000 worth of cattle. We need not fear should our staple of wheat fall off. One lecture will be devoted to the consideration of the wheat question. It should be borne in mind that the cultivation of wheat rapidly exhausts the soil, while dairy products merely deplete the land of very little of its phosphates, which are easily replaced.

"The fifth lecture deals with the forests, which are, under present management, in a critical condition. Canada still has more timber than any other country in the world, but for that reason we ought to be careful not to give away too much or waste it at home. The time has come for scientific forestry, and proper attention to these matters might enable us to supply the world for centuries, besides leaving an abundance for ourselves. Our present export of $26,000,000 worth, and much more, might be obtained from the natural increase of our forests. We have still a million acres of forest land in the North outside the boundaries of the Provinces.

"Of our native animals we have taken little thought, except how to kill and destroy them. The bison in the West and the eider down in the East furnish lamentable examples of this wasteful destruction. But we have still abundance of fur-bearing animals which, should they be properly cared for, will continue to supply the world for years to come. The last of the lectures will deal with the fisheries. Ours are the most extensive in the world, yielding more than $20,000,000. It is well that the Government is waking up to their improvement. We should, however, have our shore fisheries to ourselves, and it is quite as criminal for foreign poachers to make inroads on these preserves as it would be on our cultivated fields. To round out our fishing resources and enable us properly to protect them, Newfoundland should join us and France should be removed from her shores and from those little islands which by their smuggling proclivities are demoralizing the people of the Lower St. Lawrence. To complete the Dominion we should induce our generous neighbors to the south to hand over to us their not very profitable territory of Alaska, with its dependent islands, which their benevolent regard of the fur seal makes so costly to them. We could protect the seals less expensively and more effectively and sell them the fur cheaper than they can produce it themselves."

IN MONTHS OF DARKNESS.

The Dreary Life of Explorers Who Visit the Arctic Regions.

A wild goose chase after the north pole surely seems, on the very face, to be a fool's errand. Perhaps it is, for I doubt if any very startling fact will be added to science, even if the north pole is indeed reached. Of course there is or would be a huge amount of satisfaction and glory to have been the discoverer of the pole, but whether science will be enriched thereby or simply satisfied with the fact of our having "got there all the same" is an open question.

The life led by explorers in these dreary regions, especially during the long winter's night, is so intensely monotonous as to scarcely warrant description, and yet no better idea of the hardships, sufferings and misery endured for the sake of science can be gained, than by a glimpse of the daily life of the arctic traveler.

I chanced to be one of the members of a recent expedition and was in charge of the winter quarters at the northernmost portion of Nova Zembla, or Novia Zemlia, as the islands are called by the natives.

Imagine a night that settles down like a pall and an interminable darkness that is only relieved by dull gray twilight for a few hours out of the 24; then, added to this, a thermometer so far down below zero that the mercury often freezes, miserable quarters, poor food, and the monotonous existence, and you will scarcely wonder why so many intrepid investigators have given up the unequal battle and laid down to perish in the darkness of hopeless despair. You will also scarcely wonder that the most ardent enthusiasm is likely to be considerably cooled, morally as well as physically, under the circumstances.

What matters it if the whole world is watching the outcome of your investigations with keenest interest when you are so far removed from earthly comforts and earthly aid?

And yet, in spite of all the bitter knowledge gained by the hardest kind of experience, the same explorers will attempt expedition after expedition.

I may woefully lack the proper enthusiasm, yet I cannot but admit that even the delightful prospect of discovering dozens of north poles would not tempt me to again undergo the hardships of that arctic night, even the memory of which I would gladly dispel as a fearful dream.—Home and Country.

TWO ABSENTMINDED INDIVIDUALS.

One Forgot His Invitation, and the Other Forgot His Wife.

An absentminded person can spread chaos all around, but when two absentminded people try to work together may heaven help the poor creatures upon whom the consequences fall. A prominent lawyer from an inland city met in London a distinguished British author, whom he invited to visit him during a tour of America, already planned. The lawyer came back home and shortly forgot all about his English friend and his own invitation, but was reminded of both, in good time, by a letter announcing the date of the celebrated Briton's arrival. This, too, he forgot in a few minutes, and when the appointed day came it found him living in a shut up house, getting his meals where he could, while his wife made an extended round of visits among her relatives.

When the distinguished visitor drove up to the house on the evening of the day set in his letter, he met a single servant, who explained that the master was at a club meeting, over two miles away, and would be back about midnight. Sending his wife, who was tired and ill, back to the railway station, the Englishman started in pursuit of his delinquent host. The latter was found with a company of pleasant people, to whom the great author was promptly introduced, and the two absentminded friends finished up the evening at the club meeting, forgetting all about their lack of suitable quarters for the night and poor Mrs. Distinguished Author sitting in the railway station.

When the meeting broke up in the small hours, they recalled these awkward circumstances and rescued the weary woman, whose comments upon the situation did not reach me. Then they drove to the home of one of the lawyer's relatives, who kindly got them all to bed before dawn.—Kate Field's Washington.

The Tongue.

The perfectly healthy tongue is clean, moist, lies loosely in the mouth, is round at the edge and has no prominent papillæ. The tongue may be furred from local causes or from sympathy with the stomach, intestines or liver.

The dry tongue occurs most frequently in fever and indicates a nervous prostration or depression. A white tongue is diagnostic simply of the feverish condition, with perhaps a disordered stomach When it is moist and yellowish brown, it shows disordered digestion. Dry and brown indicates a low state of the system. When the tongue is dry and red and smooth, look out for inflammation, gastric or intestinal. When the papillæ on the end of the tongue are raised and very red, we call it a strawberry tongue, and that may mean scarlet fever. A sharp, pointed red tongue will point to brain irritation or inflammation, and a yellow coating indicates liver derangement.—Family Herald

Why She Never Married.

When a man tempts fate by reminding a spinster of her condition, his punishment is generally swift and sure. In a county of Ireland where the Quakers were numerous the entire body on one occasion gathered together for one of their quarterly meetings.

After the exercises of the morning a public luncheon was held, at which all the Friends attended. The conversation turned to matrimony.

"Bridget," said an unmannerly youthful member of the society, speaking across the crowded table to a prim, elderly maiden lady, "wilt thou tell me why thou hast never married?"

"Certainly, Friend William," responded the ready Bridget in a voice audible over the room. "'Tis because I am not so aisy pleased as thy wife was."—London Tit-Bits.

The Edible Birds' Nest.

In the Andaman islands the principal industry is that of collecting, cleaning and preparing edible birds' nests for shipment. The species of bird which builds this queer nest arrives in the islands about the 1st of December and immediately commences to build its nest, which is constructed almost wholly of a gelatinous substance, which is a secretion from the salivary glands of the bird's mouth. The finest quality of these edible nests resembles pure isinglass. They are worth their weight in silver in many countries of the orient, especially in China, Borneo, Korea and Siam. They are usually built in caves and clefts along the coast, but are frequently found in trees.—St. Louis Republic.

THE LILY AND THE POET.

A lily on the highroad lay
Beneath the fierce and scorching ray
  Of midday summer sun.
It chanced a poet, passing by,
Upon the lily cast his eye;
  His sympathy it won.

"Poor little flower," he, pitying, said,
"Who left thee thus with drooping head
  Beneath a burning sky?
Ah, me! It was a thoughtless deed
To cast thee forth, like common weed,
  To wither and to die—

"Away from cool and grateful shade
Of garden bed or mossy glade,
  Where erstwhile thou didst bloom.
My heart with pity bleeds for thee,
Thus treated so despitefully

"The lily is the spotless flower,
The emblem of the priceless dower
  Of purity of heart.
King Solomon, in all his power,
Was not arrayed like thee, sweet flower,
  Thou work of nature's art.

"I cannot leave thee in thy need,
Amidst the dust to pant and bleed;
  I cannot leave thee so.
Close by there lies a lovely mere,
Whose sparkling waters, bright and clear,
  O'er waterlilies flow.

"Upon its cool, refreshing breast
I'll lay thee gently down to rest
  And banish all thy pain.
The water sprites will change thy shape,
And as a 'lily of the lake'
  Thou yet shalt bloom again."

—C. M. A. in Academy

THE PORTRAIT.

Oliver Ormand, A. R. A., entered the big studio adjoining his house before 10 o'clock in the morning. He was more carefully dressed than usual, and his manner was less composed. He dried the brushes which had stood in water all night, mixed some paints and fixed an easel midway in the room. On this he placed a portrait which he critically examined and severely judged, for on no previous work had he brought to bear such force of skill begotten of practice, experiment and labor.

The canvas he surveyed represented a girl not yet in her twentieth year, the curves of whose figure were full, delicate and graceful. From the shapely shoulders rose a firm and rounded throat, on which a small and beautifully shaped head was delicately poised. The face had all the charm and softness, the hope and vivacity of youth; the complexion was dazzlingly fair, the rippling mass of hair red gold, the nose straight, the chin peaked and dimpled, while the lips were small and pouting and the eyes of a grayish green.

The artist looked at it from every point of view, his dark face changing expression continually, and then turned away impatiently, for his work by no means satisfied him. He walked about the studio feverishly, pausing now and then as if to hear a sound he expected, and finally glanced at his watch. It was 20 minutes past the hour, and his sitter had not arrived. He went to a great window which opened to the ground and looked out at the garden.. A flock of sparrows he daily fed were hopping about the grassy lawn, now brightened by the sunshine of this April morning. The spring green of budding shrubs and trees made delicate streaks of color against the red roof of a neighboring studio. At the far end was the tennis court, where he had placed balls and rackets well within view for a purpose of his own.

Suddenly a bell rang loudly. He started and could scarce restrain himself from going forward. He waited, however, for a couple of minutes, when the door of the studio opened and the original of the portrait entered, calmly, deliberately and with a self possessed air, followed by her younger brother, who, when she was not accompanied by her maid, acted as chaperon during her sitting to the artist.

"I hope I'm not late," she said, looking at a little jeweled watch set in a bracelet, and seeing she was half an hour behind the appointed time, "but the morning was so fine Billie and I thought we would walk across the park instead of driving."

"I'm glad you're not later," Oliver Ormand answered, all traces of his impatience vanishing, and only signs of his pleasure at seeing her remaining.

"I told Phillis you'd be waiting," remarked the boy, "but she said it didn't matter."

His sister gave him a glance that might have annihilated one of his sex who had not the privilege of being her brother, but Billie, taking no notice, turned away.

"Nor does it matter," replied Oliver Ormand good humoredly.

Phillis Cromartie took off her gloves, flung aside her cloak and sat down in the armchair placed upon a dias. "I know the position I am to assume by this time," she said in a voice that was clear and sweet if somewhat cold and emphatic.

"I must strive to finish your face today," the artist remarked.

"Then I'm to stare at that plaster cast hand in the corner?"

"If you please; the chin a little higher—thanks."

He set to work, and she began to think. How patient he was, and not in the least cross because she had wasted half an hour of time that was valuable to him. And how glad he felt to have seen her, even though they had met two days before. His eyes had given her a welcome which his lips had not expressed. He loved her, for he had told her so, and she liked him as well as—nay, better than—any other man, but she would not pledge herself to become his wife. Ambitious and energetic, she from an early age had determined to shape her own career and mount the social scale, indifferent to the feelings and careless of the opinions of others. Oliver Ormand was an associate, some time later he might become an academician, and as his wife she would be a person of importance in artistic circles. But there was another sphere in which she wished to reign. The artistic world was well enough in its way, but the aristocratic world was higher. A title carried weight, there was something in nobility that impressed, and she believed herself created to take her place in its ranks.

Nature had favored her with a shapely figure and a beautiful face. She had never experienced difficulty in winning the admiration she desired. Her fortune was large, and her family had been people of gentle birth for generations.

She had the dangerous gift of imagination, which, wedded to ambition, fires the soul with fever. Therefore she had dreamed of being the center and sovereign of a salon where she received royalty, influenced diplomatists, created cabals, overthrew governments and was recognised as a powerful ally and a dangerous foe. The husband whose aspirations she was to stimulate, and whose worship she was to accept, often figured in these dreams as old and imbecile, but of ducal rank and of wealth beyond estimate, for love had little place in her heart, and for domesticity she cared nothing.

Quite recently she had met Lord Edgehill, who would one day inherit his father's

An English Physician from the Tight Little Island

HE IS PLEASED WITH CANADA

Talks About Canadian People.

He Says we have too many Pale and Half-Dead Women

HIS EXPERIENCE WITH PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND.

Thinks it is the Right Medicine for Building Up Weak and Sickly Girls and Women

In the early part of January an English physician of high standing and considerable wealth, visited the principal cities and towns of Canada after a tour in the United States.

He was exceedingly well pleased with what he saw of the Dominion, and spoke in glowing terms of the good nature and hospitality of our people.

When asked what he thought of Canadians from a physiological point of view, he replied :—

"Taken as a whole you have a fine, sturdy population; but there is room for improvement. You have splendid specimens of manhood; your women generally look healthy and vigorous, but you have too many who are pale, listless and half-dead looking, such as I have met in the United States.

"Oh, yes! I know something about Paine's Celery Compound; I have used it occasionally myself, and know of its being used in England. I have recommended it it to pale, weak and rundown women and girls in England, and it has produced very satisfactory and pleasing results. From what I know of the formula of Paine's Celery Compound, I have no hesitation, as a physician, in prescribing it in cases of general debility, dyspepsia, nervous affections, kidney and liver complaints and general weakness.

"Your pale weak and half-dead women and girls have a true life-building agent in Paine's Celery Compound. There is no other preparation I know of that is so well adapted for the troubles of weak females.

"I am pleased to know that Paine's Celery Compound is so popular in your midst; it really deserves every line of praise now received from the public."

HYAMS' MONTREAL SUITS.

A Technical Point Raised by His Montreal Debtors.

Special to the Times.

MONTREAL, Feb. 16.—Harry P. Hyams figured in a case in the Montreal courts yesterday. When in this city he did a large business as a money lender, and before he was arrested he had entered a number of suits against his debtors in the Circuit Court here. Those actions are still on.

Quebec law obliges persons outside the province to furnish security for costs in suits in which they are the plaintiffs. The question thus arises whether Hyams, whose present domicile is in Toronto jail, really lost his domicile in Quebec, because his absence is not voluntary.

Barrister W. S. Walker, counsel for some of the defendants in one of Hyams' moved yesterday that the plaintiff be asked to furnish a security for costs in his suit, he being no longer a resident of the province. The court granted an adjournment to allow Hyams' counsel to file an affidavit declaring he has still a domicile in the province and is not voluntarily absent.

Drs. Caven and Johnson made a postmortem on the exhumed body of Wm. C. Wells this afternoon at the morgue. Dr. Teskey and another medical man were present in the interests of the accused.

High Constable Bissonette, of Montreal, arrived in the city this morning, having with him a warrant for the arrest of Harry Hyams. The charge is forgery, Hyams being said to have altered a note given to him by a citizen of Montreal. The warrant was left in the hands of the Toronto police to await further developments.

CORRUPTION IN GOTHAM.

Ex-Mayor Gilroy and Several Police Officials Have Been Indicted.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The following have been indicted by the special grand jury and the papers are being prepared for submission to the court: Thomas Gilroy, formerly mayor of the city; Thos. F. McAver, police inspector; Alexander S. Williams, police inspector; two police captains, names kept secret.

The indictment against Mr. Gilroy does not relate to any act he committed while mayor of the city but it is based on an allegation of official misconduct at the time he was Commissioner of Public Works.

Everything is Ready.

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—Herman Brenzell, the New York merchant who is prosecuting the man Frederick Tiedemann for robbing him of eight or nine thousand dollars, arrived from New York yesterday with the necessary papers required to effect the prisoner's extradition. The case comes up next Wednesday before Judge McDougall.

Fred Coleman in London.

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 16.—Frederick J. Coleman, of Toronto, whose slick methods of wire pulling and interviewing aldermen in the interests of individuals and corporations seeking favors from the Toronto City Council, were exposed at the boodle investigation, arrived in London today. He refuses absolutely to be interviewed.

Who Are the Heroines?

The great heroines are not always found in books and verses. Many a little woman acting bravely her part, all unknown to the world, is unconsciously perhaps waging and winning a battle against adverse foes, just as though she were a Joan of Arc leading hosts on to victory. The girl who labors in the kitchen in order to support herself and stay the hand of poverty or infamy is acting the part of a heroine. The wife who, with an invalid husband or a trifling husband, sustains herself and little children acts the part of a heroine. The widow who relies on her industry for a livelihood, with orphaned ones to whom she must be both father and mother, acts the part of a heroine. The young girl who braves the fashions of life and attends school in her shabby clothes amid the sneers perhaps of her companions until she has filled her mind with useful knowledge has in her the elements of heroism. The young woman who qualifies herself for business that she may help an aged and afflicted mother, or who prefers to make some money that she can call her own, rather than depend upon a hardworking father for all that she receives, is worthy of being called a heroine. Hundreds of such heroines are to be found in shops and factories, in stores, in kitchens and schools, women who go forth to labor.—New Orleans Picayune.

Ella Wheeler's Double's Troubles.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the poetess of passion, is afflicted with doubles. Likewise some of the doubles are very much afflicted by their resemblance to the poetess. One of them is a young woman who for five years now, wherever she happens to go, no matter in what city and right here in New York, is called Ella Wheeler. Strangely enough, she herself had never met the poetess and finally concluded that a visit to her might relieve her wrath at having always to pose as a double. Before, however, she put her decision into operation she happened to meet Mrs. Wilcox, and in the pauses of the talk explained her tribulations over the resemblance, at the same time trying to find out where the yellow hair and portliness of the poetess could possibly resemble her own brown hair and slight, youthful figure.

Evidently Mrs. Wilcox was as tired of doubles as this double was of being one, for a frown covered her face as she curtly said, "Yes, I am continually having people come to see me who say they have been told they resemble me," and turned away to talk theosophy.—New York Correspondent.

The College Woman.

In his sensible and unprejudiced book on "The College Woman" Professor Thwing really tells the whole story and answers all criticisms in his final paragraph:

"The excellence of the womanhood which the college trains is the ultimate and supreme test of the worth of the college. The type of character which it forms and the influence of this type are now becoming revealed. The early fears that mannishness would supplant womanliness in the graduate have been proved groundless. The early fears, too, that educated women would prefer to enter professional rather than domestic life have vanished. So long as the family is the unit of civilization so long will most women prefer to be at the head of a home to being at the head of any professional or commercial undertaking. And all the acquired knowledge, all the force of disciplined strength, all the enlarged nobility of character which the college may have contributed will find in the home fitting opportunities for use."

Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, or "Mrs. Fred," as she is endearingly termed by her intimates, is the prettiest of the Vanderbilt women. She is also the youngest. She is tall and slender, with pretty blond hair and blue eyes. She has beautiful hands, of which she takes very great care, wearing gloves upon all possible occasions. Although she entertains elegantly, it is not frequently that she gives dinners, teas or receptions. There is one entertainment which she instituted a few years ago at Newport which always takes place when August comes round. It is the reception to Mrs. Bottome and the King's Daughters. Most of Mrs. Vanderbilt's charities are done so quietly and unostentatiously that the outside world knows little about them.—New York Telegram.

Sewing a Womanly Art.

Sewing is a most womanly art. A woman is never more feminine than when she has a needle and thread in her hand. It is the right of every little girl to be taught to sew neatly, even if it costs the mother some self sacrifice. Very few women are wholly exempt from the needle. On the contrary, almost every woman must take more or less care of her own wardrobe, even if she has no family responsibility. Machines cannot sew up rips in gloves, replace buttons or mend. Some stitches must be taken, and how to sew neatly is an accomplishment quite as necessary to the happiness of a majority of women as any other. If a little girl be taught early how to use her needle, sewing will soon become a sort of second nature to her.—New York Recorder.

Shades.

In a north room yellow shades are indispensable. They impart an effect of glowing sunshine that is as cheerful if not as warming as the real article. For a vestibule door that faces the south china silk should not be used. The ardent sun not only fades the colors, but rots the fabric as well. A lace or lace and scrim curtain, shirred top and bottom, on a small brass rod is the best in the way of service and appearance for such doors. An inside linen shade of dark green or ecru, if preferred, tones the sunshine in the daytime and of an evening permits an unviewed flight up stairs, if the seclusion of a rainy night and an old gown is threatened by an announcing ring.

Good News For Brides.

The vicar of Cropedy, an Oxfordshire village, has had the following notice attached to the church door with regard to rice throwing at weddings: "It is particularly requested that no rice be thrown at the conclusion of weddings when the bride and bridegroom leave the church. The bride's house and not the church is the right place for observances which have no connection with the religious ceremony and are sometimes a cause of disorder and irreverence."—South Bucks (England) Free Press.

Children and Sleep.

Mrs. Phebe Hanaford, in a recent address, condemned the present system of educating children. Making them early risers, as she put it, in classes was productive of making them conceited all the forenoon of life and sleepy all the afternoon, the energy which should have been stored to meet the trials of later years being all dissipated in their youthful days.

R. KENNEDY SPECIALIST

Have your horses cured by the great specialist who thoroughly understands the anatomy of the foot. To all owners of lame horses a cure guaranteed or no charge.

NOTICE—My cure is permanent. I guarantee every horse I cure for two years.

Don't be deceived by people telling you your horse cannot be cured. I can refer you to people in every part of the city whose horses I have cured. Remember, no foot, no horse. One trial will convince the most doubtful. My operation gives immediate relief, contracted feet, quarter cracks, corns, thrush, and all lameness of the foot.

SALVE—The most wonderful and quickest healing mixture in the world. Can be used with perfect safety on the most valuable animals. If once used will never be without it. Guaranteed to cure scratches, sore shoulders, cuts, bruises, burns, proud flesh, and old sores of the worst kind. Price 25c. A cure guaranteed or money refunded. Also try R. Kennedy's FAMOUS HOOF OINTMENT, guaranteed to grow hoof quicker than anything in the world. Price 25c.

Repairing, Carriage and Waggon Building. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction.

R. KENNEDY, Specialist of Horses' Feet. Infirmary and Forge, 243 Church st. Infirmary and Residence, 65 Bloor st., east, Toronto. N.B.—No charge for examining horses.

One trial has convinced the most doubtful my treatment gives immediate relief; and remember I will give a guarantee neither to nerve or injure the horse.

Hundreds of testimonials. Fifteen years experience.

A great many people say corns cannot be cured. I will give $25 to any person that has a horse troubled with corns that I cannot cure, and remember my cure is permanent.

THEY APPEARED IN TIGHTS

Literary Women Are Viewed by a Bogus Bald-Headed Row.

OTSEGO, Mich., Feb. 18.—The women's Literary Club created a great sensation the other night by donning tights and performing Longfellow's "Spanish Student." There were three preachers present, who, in spite of perfunctory disapproval, admitted that the play was well put on.

A novel feature was the appearance of a score of prominent citizens dressed in broad-cloth, wearing bald-headed wigs. They marched in which dignity and quietly seated themself in the orchestra circle amid loud applause. The women are indignant at the gentlemen who appeared in the front row with bald-headed wigs.

Trade Mark—Dr. Owen

The only scientific and practical Electric Belt made, for general use, having batteries that generate a strong current of Electricity that is under perfect control and can be applied to any part of the body, for the cure of

Nervous Diseases

Thousands of people suffer from a variety of Nervous Diseases, such as Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Lost Manhood, etc., that the old modes of treatment fail to cure. There is a loss of nerve force or power that cannot be restored by any medical treatment, and any doctor who would try to accomplish this by any kind of drugs is pursuing a dangerous practice. Properly treated, these diseases can be

Positively Cured

Electricity, as applied by the Owen Electric Belt and Suspensory, will most assuredly do so. It is the only known power that will supply what is lacking, namely nerve force or power, impart tone and vigor to the organs and arouse to healthy action the whole nervous system. It will most assuredly cure,

Died of Pneumonia.

Mr. William O'Brien, a young man 18 years of age, town, died yesterday morning from pneumonia contracted last summer. Deceased was a student at the Collegiate Institute. The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

A False Alarm.

An alarm was sent in from the box at the corner of Sherbrooke and Stewart streets at midnight, and the fire bell was rung. The firemen responded promptly but failed to locate any fire. The alarm was put down as a case of crossed wires.

Be Sure and Attend.

The concert next Tuesday night, Feb. 19th, in the Sons of England hall, Hunter street. The programme consists of laughter from start to finish furnished by the fun making Marine Minstrels. Come one, come all, come everybody. Adults 15 cts., children 10 cts. 2d16

"Up to Date Woman."

Tonight in the lecture room of St. Peter's Cathedral, Miss Wright, the travelling secretary of the Young Woman's Christain Association will deliver a lecture on the "Up to Date Woman." Mr. R. M. Roy will illustrate the points with stereopticon views. There will be no admission fee charged and the lecture is open to both ladies and gentlemen.

An Acknowledgment.

Mr. John Steel desires to express his sincere thanks and gratitude to the members of the Fire Brigade Band and those who so kindidly took part in the programme of the complimentary concert given to him on Friday evening last, as well as to the public generally, for their very liberal support. He wishes to tender his especial thanks to the members of the committee who had management of the concert, and acknowledges the receipts, which were most thankfully received.

Justice for Hooper.

Circulars are being distributed throughout the province asking for "justice" for John R. Hooper, the woman murderer. The circulars are addressed "To the justice loving people and the press of Canada," and bear a black headline, "An appeal for British justice," a long review of the case is given. It winds up thus: "Every word of yours can help right a wrong and soften the pathway of the aged father and mother of J. R. Hooper, now fast approaching life's weary journey, their faltering foot steps cruelly hastened by a wrong."

Of Interest to Artists

Mr. D. A. Shaw has moved to his new studio, corner of Hunter and George streets, where he will be prepared to meet with pupils who may desire instruction in any branches of painting, drawing, ect. Mr. Shaw will make a speciality of teaching china and pottery painting. Having studied in Chicago and New York all the latest methods of decorating china, he is in a position to impart the latest ideas in the art. His rooms will be open to the public on and after Thursday, 21st inst., at 2 o'clock—main entrance first door south of Hunter on George; private or ladies' entrance, first door west of George on Hunter. Mr. Shaw has purchased a kiln for firing china, so that the great risk and expense of sending it to the city to be fired will be done away with. tf19

Yesterday was spring millinery opening day in Toronto and the Queen City was crowded with pretty milliners. The trains that passed through Peterborough were full of them.

Newspaper advertising ought to be specially valuable in winter. On cold, stormy days people have little or no time to stop and read bill boards, handbills and similiar out door readings. They prefer a cosy nook with a newspaper.

The proposition to charge a fee of one dollar to all pupils writing at the entrance examination has been adopted in Lindsay with the provision that the successful pupils will have that amount credited to their fees if they attend the Collegiate Institute within one year from the first day of September after said examination.

THE ICE RACES.

Several Horses that Will Trot Arrived Last Night.

The ice races commence tomorrow, and at 1.30 tomorrow afternoon the track on the Little Lake will present a gay scene. A large number of spectators will be present from Cobourg, Belleville, Port Perry and other points, and no doubt a large number from town will watch the interesting events.

Last night "Curry," who will enter in the free-for all, arrived from Belleville, and "Nattress" was brought in from Millbrook. "Lady Rysdyck," of Cobourg, in the 2.40 class, and "Lulu B.," of Brighton, in the 3 minute class, will come in this morning. The local entries will be numerous, and the races promise to be interesting. The program for the "meet" will be as follows:

FIRST DAY.	Purse.
First Race, three-minute class......	$90 00
Second Race, colts foaled in 1891....	25 00
SECOND DAY.
First Race, two-forty class..........	$ 90 00
Second Race, free for all...........	100 00
Dog Race..........................	3 00

Ray	Boucher
Rutherford, skip	Attrill, skip

HOCKEY NOTES.

The Peterborough hockey team and those who accompanied them to Kingston, returned home yesterday morning, and received the congratulations of numerous friends. The boys report an excellent time and hospital treatment at the hands of the Kingston boys. In connection with the finals, which are to be played off in Toronto, the World says: A big crowd of their supporters gave the Granite Colts a royal welcome at the Union station last evening when they returned from their London victory in the semi final for the juniors O. H. A. championship. The Granites won by 7 goals to 2. They will meet Peterborough in the final for the junior championship this week, likely in the Victoria or the Caledonian rinks. Peterborough beat Kingston on their own ice in a hot game on Saturday by 8 to 7. The team at London was: Granite Colts—Goal Livingstone, point McArthur, cover F. Lillie, forwards Dixon, Johnston, Ewing and W. Lillie.

WHO KNOWS THIS GIRL?

Says She Was Married to a Man Named Welch Near Trenton.

A lunatic named Vina Earls, who went to Toronto last Thursday from the east, and who was sent to the jail, is still there awaiting instructions from her friends, whose names, however, have not yet been ascertained. She has stated to the jail authorities that she came from Trenton and was married the day before she left there to a man named Welch. She says that she lived for a time with a man named Benjamin Mallory, near Cobourg, and that Dr. Mallory attended her when sick.

She could tell nothing more except that she was an inmate of the Toronto Asylum seven years ago. The police are looking for her friends.

Quick Retribution.

On Tuesday night last the hardware store of Mr. E.T. Morton, of Campbellford, was entered and the till relieved of about $3 50, and the show case of nine pocket knives and a $3.50 revolver. The burglary was committed about 10 o'clock, and was discovered while the parties were engaged at their work, but who made good their escape through the cellar door. Search was made outside the building, and, footsteps were discovered under the bridge which led to the finding of a coat containing a small bottle in which was a small quantity of whiskey. The coat was supposed to belong to Robert Robinson, a young man about 18 years of age, who was found sitting in an intoxicated state in Mr. Jas. Gibson's hotel. He was at once arrested on suspicion and placed in the lock up by Constable Robinson. On Wednesday he appeared before the magistrate and pleaded guilty, saying he was drunk when he committed the deed. He was sent to the Cobourg jail for three months.

Twenty Thousand Roses.

There are nearly 20,000 rose trees in bloom now at Dunlop's conservatories Bloor-st. west, Toronto. Visitors are always well come. Mr. Dunlop is proud of his establishment and takes pleasure in speaking of his beauties. He ships them by mail and express to all parts of Canada, and as these orders are filled direct from the trees, he guarantees them to arrive in good condition. Sale room, 445 Yonge-st., and 5 King street west.

GENERAL SPORTS.

Elmvale defeated Penetang in a friendly curling match at the former place on Saturday, the score being 39 to 26.

A hard-fought hockey match on Saturday evening between Orillia and Midland was won by the former, the score being 3 goals to 2.

The Victorias beat the Ottawas by 60 points in the final match of the Montreal bowling series. The Ottawas, however, have won the championship and two medals.

Over 2,000 spectators witnessed the hockey match at the Victoria rink, Montreal, on Saturday, between the Quebecs and Victorias, the latter winning by 8 goals to 2.

The Imperial Bank hockeyists from Toronto went to Guelph on Saturday to play the Ontario Agricultural College team at the Victoria rink. The Toronto men won by 7 goals to 5.

Saturday afternoon the Spalding Hockey team from Chicago, played a 30-minute game with the Victorias at the Victoria rink, six men a side. The Toronto men won by 6 goals to 1.

There were two curling matches at Port Perry on Saturday. In the morning the Toronto Granites and Port Perry played a tie, each scoring 27, and in the afternoon Port Perry defeated Uxbridge by 37 to 19.

A challenge curling game was played on the Granite rink on Saturday between teams from the editorial staff of the Mail-Empire and Globe. The former succeeded in winning by 20 to 14.

Diggs and Lissak are the favorites for the two Derbys at Chicago. Both are at 10 to 1. The Commoner and the Butterflies are at 30 to 1. Seagram's Halfling is quoted at 50 to 1 for the Chicago Derby.

Ice racing at Hamilton closed on Saturday after a four days' successful meeting. Grimsby Girl won the unfinished 2.25 trot or pace, Phelps the 2.20 trot or pace in straight heats, and Dick French the open race.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

LAURIER IN MONTREAL.

A SERIOUS PANIC AT SOHMER PARK BARELY AVERTED.

The Question of Steam-Fire Engines in Toronto—Purchased a Merryweather—Toronto Student Incident.

Special to The Times.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—Mr. Wilfred Laurier, leader of the Liberal party in the Dominion, addressed a Liberal meeting of nearly ten thousand people at Sohmer Park last night. Mr. Laurier who spoke in French, dealt with the minor issues before the electors, covering the same ground as already covered in his previous speeches. He scored the government for not announcing its decision in regard to the general elections, and challenged the ministers to make some announcement of its plans. Regarding the Manitoba school question Mr. Laurier said the government was evidently afraid of it. It was a question that had to be settled, but it required men of courage to settle it, and the only policy that the government seemed to have was one of procrastination. Mr. Laurier said that his attitude in this question was what it had always been. He had frequently said, and he repeated it, that if the schools were Protestant as had been represented it was an outrage on the Catholic minority, and justice demanded that the question should be settled as speedily as possible. He promised that if the Liberals were returned to power they would see that justice was done to all. Mr. Laurier also denounced protection, which he claimed had been an injury rather than a blessing to the country. Mr. Laurier was loudly cheered.

Mr. H. G. Joly endorsed Mr. Laurier and speeches were also delivered by Messrs. Tarte, Devlin and others.

THE QUESTION OF FIRE ENGINES.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—At the city council meeting today there was considerable discussion on the question of steam fire engines. The experts engaged by the city, recommended the purchase of two Merryweathers of 1,200 U. S. gallons capacity, at a cost of $7,600 each. Mr. Ronald, on behalf of the Canadian engine, offered to supply the same sort of engine of quite as large capacity for $6,000 or $11,500 for two. The debate largely took the direction of a discussion on home manufacture versus foreign. Ald. McMurrich was, he said, rather disappointed that the experts had not recommended at least one Canadian engine, but there seemed to be a little doubt that the Merryweather was the superior engine. The members spoke of the Canadian manufacture as desirable, but they did not apply the principle. Every gentleman around the board wore imported broadcloth. Why did they not wear Canadian tweed? (Laughter.) Simply because the other was better. He must, reasoning along this line, support the report of the experts.

After considerable discussion it was agreed to buy one Merryweather at once, and to test the Ronald against it when the Merryweather arrives. If the test is satisfactory the second engine purchased will be a Ronald.

STUDENTS ON STRIKE.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—The Toronto University boycott began in earnest today and of the seven hundred students registered, only five were in attendance at the lectures this morning.

These five were looked at with scorn and are described as traitors. At one lecture only one student attended and he was a freshman. The other four attended only one lecture each.

Something that looks a little queer was developed this morning, when it was learned that though the rules say that applications for Fellowships will be received until September 20, each year, the offices last year were filled prior to that date. A man who applied in August received a letter signed by the Minister of Education, dated September 19, saying all positions had been filled. This is very like advertising for tenders and then awarding the contract before the time for receiving tenders expires.

Indications are that the fight is on in earnest. The students are very determined, and they declare they will not weaken. There is a good deal of uneasiness in Government circles, for it is known that the matter will be brought up in the Legislature, and the Opposition is priming itself with facts to make a warm fight.

Hon. G. W. Ross, in an interview, said the Government would probably see its way to appoint a commission of investigation on the formulation of such charges, but that it would be out of the question to look for the re-instatement of Prof. Dale. He stated also that Student Tucker, editor of the 'Varsity, would not be allowed to return to the institution. Mr. Ross stated also that such a commission could not be appointed until the students had returned to the lectures. The students will probably compromise and return to the lectures after they have secured the promise of a commission.

ALMOST A PANIC.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—During the Laurier meeting here last night what nearly proved a panic took place owing to the breaking of a window. The crowd rushed on to the platform, and it was only after a strong appeal from Mr. Laurier that quiet was restored and the speakers were able to proceed.

THE DOUBLE FUNERAL

Of Robert Newbury—The Niece in a Precarious Condition.

Special to the Times.

TOTTENHAM, Ont., Feb. 19.—The funeral of Robert Newbury and his wife, two of the victims of Saturday's tragedy, took place yesterday afternoon and was largely attended.

The third victim, the little niece, still lives, but is in a precarious condition, and her chances of recovery are far from satisfactory.

The inquest will be continued this evening.

Jumped Overboard.

QUEENSTOWN, Feb. 19.—The steamer Aurania from New York for Liverpool arrived here this afternoon. Her officers reported that she encountered an easterly gale on the 15th, 16th and 17th. Several heavy seas swept her decks and two saloon port holes were broken by the waves. A steerage passenger named Patterson jumped overboard last evening. The steamer was stopped but he sank before anyone could get to him. In a letter which Patterson addressed to his wife in Chicago and left in his berth he said that he was tired of life and its struggles.

The Elbe Enquiry.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—An expert from the Board of Trade will be the coroner in Lowestoft when the Elbe inquest shall be resumed. It also has appointed counsel and has subpoenaed the crew of the steamer Grathie, which sank the Elbe.

WICKED CHICAGO.

A Scheme to Purify it and to Establish an Honest Municipal Government—The Mayor to Have Big Powers and $10,000 a Year.

Special to the Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 19.—There will be introduced simultaneously in the House and Senate today a measure that if passed will completely reorganize the city government of Chicago. It was prepared by the Legislative Committee of the Civil Federation.

By its provisions the city will be almost in absolute control of the Mayor instead of the departments as now exist. The Mayor will have a Cabinet to be known as the Board of Control. It does away with the election of the City Treasurer and provides for the election of one alderman from each ward for a term of two years and twelve aldermen at large for a term of four years, the latter to be on the minority representation plan.

THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

The Board of Control will consist of the Comptroller, the head of the Department of Finance; the Commissioner of Public Works, the head of that department; the Treasurer, the head of the Department of Public Funds and Disbursements; the Commissioner of Public Safety in charge of the Police, Fire and Health departments, and the Corporation Counsel, the legal officer of the city. The office of City Attorney is abolished.

SALARIES OF MAYOR AND ALDERMEN.

The salary of the Mayor is to be $10,000 and of heads of departments $8,000 a year. Salaries of aldermen are to be $2,500 a year, and they will not be allowed to hold any other office. The Mayor is to have power to remove any of his Cabinet at any time, and he is given absolute veto power. The Board of Control shall say in what banks the city's money shall be deposited, and such banks must give bonds. All franchises must be passed upon by the Board of Control and then sold to highest bidder at public auction.

MINE DISASTER.

Six Miners Killed and Others More or Less Injured.

Special to the Times.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 19.—By an explosion of mine gas at 10 a.m. at the Bear Ridge colliery of the Reading Coal and Iron Company, at Mahony Plain, six miners were killed and five wounded. Peter Greenback, T. C. Claire, Joseph Gibbe, Crescent Hill; Thomas Durkin, Girardville; Benj. Reaber, Mahoney Plain; Peter Kline and A. Meyers, Ashland, were among the victims. The first five men were probably instantly killed, and it was some time before their bodies were recovered from the workings, but Meyers was taken out alive and died while being carried to the hospital. The injured are: D. Davis, Girardville; Wm. Minnich and Wm. Goff, Ashland; John Lemay and John Davis. It is feared that the first four of those injured are fatally burned, but Davis was only slightly hurt. The origin of the explosion is not known. The explosion set fire to the timbers of what is called the "monkey," cutting off the escape of the five men killed in the mine. The six men who were taken out alive were nearest the gangway and escaped the suffocating fumes of gas and the avalanche of coal and timber which followed the explosion. A fire broke out in the gangway, but the work of rescuing the imprisoned men or recovering their bodies if dead was at once proceeded with. A line of hose was run into the gangway, and between two and three o'clock the bodies of the five men were recovered. The fire in the mine is still raging fiercely.

Fully One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Persons in Need of Immediate Assistance.

Special to The Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—According to a report made by the outdoor relief committee of the County Board there are 150,000 persons in Chicago who require assistance to avoid starvation; 50,000 persons have already been supported at their homes at public expense.

Many are said to be industrious persons who have been out of employment until their credit and resources are exhausted. Many more are in danger of being evicted from their homes.

THE BRITANNIA'S RIVAL.

Ailsa Will Race the Prince of Wales Yacht on the Mediterranean.

Special to the Times.

GLASGOW, Feb. 19.—The recently launched 160 ton rater Ailsa has been painted black above the water line and coppered below. Her profile above water bears a striking resemblance to the Vigilant.

The Ailsa left the Clyde with her racing spars aloft and her mainsail and jib set, and is expected to meet the Britannia in the first race in the Mediterranean.

The Japs Prisoners.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—The Central News correspondent at Chee Foo says: The foreigners who were taken prisoners at Wei Hai-Wei, with the one exception of Howie, have arrived here. The steamship Kang-Chi brought the bodies of the Chinese naval officers who committed suicide. The Japanese saluted the Kang Chi bidding a solemn and reverent farewell to Admiral Ting's body. The Chinese were greatly impressed. The Japanese will not come to Chee-Foo. Junks brought the Chinese soldiers from Wei-Hai-Wei to this port.

STATION MASTER WEIGHILL BEFORE MAGISTRATE WINGFIELD.

Provincial Parliament Opens Tomorrow—W. D. Balfour Will be Speaker of the New Provincial Assembly.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—At 11 o'clock today Magistrate Wingfield began the investigation of the charge of manslaughter made by a coroner's jury against Albert Weighill, station master at Unionville, on the G.T.R. On Friday, Feb. 8th, express train No. 1 ran into a snowplough special on the Midland Railway, near Agincourt. Engineer John Rigg, of the snowplough train, was killed in the collision. The charge against Weighill is that he allowed the express to pass Unionville, when it should have been held until assurance was received that the track was clear, that he neglected to display his signal board to hold the express.

County Constable Burns officiated as clerk of the court. Mr. Dewart was present for the Crown and Mr. Robinette for the prisoner, who is under $8,000 bail. Mr. Weighill sat quietly by, his face unusually pale. A number of persons, among them several ladies, were present.

County Constable Wm. Hobbs told of the finding of the body of Rigg under the van 21 hours after the accident. Dr. D. A. Clarke described the result of the post-mortem, which he made with Dr. Sisley. Divested of its medical terms, it means that the engineer was horribly crushed and that the immediate cause of death was asphyxiation.

Dr. and Coroner Opie Sisley concurred with the other doctor's report. Mr. Weighill claimed no exemption or privilege when called upon to give his evidence at the coroner's inquest at Agincourt, before his arrest.

WHAT WEIGHILL SAID.

Weighill's evidence was read. He said that he had not tried to use the signal board, thinking the snow would have put it out of order; he did not think he was bound to depend upon the board, but thought that a ten minutes' interval between trains was enough; he received no message from the snow plough after it left Unionville; it could not have reached Agincourt before the express left Unionville; before going out the conductor should have had a written order from him that the plough had arrived at Agincourt; he had not spoken to or signalled to Conductor Boundy while the express was at Unionville; he could not have ordered the express forward without first hearing that the snow plough had reached Agincourt; he had wired Agincourt about the plough, but got no answer; after the express started he ran out and tried to stop it, as he thought the signal board might not be noted.

The articles found upon the crushed body of the engineer were produced and identified by Mrs. Rigg. They are a purse, containing 28c., a silver Waltham watch, not at all injured, with a gold chain, a clasp knife and a pair of silver spectacles. The examination was adjourned until the afternoon.

BALFOUR FOR SPEAKER.

W. D. Balfour, the Radical from South Essex, will be the Speaker of the new Legislature, the first session of which will be opened on Thursday.

The selection will be universally approved. Personally Mr. Balfour is popular with the Conservatives; his long and able service has endeared him to the Liberals; his radicalism has won the admiration of of the Patrons, and his position as publisher of one of the best weeklies in the Province, coupled with his well known geniality, will endear him to the press gallery.

AN INTERESTING BODY.

The new Legislature will be an interesting body. The presence of a considerable third party, for the first time in the history of Ontario politics, will make it unique. There will, too, be widespread curiosity to see how the new factor in provincial legislation will comport itself, especially in view of the imminence of the Federal elections in which that party is vitally interested.

MOWAT'S POSITION.

The position of the veteran Premier will likewise afford an interesting study, when, for the first time since 1886, he finds it necessary to shape his legislation with careful regard to the views of a watchful Opposition. True, Sir Oliver has a majority over his regular opponents. It is also true his followers outnumber all other parties combined. But if he proposes any important measure that forces the Patrons to combine with the Conservatives in opposition the effect on public feeling outside will be dangerous and the reaction on the more independent Reformers in the House may prove disastrous to the continued supremacy of the Liberal party.

STANDING OF THE PARTIES.

There are 94 members in the full House, but at present two seats are vacant—West Wellington and Haldimand. Of the 92 seats now filled, Mowat has 52 pledged supporters, the Conservatives 26 and Patrons 14.

WAR IN WEST DURHAM.

After Their Conservative M. P. P.—Several Charges are Dismissed.

Special to the Times.

BOWMANVILLE, Feb. 19.—Justices Ferguson and Rose presided at the trial of the West Durham provincial election petition presented by Moses A. James against the election of William Henry Reid, who defeated the Liberal candidate, W. T. Lockhart, at the June election by a majority of 610. Messrs. Kerr, Simpson and Grant appeared for the petitioner and D'Alton McCarthy and James Bicknell for the defence.

Frank Mason, secretary of the West Durham Conservative Association, said he received $10 from Mr. Reid two months after the election for his expenditure for horse hire, for which, as a matter of fact, he was not out of pocket. Dr. J. W. McLaughlin produced the account and vouchers for Mr. Reid's election, amounting to $134.87. Wm. Westlake, Byron Hooper, Walter Vice and John Vice gave evidence concerning charges of bribery.

Rev. R. A. Bilkey went from Toronto to vote and received $3 expenses from Mr. W. J. Jones, one of his churchwardens, who said it was his own money, voluntarily given. The charge was dismissed on the ground that Jones was not an agent and did not make the payment on behalf of Reid.

Geo. Coleman, Wm. Dudley and Elgerton Doncaster gave evidence in another bribery charge, which turned out to be a joke. Several other charges were taken up and dismissed, and the court adjourned to meet this morning.

PETERBOROUGH. FEBRUARY [illegible]

Good morning!

Li Hung Chang himself is going to Japan to arrange peace, and he will go with his yellow jacket and his peacock's feather on. This is not to impress the Japanese so much as to conciliate Li, who is again the greatest man in the Middle Kingdom.

Our poor young friend the Czar is shivering in his silk socks these days, or ought to be if he isn't. The Nihilists are are after him with dynamite bombs and nitro-glycerine and other distributing agencies, because of his fondness for autocratic government. Being the Czar of all Russia is no joke.

There is very little for us to fear in the cholera reports from Constantinople. That city has not been free from the disease at any time within the past three or four years, and indeed, there are nearly always cases of it there. Thirty deaths from it in a week are less than the average weekly number for years past. In so far as we have learned from the United Press despatches, it has spread northward or westward, and Russia, as well as the countries of western Europe, will doubtless adopt stringent measures to prevent its approach to them in the spring.

One of the arguments in favor of cheap and easy divorce in South Dakota is that it will increase the population of the State, by attracting to it all the men and women who want to be divorced. We believe, on the contrary, that the new divorce law will drive many respectable people out of the State. It is a continuous outrage upon the marriage institution. It is a wrong against family life. It is demoralising to the community. It is heedless of the religious sanction of matrimony. It gives the State a bad preeminence, and must fasten upon it a shameful name.

At the head of a column of editorial notes the Globe propounds the daily conundrum: "Has the National Policy made you rich?" It ought to vary things once in a while by asking if the N.P. has restored anybody's lost youth or made anybody's false teeth fall out or caused the hair to grow on the top of a hairless pate. The trilling query as to the whereabouts of Moses when the light went out lost its popularity because of its everlasting sameness, and no one cares a brass button nowadays why a chicken goes across the road.

Love continues to make the world go round. A contemporary tells the story of a Kansas girl who had a proposal from a young man the other day, and she asked for a week in which to think it over. While she was doing her thinking she dropped around to see just how her four married sisters were doing under the matrimonial bonds. One who used to be a belle, had three children, did all her own work, and hadn't been to the theatre or out riding since she was married. Another whose husband was a promising young man at the time she married, was supporting him. A third didn't care to say her life was her own when her husband was around, and the fourth was divorced. Surely the prospect was not alluring. A Kansas woman, in particular, would be expected to decide forthwith that she would have nothing to do with matrimony. But no. She answered the young man before the week was up, accepting him and saying that she would be ready for the ceremony within a month. It does not follow, however, that she made up her mind that married bliss, with all the attending discouragements witnessed in the homes of her sisters, is preferable to single happiness. She probably proposes to see if she cannot improve upon the family experience. It would be interesting to know five years hence what her opinion then is of her present rashness.

PLAIN SPEECH.

The manifesto of the so-called People's party of Russia, so far as boldness and animation are concerned, might have been uttered by the Populists of the United States. The honest opinion of the writers is expressed with as much plainness as could be mustered. Here is an extract in which the Czar is directly addressed: 'You yourself have killed your own popularity, and have alienated all that part of society which is peacefully struggling forward. Some individuals are jubilant over your speech, but will soon discover their impotence." Reference is here made to the announcement by the Czar that representative government will not be granted to the Russian people. Again, the address says: "In another section your words will stimulate the readiness to struggle against the present hateful state of things with any means. You were the first to begin the struggle. Ere long it will proceed."

Whatever else these sharp words mean, they at least show that the cause of liberal political principles is not wholly dead in Russia. It is possible to believe that the number who have such sentiments is not large; that there is no general poular movement that can be compared with the liberal movement of 20 years ago. But that there is a group of men who are just as eager as ever for a change is certain. Russia baffles prediction. What is going to happen there in the next 35 years must depend almost wholly upon the Czar himself. Even if he persists in his programme of absolutism, it is possibly within his power to carry the country along peacefully. An intelligent appreciation of the needs of the people may be enough to retain loyal support. And again, even the most enlightened despotism may fail utterly to satisfy their aspirations.

HARD ON THE SPARROWS.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature of New York, which proposes to exterminate the English sparrow—a bounty of one cent is to be paid for each bird killed and five cents for each nest destroyed. A more stupid bill could hardly be invented. Assuming that it was desirable to exterminate sparrows, which is doubtful, how can it be done with five other states bordering on New York, in none of which have they any such absurd laws? With every sparrow in the state exterminated on May first, by June first we should have almost as many as ever. The tendency of such a law will be to incite and propagate cruelty among young people. Under it thousands of little chipping sparrows would be killed and the bounty would be paid for them all the same. It is not a desirable law—it is born of ignorant zeal and reflects no credit on its originator.

EYES FOR THE BLIND.

A device which enables the blind to read ordinary print has been made by M. G. Furnel, master of the Perkins school for the blind at Boston. It is an electrical apparatus which, placed upon the printed page, raise tiny groups of metal points conforming to the outlines of the letters and words. These points the blind person perceives with his fingers, as he would the embossed pages of the books printed for the blind. This device employs the the electrical current. Another one of the Perkins school instructors, D. A. Reardon, is perfecting an electrical apparatus which he feels sure will enable the blind to see. It is an artificial eye of selenium, glass and vulcanized rubber, which is to receive the image of the object and flash it to the center of sight in the brain by means of wires applied to the sides of the head.

A watchmaker named Rhodes, formerly a resident of Boston, has invented a clock which will run over a year at a single winding The secret lies in construction and adjustment of the escapement. The pendulum is of equal lengths above and below its axis, and has its ends weighed, by means of which it is regulated. Mr. Rhodes says his idea is so capable of dedevelopment that an eight-year clock is a possibility.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

Wm. Dyson, a G. T. R. Switchman, Sustains Serious Injuries.

TORONTO, Feb. 18.—A Grand Trunk switchman named Wm. Dyson, who lives with his family at 184 Shaw Street, was injured this morning about 6 o'clock in the yards at the foot of John Street.

He was standing between two tracks when a train going east and another going west met. There was scarcely room enough for his body between the two trains, and the switchman was struck by one of them. He was removed to his home, where he is suffering from a severe contusion of the hip. Dr. Riordan is attending him.

COLD BENUMBS THE TROUT.

Truthful North Carolinians Pick Out Big Fish by the Thousand.

Special to the Times.

POLLOCKSVILLE, N.C., February 18.—The excessive cold weather has benumbed the trout in the New River. Countless numbers of the fish can be seen floating on top of the water, and people are picking them up in large quantities. One party secured 1,000 to day, and there were 120 barrels shipped by express for Jacksonville, some of them weighing forty pounds.

BUFFALO BLAZE.

Music Hall and Other Costly Buildings Destroyed.

Special to the Times.

BUFFALO, Feb. 18.—It looks at this moment as if a music hall would be destroyed. The building cost $300,000 and was erected on the site of the old Music Hall, which was burned, together with St. Louis Church, twelve years ago. The library and societies rooms of German societies already have been destroyed.

Grand Trunk Deficit.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The Grand Trunk accounts for the half year ended December 31, are available. They show a deficit of £179,400. The Chicago and Grand Trunk for the year ended in December shows a deficit of £[illegible]. The Detroit and Grand Haven road shows a balance on the right side for the past year, and adding to this the balance from the previous half year, the total surplus is £[illegible]. Therefore the total deficit or debt balance of the Grand Trunk system for 1894 is £141,200. Thus there will be no dividend. However none was expected by the market.

Is It The St. Augustine ?

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Capt. Chambers of the steamer Philadelphia, which arrived this morning, from La Guaya, reports that he passed a small steamer, loaded quite deeply, off Barnegat, at 10.30 p. m. yesterday, and thinks she may be the long over-due steamer City of Augustine.

Oil Fed the Flames.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 18.—Early this morning fire destroyed the large warehouse of the Waters Peirce Company, situated in in East Dallas, containing about 500,000 gallons of oil. Loss unknown. No insurance.

Royalty and Rheumatism.

MADRID, Feb. 18.—The young King of Spain is suffering from an attack of rheumatism.

Cold Wave in the South.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 18.—Tennessee, Alabama and Arkansas are now experiencing the most severe and protracted cold weather ever known in this part of the country. Snow has fallen almost continuously for 48 hours. The river at Arkansas City is blocked with ice, and many steamers, tugs and tows are frozen fast. Several persons have been frozen to death.

Armenian Outrages.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Prof. Minas Tscheraz, editor of the Armenia, says he has letters from Turkey telling of the outrages. The Turks have seized several of the peasants who were leaving the disturbed districts for the frontier, and killed the men and have carried off the women.

Another Buffalo Fire.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 18.—The north wing of the Music Hall was destroyed by fire early this morning. It was occupied by the German Young Men's Association, whose valuable library is ruined. The dressing-rooms of the concert hall, now occupied by the First Baptist church, and another Saengerbund musical society were damaged. Loss about $30,000.

Suffocated by the Fumes.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 18.—A strange sudden death occurred here this morning. Georgina Montier, five years old, who had recovered from diphtheria, went into a room at her home in Rochesterville which had been fumigated by Health Inspector McNeil. She inhaled the fumes of the burning sulphur, and almost instantly succumbed from suffocation.

HILLSBORO, Texas., Feb. 18.—At Hermitage last night, on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, three convicts working on the track made a break for liberty, uncoupling the engine from the work train, throwing the conductor off and starting away. The guards fired, killing one and wounding another. The fireman filled the boiler with cold water, "killing" the engine. When it stopped the remaining convict made his escape.

Anti-Gambling League.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The Newmarket court has dismissed the summons granted to the anti-gambling league against the stewards of the Jockey club, which was applied for and granted.

IN MONTHS OF DARKNESS.

The Dreary Life of Explorers Who Visit the Arctic Regions.

A wild goose chase after the north pole surely seems, on the very face, to be a fool's errand. Perhaps it is, for I doubt if any very startling fact will be added to science, even if the north pole is indeed reached. Of course there is or would be a huge amount of satisfaction and glory to have been the discoverer of the pole, but whether science will be enriched thereby or simply satisfied with the fact of our having "got there all the same" is an open question.

The life led by explorers in these dreary regions, especially during the long winter's night, is so intensely monotonous as to scarcely warrant description, and yet no better idea of the hardships, sufferings and misery endured for the sake of science can be gained, than by a glimpse of the daily life of the arctic traveler.

I chanced to be one of the members of a recent expedition and was in charge of the winter quarters at the northernmost portion of Nova Zembla, or Novia Zemlia, as the islands are called by the natives.

Imagine a night that settles down like a pall and an interminable darkness that is only relieved by dull gray twilight for a few hours out of the 24; then, added to this, a thermometer so far down below zero that the mercury often freezes, miserable quarters, poor food, and the monotonous existence, and you will scarcely wonder why so many intrepid investigators have given up the unequal battle and laid down to perish in the darkness of hopeless despair. You will also scarcely wonder that the most ardent enthusiasm is likely to be considerably cooled, morally as well as physically, under the circumstances.

What matters it if the whole world is watching the outcome of your investigations with keenest interest when you are so far removed from earthly comforts and earthly aid?

And yet, in spite of all the bitter knowledge gained by the hardest kind of experience, the same explorers will attempt expedition after expedition.

I may woefully lack the proper enthusiasm, yet I cannot but admit that even the delightful prospect of discovering dozens of north poles would not tempt me to again undergo the hardships of that arctic night, even the memory of which I would gladly dispel as a fearful dream.—Home and Country.

TWO ABSENTMINDED INDIVIDUALS.

One Forgot His Invitation, and the Other Forgot His Wife.

An absentminded person can spread chaos all around, but when two absentminded people try to work together may heaven help the poor creatures upon whom the consequences fall. A prominent lawyer from an inland city met in London a distinguished British author, whom he invited to visit him during a tour of America, already planned. The lawyer came back home and shortly forgot all about his English friend and his own invitation, but was reminded of both, in good time, by a letter announcing the date of the celebrated Briton's arrival. This, too, he forgot in a few minutes, and when the appointed day came it found him living in a shut up house, getting his meals where he could, while his wife made an extended round of visits among her relatives.

When the distinguished visitor drove up to the house on the evening of the day set in his letter, he met a single servant, who explained that the master was at a club meeting, over two miles away, and would be back about midnight. Sending his wife, who was tired and ill, back to the railway station, the Englishman started in pursuit of his delinquent host. The latter was found with a company of pleasant people, to whom the great author was promptly introduced, and the two absentminded friends finished up the evening at the club meeting, forgetting all about their lack of suitable quarters for the night and poor Mrs. Distinguished Author sitting in the railway station.

When the meeting broke up in the small hours, they recalled these awkward circumstances and rescued the weary woman, whose comments upon the situation did not reach me. Then they drove to the home of one of the lawyer's relatives, who kindly got them all to bed before dawn.—Kate Field's Washington.

The Tongue.

The perfectly healthy tongue is clean, moist, lies loosely in the mouth, is round at the edge and has no prominent papillæ. The tongue may be furred from local causes or from sympathy with the stomach, intestines or liver.

The dry tongue occurs most frequently in fever and indicates a nervous prostration or depression. A white tongue is diagnostic simply of the feverish condition, with perhaps a disordered stomach. When it is moist and yellowish brown, it shows disordered digestion. Dry and brown indicates a low state of the system. When the tongue is dry and red and smooth, look out for inflammation, gastric or intestinal. When the papillæ on the end of the tongue are raised and very red, we call it a strawberry tongue, and that may mean scarlet fever. A sharp, pointed red tongue will point to brain irritation or inflammation, and a yellow coating indicates liver derangement.—Family Herald.

Why She Never Married.

When a man tempts fate by reminding a spinster of her condition, his punishment is generally swift and sure. In a county of Ireland where the Quakers were numerous the entire body on one occasion gathered together for one of their quarterly meetings.

After the exercises of the morning a public luncheon was held, at which all the Friends attended. The conversation turned to matrimony.

"Bridget," said an unmannerly youthful member of the society, speaking across the crowded table to a prim, elderly maiden lady, "wilt thou tell me why thou hast never married?"

"Certainly, Friend William," responded the ready Bridget in a voice audible over the room. "'Tis because I am not so aisy pleased as thy wife was."—London Tit-Bits.

The Edible Birds' Nest.

In the Andaman islands the principal industry is that of collecting, cleaning and preparing edible birds' nests for shipment. The species of bird which builds this queer nest arrives in the islands about the 1st of December and immediately commences to build its nest, which is constructed almost wholly of a gelatinous substance, which is a secretion from the salivary glands of the bird's mouth. The finest quality of these edible nests resembles pure isinglass. They are worth their weight in silver in many countries of the orient, especially in China, Borneo, Korea and Siam. They are usually built in caves and clefts along the coast, but are frequently found in trees.—St. Louis Republic.

THE PORTRAIT

(Concluded from yesterday)

[illegible] of Marquis of Bosworth. Before knowing who he was she had described him to her brother Jack as "a screamingly funny little man, all eyeglass and shirt collar," but on his being introduced to her as Lord Edgehill she had changed her mind regarding his appearance, in which she ceased to see anything ridiculous. Henceforth she set herself to rouse his admiration and to win his affection, if such was to be found in his nature.

While Oliver Ormand worked in silence Billie Cromartie, his hands deep in his pockets, wandered around the studio aimlessly until, coming to the window and catching sight of the rackets in the tennis court, he asked if he might knock the balls about.

"Certainly," said the artist, trying to conceal the pleasure he felt at getting rid of the lad.

"Thanks. We're going to play the Morelands in the afternoon, and I shall be glad to practice," Billie explained as he bounded out on the lawn.

"Are you tired?" the painter inquired of his sitter.

"A little," she replied.

"Then you may rest for five minutes."

She looked at the canvas and smiled with an air of satisfaction. "Do you think it really like me?" she asked.

"I fear it doesn't do you justice," he replied.

"On the contrary, I thought it too beautiful, too much idealized for me."

"That is how I see you," he answered, his dark eyes fixed on her face lovingly, pleadingly.

"It has always been one of my ambitions," she went on, unheeding him, "to have my portrait painted and hung in the academy, and now it is about being realized."

"Unless anything happens meanwhile," he rejoined lightly.

"What can happen?" she inquired seriously. "Another sitting or two, and it will be finished, and as an associate you are certain of having it exhibited. It would break my heart if anything were to prevent it from being seen at Burlington House."

"Then you may rest satisfied. Nothing shall," he said.

"What you promise you do," she replied, with a smile by way of rewarding him, "so that in another month I shall hang on the academy walls, where friends will see me, strangers admire me and crowds flock around me all day. I shall be talked of at dinner parties and assemblies in town and in the homes of our country cousins who visit the gallery. Then my name will be in the press not only of Great Britain, but of Australia, America and the continent, and people whom I have never seen or may never see will read of me, and my name will become familiar to them. Is not that celebrity? It is almost power!"

No thought of the man whose work was to make her famous entered into her mind. There was no room there for any other image than her own.

"I did not think you were so ambitious," he said.

"Ah, you don't know me!" she answered. "When I was a child, I used to dream of becoming a great actress and of crowding big houses with my name. Then, as I moved before a vast and silent audience, all eyes were fixed on me, all ears were filled with my voice, all hearts were thrilled by my power, I triumphed above my rivals and somewhat disdainfully accepted the thunders of applause which were my due."

"I suppose your mother wouldn't hear of you going on the boards," he suggested.

"Oh, mamma never had much influence over me. She has been an invalid as long as I remember, and she has no will of her own. I have always acted on my own judgment. I abandoned the idea of becoming an actress on consideration, though I know I can act."

"And what is the dream that now fills your life?" the artist asked.

"Ah, I mustn't tell you," she answered, smiling at him.

"Don't you think," he asked in that low, earnest tone that always impressed her, "that true happiness lies not in fulfilled ambition, but in loving and in being loved?"

"You are romantic," she said, evading his question.

"No matter what I am, I love you," he replied, beginning to quiver from excitement.

"You have told me that before," she remarked, watching the pallor of his face and the glowing brightness of his eyes with an interest such as an anatomist might feel in examining a fresh subject.

"I know I have. Forgive me, I cannot help repeating it again and again—I love you," he said in a grave and earnest voice.

She made no answer, and he continued: "Think how happy we might be in the future."

"Or how miserable."

He felt chilled, but overcoming the feeling he replied:

"Miserable we could never be, for I shall love you always."

She, with emotions scarcely stirred, looked on passively, analyzing her own feelings. His ardor flattered her, but she credited herself with the power of inspiring his affection. To be loved was a pleasure she appreciated, but to love as he did was an impossibility to her nature. She pitied him and almost experienced a faint sense of gratitude.

"Do you love me?" he asked breathlessly.

She hesitated a second, and then seeing his anxiety and being unwilling to pain him she answered in so low a voice that it was almost a whisper:

"Yes."

"Then be my wife," he cried out jubilantly.

"No," she answered quickly, "at least not yet."

She reflected that she was still young and all the world lay before her. She must not bind herself. Some great event might happen in her life. Why was she given these ambitious longings if it was not to foreshadow and prepare her for a high destiny? Then she thought of Lord Edgehill, who had danced with her three times on Monday night, and she knew he admired her—his eyes had assured her of that.

"You don't know how I love you. You don't know how I suffer!" Oliver Ormand continued. "When you are absent, I long for you, even though your presence is a torture. My love is so great, and you are so cold."

"People who have loved as you have before marriage become miserable afterward. My father once loved my mother passionately, and now they have been separated for years. Marriage is binding. One should take care not to make mistakes," she said, speaking deliberately.

"Do you trust me?" he asked.

"Implicitly—but I don't trust myself."

"'Perfect love casteth out fear,'" he quoted.

"Then I don't know what true love is," she replied.

"No, your heart is not yet awakened, but if you love me a little I will be satisfied," he exclaimed.

He was sitting on the dais at her feet. Her left hand drooped by her side. He seized and covered it with kisses.

"We must wait. I cannot bind myself," she remarked.

"Waiting means torture," he said plaintively.

"Consenting might mean greater misery in the future."

He got up and walked to the other end of the room.

"I shall love you always, you alone," he murmured.

"Do you wish me to sit longer today?" she asked, glancing at the portrait.

"No. How can I work? I am all up set. My mind is confused."

"Then tomorrow?" she suggested.

"No; I must have time to recover and master myself so that this may not occur again. I plead in vain. I am miserable!"

"But you will finish it, even though I may seem unkind?"

"Finish it? Certainly. No matter what happens, I shall always love you. I cannot help that, even if I would."

She went to the window and called Billie, who was rushing about the tennis court. Then, turning to the artist, she said:

"Shall you go to the Moncriefs' ball tonight?"

"If you will be there—yes."

"Oh, yes, I am going."

"You will keep me some dances?"

"Of course. Come early and secure them."

As she followed her brother into the hall Oliver Ormand once more raised her hand to his lips.

When they had gone, he returned to the studio and walked about restlessly. He knew that such affection as he gave Phillis Cromartie could never be returned by her, and with his love was mingled despair. Yet to become indifferent to her would be an impossibility. His nature was sensitive, his temperament more highly strung than his fellows, by reason of which he had suffered much through life, but never had he known such pain as this, where, stretched upon the rack of suspense, he was torn by doubt. He put away her portrait with its face to the wall, but he could not shut her image from his sight. He went into the garden and strove to read a magazine, but the words he read conveyed no sense to his mind. Tobacco failed to soothe him, and after lunch he set out for a long walk, believing that exercise would tranquilize.

At 8 o'clock that evening the Cromarties sat down to dinner. An hour later Phillis retired to array herself in all the glory of a dazzling costume, for the ball did not begin till 11, and she had therefore two hours to prepare. As she rose from the table her brother Jack, who was to accompany her, declared he would go around to his club and return for her in good time.

"Be sure you do not keep me waiting," Phillis said, with a warning gesture.

Shortly after 11 she came down to the drawing room, where her invalid mother lay on a couch reading a novel. By Phillis' directions every lamp and candle in the apartment had been lighted that she might be seen with due effect. A shimmery mass of creamy gauze and delicate lace, with pearls around her throat and a rose at her breast, she entered, and going toward her mother playfully made a profound courtesy.

"My darling, how beautiful you look!" exclaimed the invalid, raising herself on her pillows.

"Don't I, mother?" the girl answered, gazing into a great mirror between clusters of wax lights.

Never had she looked more brilliant. Excitement had heightened the color of her fair complexion and given luster to her gray green eyes. The small head with its masses of red gold hair was supported by a graceful throat rising from a bust white as alabaster and perfect in mold.

"There will be none there to compare with you," said the indulgent mother, glancing at her proudly.

"I think I am perfect. But where's Jack? I told him not to keep me waiting. If he begins by making me cross, he will spoil my temper."

As she looked again in the mirror she saw the door open and her brother enter slowly. His face was pale, and there was something unusual in his appearance that immediately arrested her attention. The thought flashed upon her that he had been drinking, and with an air of indignation she turned around prepared to stab him with a phrase. As he advanced into the room she saw, however, that his walk was steady and his manner collected.

"What is the matter?" she asked breathlessly.

"Something has happened to—to a friend of ours," he replied.

"A friend!"

"Yes, some one you know very well—a man whom you saw today."

"Oliver Ormand!" she said in a low tone.

"Yes. He is dead!"

"How did it happen!" she asked in a voice which she strove to steady.

"In returning home this afternoon he was crossing Piccadilly at Hyde Park corner, when a cart knocked him down, and one of the wheels passed over his throat. He was carried to St. George's hospital, but before reaching it he was dead."

Phillis sat down. It was by an accident then, and not by suicide, as she at first feared, that he had died. She was spared the remorse that might arise at thought of his self destruction. He was dead, and he had kissed her hand but a few hours ago. The impression of his lips was still almost fresh upon the flesh. And he had loved her—aye, better than any man might ever love her again. His death was a sore loss.

Then she remembered her portrait. It would remain unfinished now and could not hang upon the walls of the academy, as she had so long and so earnestly desired. That was a bitter disappointment. Another would be if his death prevented her from attending this ball, to which she had looked forward with pleasure for weeks. Lord Edgehill would be there, and he would look for her.

Must she lose this opportunity of winning him? That would be an injustice to herself which she could not permit.

"Come," she said, breaking the silence her mother and brother had kept, fearful of disturbing her.

"You surely don't mean to say you will go to the ball tonight?" cried Jack indignantly.

"Why not, pray? Mr. Ormand was not a relative."

"But he was a friend."

"If we are to remain at home because friends die, we should never go out," she replied, her eyes beginning to sparkle.

"Besides people who know he loved you will wonder," said Jack.

"No one will know I have heard of his death."

"But the men at the club told me."

"And they will naturally think you had more tact and consideration than to come and repeat this news and strive to spoil my evening's amusement," she replied angrily.

"I didn't think"—

"No, you never do until it's too late. Life is too short and my pleasures at least too few to sacrifice this," she answered, sweeping indignantly across the room. Then, stooping over and kissing the invalid, who looked pale and frightened, she said: "Good night, mother. I'm going," and left the apartment.

"Jack, go with her, dear, or she will go alone," his mother whispered, and he obeyed.

During their drive Phillis spoke no word. She was vexed that her brother had told her this news and indignant that her wishes should have met with opposition, no matter how slight. Most of all, she was afraid her annoyance should be noticed and her appearance spoiled on this evening when of all others she wished to look to best advantage. On arriving at the Moncriefs' they could hear the strains of a band and the patter of feet. The whole house was ablaze with lights and the hall and staircase crowded with palms and flowers. The effect somewhat relieved Phillis' humor. She resolved to banish the recollection of the last half hour from her mind and to enjoy the dance as if nothing had happened. On the lobbies and around the door of the ballroom were groups of men who stared in admiration as she passed and inquired who she was. The hostess received her with effusion, and presently a number of men whom she knew crowded around and asked her to dance. She did not quite fill her programme, but left spaces here and there which she hoped to fill with Lord Edgehill's name.

Soon she was in the midst of the dancers, whirling about to the delicious strains of a waltz, a glare of lights spinning round her, the odor of a myriad flowers in the atmosphere, a face smiling down into her own, and all thought of what had just passed was erased from her mind. With feverish pleasure the night flitted quickly, having but one drawback. Lord Edgehill had not yet asked her to dance and was paying evident attention to a dark complexioned girl.

Phillis felt indignant and hurt, but she experienced some relief when eventually he came and sat beside her and asked her for a waltz. She received him coolly and pretended to believe she was fully engaged, but on examining her programme saw she had no partner for one far down on the list. This she promised him, and he left. But when the time came to claim her he was beside her once more, and with his arm around her she whirled through the great room as if she were treading on air.

"I thought you would be here tonight," he said when presently they moved at a slower pace. "I should have been much disappointed if you weren't."

"I was undecided about coming," she replied in a tone of indifference, for she had not forgiven him his attentions to the dark girl. "I felt tired today."

"But I'm glad you have come. Isn't this dance delightful?"

"Yes."

She was looking over his shoulder, moving seemingly without voluntary action of her own, lulled by the rhythm of the music and the motion of the dance into a delicious feeling of pleasure, when, on raising her eyes, she caught sight of a face and figure passing at the lower end of the room. Suddenly her heart stopped; she relaxed her hold and would have fallen but for her partner. He almost carried her to a seat.

"What is it?" he asked.

"I felt faint," she answered after a pause. "The room is hot, and I am tired."

"Let me get you some water."

"No, thanks, but may I trouble you to find my brother? I think I had better go home." Her face was white, and her heart fluttered wildly. Who or what was it she had seen? Her mind was confused. She could not, dared not think.

In a few minutes Jack was beside her. She took his arm and whispered, "Are you sure the news you told me this evening is quite true?"

"About poor Ormand? Yes, one of the men who mentioned it saw him knocked down. Why?"

"Because some one strikingly like him passed into this anteroom. Let us see who it is."

The apartment she referred to opened from the ballroom and had no exit of its own. It was occupied by a half dozen chaperons. No man was visible.

"I kept my eyes upon the door so that he could not have come out without my seeing him. Could I have been deceived?" she asked.

Jack made no answer, but looked grave.

"I feel faint again," she murmured, "Take me away, take me home!" She had to wait a considerable time in the hall before the carriage could get to the door. The music was still playing, the lights yet burning, a crowd of loud voiced people were crushing past her, but she saw or heard nothing.

"If it were possible for him to know I had come here, having first heard of his death, what would he think?" she asked herself. And again came the thought: "He said he should love me always, and but a few hours ago he kissed my hand. No one will ever love me like him, nor do I deserve that any one should."

The newspapers next morning had full accounts of the accident which had suddenly cut short a career of promise. Phillis read the details with dry eyes, but she spoke no word. Again and again the thought of the man she had seen enter the anteroom at the Moncriefs' occurred to her, and as often she dismissed it without coming to any conclusion regarding what puzzled her. But during the evening a new light was thrown upon her mind which helped her to a decision. While at dinner Jack mentioned having in the course of the afternoon met Hugh Moreland, who was about to send a big picture to the academy.

"My portrait won't hang there now," Phillis said regretfully.

"Why?" asked her brother.

"Because it is unfinished."

"I think you mistake," replied Jack. "When I met Hugh Moreland, he was going to poor Ormand's house, where he now lies, and we went together. Before leaving we had a look around the studio and saw your portrait. Moreland said it was the best thing Ormand had ever done, and examining it carefully he remarked how fortunate it was that it was quite finished."

Phillis heard in silence. Every word she had spoken to the dead artist during their last interview came back to her. A feeling of cold faintness passed over her, but she strove to retain consciousness and succeeded.

"It is quite finished?" she said, with an effort.

"Yes."

"Then he has kept his word."—Fitzgerald Molloy in Temple Bar.

CHAMBERLAIN'S AMENDMENT TO THE ADDRESS DEFEATED.

The Government Continues to Do Business at the Old Stand—Sir William's Speech—Closure Carried by 9.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—The House of Commons, by a majority of 14, has rejected Mr. Chamberlain's amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's speech. The vote stood 297 against the amendment to 283 in its favor. Mr. Chamberlain's amendment declared that it was contrary to public interest for the time of Parliament to be occupied in discussing measures which, according to the Minister's own statements, have no prospect of becoming laws, while bills involving grave national changes have been announced, on which the judgment of Parliament should be taken without delay.

The Parnellites supported Mr. Chamberlain's amendment.

When the debate on the address in reply to the Queen's speech was resumed in the House of Commons today, Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that the speech made by the Right Hon. Herbert Asquith, the Home Secretary, had TORPEDOED THE AMENDMENT.

Mr. Chamberlain had described the Government as tottering to its fall, yet within ten days it had received three votes of confidence. This belated abortion of an amendment had been moved by a supporter of disestablishment. Why, he asked, did not the Opposition fight under their own flag? Continuing, Sir William denied that the Government or the House of Commons was called upon to consider whether the House of Lords would sanction any bill the Government proposed to introduce. Such a doctrine was on a par with the argument that a Government with a majority ought to resign in favor of the party in the minority.

Mr. Balfour, leader of the Opposition, followed the Chancellor of the Exchequer. He said that Sir William had spoken for an hour, but had boycotted Mr. Chamberlain's amendment. He failed to understand Sir William's objection to the Conservatives

VOTING WITH THE PARNELLITES.

How often, he asked, had the Opposition rescued the Government from its Radical supporters? The Government tried to conceal the real gravamen of the charge against it, which was that finding that the Prime Minister's suggestion of a resolution against the House of Lords has fallen absolutely flat, it had ever since been trying to minimize and explain it away.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer then moved closure, which was adopted by a vote of 279 to 271. The Opposition cheered when the reduced Government majority was announced. The address was then adopted without division

THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE.

Mr. Sydney Buxton, Parliamentary Secretary for the Colonial Office, replying to Mr. Stanley Leighton, M.P. for Shropshire (Conservative), said that the Government had under earnest and active consideration the question of appointing colonial judges to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

SAMOA AND OTHER COUNTRIES.

Sir Thomas Esmonde (anti-Parnellite) questioned the Government in the House of Commons this afternoon on Samoan affairs. Sir Edward Grey, Parliamentary Secretary for the Foreign Office, said that the United States claimed the exclusive right to occupy Pago as a naval coaling station under the provisions of a treaty with Samoa. There had been no intimation of the United States of an intention to surrender this claim. Therefore no arrangement had been effected for the reversion by the interests of the United States. Neither was there any truth in the report that Germany was about to annex Samoa.

QUEEN'S DRAWING-ROOM.

She Was Compelled to Retire Soon After the Beginning.

Special to The Times.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—The Queen held the first drawing room of the season today in Buckingham Palace. There was a large number of debutantes present and a full attendance of all officials and diplomats.

For several years the Queen has been unable to walk unassisted. At today's drawing room Her Majesty sat. She was wheeled in a chair from her apartments to the sovereign's closet, where the Royal Family had assembled, and was wheeled from there to the throne room.

She remained there but a short time, retiring soon after the beginning of the function, leaving the Princess of Wales to take the general presentations on her behalf.

Royal Military College of Canada

INFORMATION FOR CANDIDATES

THE ANNUAL EXAMINATIONS for Cadetships in the Royal Military College will take place at the Head Quarters of the several Military Districts in which candidates reside, in June each year.

In addition to the facilities the College affords for an education in Military subjects, the course of instruction is such as to afford a thoroughly practical, scientific and sound training in all departments which are essential to a high and general modern education.

The Civil Engineering Course is complete and thorough in all branches. Architecture forms a separate subject.

The Court of Physics and Chemistry is such as to lead towards Electrical Engineering, Meteorological Service, and other departments of applied science.

The Obligatory Course of Surveying includes what is laid down as necessary for the profession of Dominion Land Surveyor. The Voluntary Course comprises the higher subjects required for the degree of Dominion Topographical Surveyor. Hydrographic Surveying is also taught.

Length of course four years.

Four Commissions in the Imperial Regular Army are awarded annually.

Board and instruction $200 for each term, consisting of ten months' residence.

For further information apply to the Adjutant General of Militia, Ottawa, before 15th May Police Court Notes.

In the Police Court yesterday morning Fred Timmons was fined $2 and costs or 30 days in jail, in two cases of assault, the charges being preferred by Wm. Pearson and C. Munden. Timmons went to jail. The clothes-wringer swindler, James Elves, desired a magisterial trial. His case was remanded one week. A liquor case was left over till Monday.

The McCarthy Meeting.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy, accompanied by several well known speakers, will arrive in Peterborough tomorrow afternoon, and will be escorted to the Grand Central hotel by members of the McCarthy League. Before going up into the Opera House, he will hold a conference with his supporters. It is the famous politicians own wish that no reception be tendered him. The meeting in the evening will be a large one as a great deal of interest will center in Mr. McCarthy's remarks on live issues.

The Business World.

F. Gaggesberg, grocer, etc., Walkerton, has sold out to George Eckell. Joseph Leblanc, harnessmaker, Crysler, is reported financially embarrassed. John Brogman, general merchant, Davisville, is dead. Joseph Hutchinson, of Webb & Hutchinson, pork packers, London, has assigned to Alfred Robinson. Charles Ward, hotel-keeper, of Palermo, is dead. J. C. McLeod, hotel keeper, Port Elgin, has been succeeded by A. Chabot. H. Hunt & Co., general merchants, Port Elgin, have sold out. At a meeting of the creditors of John Fraser, general merchant, of Lefroy, held at W. A. Campbell's office on Monday, the creditors rejected an offer of 40 cents on the dollar unsecured, and they ordered the stock to be sold on the 27th.

Of Interest to Artists

Mr. D. A. Shaw has moved to his new studio, corner of Hunter and George streets, where he will be prepared to meet with pupils who may desire instruction in any branches of painting, drawing, ect. Mr. Shaw will make a specialty of teaching china and pottery painting. Having studied in Chicago and New York all the latest methods of decorating china, he is in a position to impart the latest ideas in the art. His rooms will be open to the public on and after Thursday, 21st inst., at 3 o'clock—main entrance first door south of Hunter on George; private or ladies' entrance, first door west of George on Hunter. Mr. Shaw has purchased a kiln for firing china, so that the great risk and expense of sending it to the city to be fired will be done away with. tf19

Sons of England Concert.

A crowded house greeted the Marine Minstrels last night in the Sons of England hall and thoroughly enjoyed the program rendered. The first part took up fully 50 minutes, and the audience was kept in a continuous uproar of laughter by the endmen, Messrs. Reynolds and Butcher, while the songs were well rendered. In the farces Mr. Alf. Reynolds took the comedy parts, and showed himself to be a rising young comedian, and, in fact, he would fare favorably with some of the professionals now on the road. Mr. Hiller sang his songs in his usual good style and taste. In the specialties might be mentioned Mr. Harry LaBelle, who executed his slack-wire act in a truly professional style, as well as his part of "Edwin Booth," in the after-piece—his wardrobe and make-up deserving special mention. Messrs. Reynolds, Butcher, Hiller, Turner, Edwards, Gibson and Miller Bros. made up a good chorus in the first part. The Marine Minstrels will appear in the near future in Campbellford.

RAN AWAY FROM HOME.

A Young Girl Found Sobbing Piteously on the King Street Bridge.

Standing sobbing on the sidewalk adjacent to the bridge over the creek on King street, a young girl, very daintily costumed in a dress which matched the beauty of her countenance, was found last evening crying piteously, in a manner that at once attracted attention.

A well-known citizen while returning to his home in the South ward about 11 o'clock was forced to halt on George street at the corner of King street, where he heard cries ascending from some human person near by.

The gentleman was moved. The thought of some person being alone in the cold night appealed to his sensitive instincts and he at once commenced to investigate. Walking west on King street, he listened to the sobs and after he had walked several yards he espied the figure of a young lady leaning against the railing of the King street bridge. He quickly stepped up to the wailing girl and on questioning her, he learned she had ran away from home, as the result of the treatment inflicted severely by a cruel step-mother. The girl said her home was in Smith Falls and in that town she claims her position in society was a creditable one, but the unsympathetic step mother, had caused her to leave friends and father, to gain seclusion from the unhappy home life. But this was not to be and she fared, possibly worse, than at her home in the railroad town. The girl, who would not declare her name boarded the C.P.R. train at Smith Falls yesterday morning and when Peterborough was called, she left the train for a few minutes but the few minutes proved to be many, and she was not in time to step on the moving cars. Luckily the girl had placed her hat and cloak on. But the situation of being left in a town, where she had no friends, fell heavily upon her young mind and she was unable to plan out any way of helping herself. Her sorrow was increased when she found that her satchel containing her purse had been left on the seat in the car. She walked around the streets from 4.48, when the train arrived, until she was found crying, too proud to ask for help and sympathy.

The citizen was informed by the young lady that she had intended going to Toronto to stay with friends but he advised her to return to her father in Smith Falls and the necessary fare was kindly handed the sorrowing sixteen year old maiden. When the midnight C.P.R. express going East halted at the station, the girl, quickly boarded it with the determination to go back home and put up with home life.

NUMEROUS ENTRIES

For the Two Events in the Ice Races This Afternoon.

The races this afternoon on the Little Lake consist of two events, the 3 minute class and the colt race. The former promises to be full of interest as seven entries have been made and seven well known trotters will face the wire. The entries are as follows:

"Essie Carr," owned by Mr. Ed. Brown.
"Harry B.," owned by Mr. H. LeBrun.
"Lulu B.," owned by Mr. R. J. Hewitt.
"Lapadist Chief," owned by Mr. John Cochrane.
"Last Chance," owned by Mr. Samuel Curry.
"Black Jessie," owned by Mr. Dennis Lake.

For the colt's race there were four entries at 10 o'clock last night. This race also promises to be interesting.

The 3-minute event, however, will be the feature of the afternoon. The outside entries are formidable and the local favorites won't have a walk-over by any means. A great deal is expected of "Harry B," who acquitted himself so creditably at Port Perry.

The ice is in splendid condition and about as "fast" as could be desired. The street cars will put on an extra service to accommodate the spectators. The judges are all good men and their duties will be satisfactorily performed. The winners will be handed the amount of the purses won immediately after each race.

For Thursday the entries have already been made to fill the free for all class. The dog race will prove an attraction. The $25 purse will doubtless draw out the best canines in the town. This also promises to be a perfect day's sport.

POPULAR ICE SPORTS.

The Peterborough Hockeyists will Go to Toronto Next Tuesday.

In a friendly match on the rink last night between skips Edmison and Judge Weller, the latter was worsted by the County Police Magistrate by 14 points to 9.

Skips Connal and Dumble played a match in the inter-rink contest with the following results:—

Stanger,	Pentland,
Hay	Schofield,
Salisbury,	Allen,
Connal, skip 19	Dumble, skip.... 13

At 4.48 this afternoon two rinks will go to Toronto to contest in the tankard competion. THE TIMES has made special arrangements to get the results by wire.

THE HOCKEYISTS.

The Peterborough hockey team will play Toronto in the Junior Championship finals on Tuesday night. Through the kindness of Mr. J. P. Hurley, a special train will be arranged for to leave here at 3.30 in the afternoon, and to return after the match the same night. If a sufficient number of citizens will go the special can be assured. A $2 return fare will be the fare, the tickets good for two days. This will be a splendid chance to visit the Queen City, and also to witness what will likely be the most closely contested hockey match of the season.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Gossip of People You Know and Those You Don't Know.

Mr. W. R. Madill, of Toronto, is visiting in town.

Mr. W. E. Campbell, of Norwood, was in town yesterday.

Mr. E. J. Salisbury, Toronto, is at the Snowden House.

Mr. James McLean, of Port Hope, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. E. B. Caverly, of Belleville, is stopping at the Grand Central.

Rev. J. J. Rae, of Peterborough, was in town today on his way to Port Granby.—Port Hope Guide.

Miss Mary McAlpine is visiting friends in Lakefield, the guest of Miss Laura Nicholls.

Miss Emma Olver, Peterborough is spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Z. Olver, Chestnut street.—Port Hope Guide.

VINA EARLS' HOME

Believed to be Near Colborne—She Was Sent From Trenton to Toronto.

A despatch from Trenton says: A small woman, with decayed front teeth, dressed in black, and evidently demented, got off the train here and put up at the Grand Central hotel. She spoke incoherently about her dead husband and said she came from Toronto. She was put on a train and sent back to Toronto. She is not known here.

The foregoing despatch partially corroborates the story of Vina Earls, a lunatic who is at present incarcerated in the Toronto jail. Her home is believed to be near Colborne and her friends will be communicated with.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLARS

In Annual Convention—The Grand Chief's Address.

The annual convention of the Royal Templars of Ontario was opened in Woodstock yesterday morning with upwards of 100 delegates present. The first hour was devoted to a prayer and praise service. The report of the presiding officer, Rev. W. Kettlewell, Paris, was quite an important document containing extended reference to public affairs, matters of historic interest relating to the plebiscite battle, the deputation to the Dominion Cabinet, the peregrinations of the Royal Commission, the debate in Parliament precipitated by Mr. B. F. Flint, Yarmouth, N.S., the advent of Messrs. Dickey and Ferguson, prominent prohibitionists, into the Dominion Cabinet; the course of the test case now before the courts, etc. Peterborough was well represented.

GENERAL SPORTS.

The New York bench show of dogs opened yesterday.

The annual dinner of the Toronto bicycle club will take place on March 1.

Over $300,000 was realized in France last year from the tax on bicycles.

Monday at Brantford the home team defeated four rinks of Bright curlers by 32 shots.

Elberon, 5 to 2, and Churchill Clark, 3 to 5 won the last two events at New Orleans, Monday.

It is said the new American cup defender will be four feet longer than the Vigilant, and will have a fin keel.

The points competition of the Prospect Park curling club was not completed Monday, owing to poor ice.

The Minneapolis club has made an excellent offer to "Kid" Somers, the Toronto catcher, which he has accepted.

The Toronto bicycle club, as well as the Athenaeums, have decided to pay the expenses of their racing men in the future.

The recent International Rugby football match between England and Ireland, played at Dublin, was won by the former by 2 tries to 1.

One week's bucking against the Covington, Ohio, pool rooms cost Plunger Riley Grannan $15,000, $7,000 of which he dropped in one bet on a colt named Merritt.

John S. Johnson and Joe Donoghue are said to be matched to skate three races next Saturday, Sunday and Monday at Minneapolis for a trophy and side bet.

By the victory of Trinity College over Ayr at Berlin yesterday, Queen's and Trinity will be the two hockey teams to contest for the Ontario Hockey Association championship trophy.

At Brampton Monday the Spalding team of Chicago hockeyists tried conclusions with the local seven, losing by a score of 7 goals to 5. Owing to the size of the rink only five men a side competed.

Secretary Ogden, of the Ontario Jockey club, has completed the programme for the Canadian running meets. There are 30 races in all of the O. J. C. series, with an average of $700 given for each event.

On Sunday last a hundred-mile bicycle race for the championship of England and France took place at Paris. The Englishman, Linton, was in poor condition, and the Frenchman, Huret, won in 4.07.47 3 5.

The semi-final tie in the O. H. A. series was played at Berlin on Monday evening, between Trinity College, of Toronto, and Ayr. The rink was crowded, and the match was a most exciting one throughout. The Toronto players finally won by a score of 10 goals to 7.

An organizer wanted for every county.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check its almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

ENGLISH PRESS COMMENT.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The Daily News will comment as follows of divisions in the House of Commons last night: We need scarcely say that there is not the slightest truth in rumors which connected the cabinet with the divisions. The time has passed for inquiring whether the ministers will appeal to the country or press on their legislative proposals. Their choice has been made already and it cannot be altered without disaster.

THE SAMOAN CRISIS.

AUCKLAND, N. Y., Feb. 20.—There is a rumor that German warships will go to Samoa in May next with the intention of subduing and disarming the natives and of gaining control of the Islands although it is not supposed that the German government proposes to annex the Island.

DRAMATIC AUTHOR DEAD.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—Aug. Vacquerie, the dramatic author, politician and journalist, is dead. M. Vacquerie was born at Villequier on Nov. 19, 1819. His first journalistic work was done in 1848, when he founded with the two brothers of Victor Hugo L'Evenement. In 1869, in conjunction with P. Maurice Rochefort and the Hugo brothers, he started Rappel. He wrote many dramas and comedies which were produced at the Porte Saint Martin Gymnase and Theatre Francaise.

THE COLCHESTER ELECTION.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—An election was held yesterday at Colchester to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the resignation of Mr. Naylor Leyland. It resulted in a victory for the Liberal candidate, Sir Wetman Pearsons, who was defeated at the last general election, with Naylor-Leyland as his opponent, by a majority of 61. The Conservative candidate today was Capt. Vorker, who was strongly supported by the Irish Unionist Alliance. Great interest was taken in the contest by politicians throughout the country, and a number of well-known speakers took part in the campaign. The vote was: Pearsons, 2,559; Vorker, 2,298. At the last election the result was: Naylor-Leyland, 2,173; Pearsons, 2,112.

LATEST FROM CHINA.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—A despatch from Shanghai to the Central News says that Japan refused to negotiate with China at Port Arthur or anywhere else but in Japan. Japanese warships are reported off Formosa and on the Chinese coast between Swato and Pong Kong. General Ho-Ming, who is now at Kanchow, has been ordered to join Liu Kun Yi's army. He is reputed to be a very brave soldier. A secret society called Thaiial, numbering 50,000 persons, recently planned an outbreak at Pekin, but the plot became known to the authorities and it was nipped in the bud. A Manchuria official, Ting Kung, has been appointed Tao Tai of New Chwang, with the powers of a provisional judge.

KHEDIVE OF WAR WITH NUBAR.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—There is a further stir in Egypt affecting the position of the Ministry. The Khedive, it seems, want to oust Nubar Pasha, President of the Ministerial Council, whom the English support. In an article in El Ahram, which, according to the Times' correspondent at Cairo, must be directly from the Khedive virtually charges Baron Cromer, the British agent and consul-general in Egypt with distorting what passed between the Khedive and the Baron at their last audience. The editor of El Ahram is a scion, who is under French protection and who is known to be the Khedive's chief adviser. The Times correspondent imputes the falsehood mentioned to the Khedive and declares that the Ministry are entitled to British support, and that if it is withdrawn there will be a reaction from the triumph of the Khedive that will imperil the profession made under British control.

CRUISERS FOR RUSSIA.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The Times will print the following despatch tomorrow from to the reinforcements leaving here for the far east during February more than 1,600 men will leave during March. Heavy seige guns, ammunition and other war materials will also be sent to Vladivostock. The government has decided to build two more cruisers.

VANDERBILT'S NECKLACE.

A Canadian Tramp Deported

BUFFALO, Feb. 20.—James Taylor, a Canadian, was deported by Immigration Inspector De Barry yesterday. He was arrested Monday by the police on the charge of vagrancy.

To Restore Free Coinage.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—In the House of Commons today, Robert L. Everett, Liberal member for Woodbridge, Suffolk, gave notice of his intention to move a resolution that an international agreement to restore free coinage and the full legal tender power of silver is desirable.

STOLE AT PRAYER.

At a Revival Meeting a Young Woman Kneels by Another to Plead With Her to Mend Her Ways and Has Her Pocket Picked.

Special to the Times.

CROWN POINT, Ind., Feb. 20.—Pastor Watson, who is conducting a protracted meeting in this city at the Methodist church, was interrupted during his sermon Sunday night by a woman's voice in the audience, which said:—"I have been robbed in this church." She was Miss Minnie Houk, a school teacher, who had just come to town and had drawn a month's salary. When Preacher Watson requested that all members take it upon themselves to try and convert some person in the audience Miss Houk kneeled down before Mrs. Minnie Mitchell and told her she should mend her ways. While she was doing this Mrs. Mitchell robbed Miss Houk of her pocketbook, containing $25 and valuable papers. Mrs. Mitchell left the church during the services, and she was suspected. Sheriff Hayes found the remnants of the purse in the stove, and also found the money sewed in the lining of Mr. Mitchell's cap. The Mitchells are both in jail.

THE CUP AND THE KISS.

Milwaukee Ministers Have New Ideas Concerning Communion Goblets

Special to the Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 20.—The Methodist ministers of the city at their monthly meeting yesterday discussed the question of individual communion cups. The Rev. Mr. Iwert read a paper on the subject, giving the arguments advocated on both sides of the question. Mr. Iwert favored the use of two cups, one for the women and one for the men. The Rev. E. D. Huntley of Summerfield Church created considerable stir by saying he did not believe in any cup. He believed in a wine-laden wafer. This plan Dr. Huntley thought practical, and if the wafers could be manufactured it would do away with the discussions and objections regarding the various methods of distributing the wine. The Rev. Robert Sherin declared the individual cup to be a fad. He did not object to the mustache dragging in the cup. The women, he said, did not "object to the mustache, but rather liked it." The Rev. Dr. Eaton did not think there was any more danger in the cup as a means of communicating microbes than in kissing.

HER MAJESYT'S RECEPTION.

A Court Function that Makes Things Boom in London.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The Queen's drawing room at Buckingham Palace, which was held this afternoon, was largely attended owing to the great improvement in the weather. The debutantes all wore white with diamond ornaments. The ladies having the entree mostly wore violet or dark blue, and carried large bouquets of orchids, lilies of the valley or roses. The Prince of Wales was absent, owing to an attack of influenza, the result of a cold which he contracted while skating. The Princess of Wales and her daughters were present.

The Dowager Empress Frederick, Princess Christian and all of the ladies of the Royal family accompanied the Queen into the throne-room at three o'clock.

A HOME RULE IN CAMBRIDGE.

Lord Acton Appointed Regious Professor of Modern History.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb 20.—Lord Acton has been appointed Regious Professor of Modern History at Cambridge University in succession to the late Prof. Seeley.

"Lord Acton," the Times observes, "probably is the first Roman Catholic who has held high office in either Cambridge or Oxford University since the reign of James II.

"Lord Acton is a pupil and disciple of Dr. Dollinger, and is an advanced Liberal of the German academic type. He is believed to have been one of the first English politicians to favor Home Rule for Ireland and is said to have helped seduce Mr. Gladstone into that heresy.

"The fitness of Lord Rosebery's selection must be judged by its results."

ADJUTANT AND PAYMASTER.

A Military Assault That is Adjusted in the Police Court.

Special to the Times.

BELLEVILLE, Ont. Feb. 20.—In the assault case of Adjutant Dunlop vs. Paymaster Biggar, of the 15th Battalion, the police magistrate this morning dismissed the charge without costs to either party, as he considered the action of the defendant justified his course by the threatening conduct of the plaintiff.

NOTHING IN IT.

One of Uncle Sam's Illustrations of Elongated Veracity—A Denial.

Special to The Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20.—Hon. John Costigan, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, today denied all knowledge of another Behring Sea Commission being appointed by Great Britain, Russia and United States, as stated in despatches from Washington. He believes the report is a fabrication, pure and simple, and made up without the slightest foundation.

ENGLAND IN EGYPT.

A Sore Point with France—An Opinion that Reveals Her Feelings.

Special to the Times.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—The Journal des Debats, commenting on a despatch from Cairo to the London Times, dealing with Egyptian affairs, says: "The English press seems to have lost the respect which is due to the Khedive, and also to have lost its capability to appreciate the real position of affairs. It is France's task to arouse Europe from her apathy and cause a demonstration of sympathy with Egypt and against Great Britain. Inquiries at all the Chancelleries show that the whole of Europe considers itself wronged by the indefinite occupation of Egypt by England."

Canadian Cayuga Indians Make an Appeal to Albany.

Special to the Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Senator Person's bill authorizing the Board of Claims to hear the claims of the Cayuga Indians living in Canada under the former treaties with the State, also to hear the claims of the Indians for money due from the sale of lands, was favorably reported in the Senate today.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE WILL BE OPENED THIS AFTERNOON.

Arrangement of the Seats—Patrons will Sit Together on the Left of the Speaker—They were Divided at First but Kicked.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—To-morrow afternoon under the usual military escort his Honor the Lieutenant Governor will open the first session of the new Legislature

Promptly at three o'clock he will walk into the assembly room of the Parliament buildings in Queen's park and find the Speaker's chair vacant. On account of that intentional and customary oversight he will walk out again and wait around until a speaker is chosen. This is the usual custom. W. D. Balfour will then by vote of the members be authorised to attach "Hon." to his name and take the chair. When the Lieutenant Governor is informed of the fact he will at once return and deliver the speech from the Throne.

WHERE THEY WILL SIT.

As more than half the members of the late Legislature could not stand to stay away from home by their constituents, there have been a good many changes in the location of seats in the House.

On the Opposition side George F. Marter occupies W. R. Meredith's old place. Next to him will be J. P. Whitney, then Dr. Willoughby next Col. Kerns, Dr. Ryerson, O. A. Howland, Andrew Miscampbell and Thomas Crawford. These comprise the Conservatives in "leader row."

Next them in the same front row will sit two Liberals—Messrs. Charlton and Ferguson. Then come the Patrons. They have seats on the Opposition side, next the entrance. First will be leader Haycock, then his first lieutenant, John Caven, of Prince Edward, while the next and last front couple are McNaughton and Pardo. The Globe used to claim the latter as an out-and-out Liberal, but, for all that, he will henceforth loom up among the Patron leaders.

"OLLIE" MOWAT'S FOLLOWERS.

On the Government side Sir Oliver will have his usual place. Hon. A. S. Hardy will come next and then in order Hon. G. W. Ross, Hon. J. M. Gibson, Hon. John Dryden, Nicholas Awrey, Thos. Gibson, David Wood, Evanturel, Robillard, Dana and Biggar. There will be one vacant chair. It has hitherto been occupied by the member from Haldimand. It will remain there for Dr. Baxter, and if Patron Senn again knocks him out he will have one of the best seats in the House.

Tom. Hobbs, the London victor, will sit almost directly behind the Premier, and next Hon. Wm. Harty. Next him on the other side will come Dr. McKay, the Liberal whip, and W. M. German, of Welland. Mr. Hobbs and Mr. German are evidently regarded as coming men, from the position they are given.

AROUND THE BUILDINGS.

Early arrivals were on hand this morning. The Patron leader and several of his followers visited the House and looked around. Mr. Balfour, the coming speaker, was also around shaking hands. Mr. Marter has been up to take possession of the room he is entitled to as leader of the Opposition. A secretary is thrown in with the room.

The question now arises, is not Mr. Haycock as Patron leader also entitled to a private room and a secretary.

PLAIN TIN TRUNKS.

The supplies this year are not so elaborate as in former years. Uncle Dick Tooley or poor John Smith would be disgusted to find, if they only happened to be on hand, that a hard hearted and economical Government had deprived them of card cases, fancy toothpicks, ornamental portfolios and other necessaries. The wave of retrenchment has caused the Queen's Printer to issue nothing but plain tin trunks filled only with absolute necessaries in the way of stationery.

Admission will be by ticket.

J. R. Stratton will succeed Speaker Balfour as chairman of the Printing Committee.

Nicholas Awrey will again grace the head of the table when the Public Accounts Committee meets.

Hon. Mr. Harty has had the galleries of the assembly room draped to improve its accoustic properties. The curtains are also an ornament.

WON BY THE PATRONS.

The first struggle between the Patron group and the Provincial Government has preceded the formal opening. The Patrons of Industry members desired to be seated together as a party on the Opposition side of the House, but were filled with ire when they learned that the powers that be had disposed of them in quite a contrary way. They were calmly informed that about half of them had been placed on the Government side, away from their leader and ignoring their presence as Patrons. This was one reason for Mr. Haycock's early appearance on the scene yesterday. He made it clearly understood that the Patrons were not built that way, and would insist on setting together as a party and to be recognized as such during the session. As shown in the foregoing allotment of seats the "farmers" held the upper hand.

SENN IS UNSEATED.

John Senn, the Patron M. P. P., for Haldimand, was unseated to-day after a trial at Osgoode Hall which lasted only ten minutes.

Evidence was put in merely of the fact that he was an issuer of marriage licenses at the time of the election. Senn is not disqualified.

The Ging Murder.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 20.—In the Hayward murder trial to-day Frank Erhart, who was summoned by his brother when the body was found, gave evidence of Blixt in one important particular. He swore that he had found in the dirt near where the body lay a heel mark and then a toe mark of a lady's shoe. There was also the trace of where the boot had dragged to where the body lay. This evidence went to show that Miss Ging's body was pushed out of the buggy feet first instead of head first as the murderer testified. Of course this was to overthrow the theory that the fracture of the skull and the contusion were caused by the fall from the buggy, and would help to impeach the evidence of Blixt.

George Grindall was an important witness for the defence. He was standing on Fifth avenue north, between Fourth and Fifth streets, at seven o'clock or thereabouts on December 3, the night of the murder. He had an appointment with a young woman at the place named, and was waiting for her. Standing a short way from him was a man, "like that man there," said the witness, pointing to Attorney Swestaer. Grindall saw Miss Ging drive up. The man he had seen waiting there entered the buggy, which he drove away. This point is about a block from the hotel, whence Miss Ging started on the fatal ride. The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 21, 1895.

Good morning!

With war between Chili and Argentina imminent, war between Mexico and Guatemala threatening, revolution in most of the Central American republics, insurrection in Peru and internal troubles still brewing in Brazil, the lower half of this continent refuses to take a back seat from Asia as a theater of sensations.

Queen Victoria's rheumatism is causing her no end of bother, and the poor old lady is having a hard time of it getting around these days. It is one of the odd things of this world that all the honors of life and all the wealth men wot of cannot keep rheumatism at bay of head off the Angel of the Darker Brink. We all seem to be jogging around inside the circle.

Mr. Laurier's policy on the Manitoba schools question is found in his statement that if the Manitoba schools are Protestant schools, as alleged, instead of public schools as the Manitoba Legislature alleges, it is an outrage and a shame. The Conservative policy is wrapped up somewhere in the assertion that when the question comes up for consideration the grand old party will be found to be true to its grand old colors. And there you are When the views of the opposing politicans are so clean cut and well defined on this issue there is no excuse for the average elector not known exactly where he is.

Times are not only hard for business people generally but they are extraordinarily rough on the railroads. It is a question if there is a trunk road on the continent that is making money now. The Grand Trunk shows a deficit of £172,000 during the last six months; the Chicago & Grand trunk is in the hole to the tune of £46,600 for the year. These gloomy figures of Grand Trunk losser are somewhat offset by the fact that the Detroit & Grand Haven earned £83,800 in 1894, reducing the Grand Trunk deficit for 1894 to £133,800—but a deficit of even £133,800 is no joke, and means that no dividend will be declared. The annual meetings of the Grand Trunk are usually wild and exciting affairs, but this year's will probably be wilder and more exciting than ever, and Sir Henry Tyler will be hauled over the coals in fine style. It must be borne in mind, however, that the Grand Trunk is not the only road that is losing money nowadays.

The Examiner pretends not to believe that the Trent Valley Canal will be completed. In fact it says that the present activity is altogether due to the approaching elections; that as soon as they are over we will hear no more of the canal for for another four or five years. We certainly cannot agree with our contemporary. There is little doubt that the government is now in earnest, and that at least two sections—Peterborough and Lakefield section and Balsam Lake—will be placed under construction, and completed within the next couple or three years. It would be interesting to know what the Examiner's party would do towards completing the canal should Mr. Laurier become premier. We understand the Liberal party is opposed to the scheme all through. Half a loaf is better than no bread, and we fancy the people who really desire to see the canal completed will support the party who are even doing it in piecemeal fashion rather than the one which is openly opposed to it.

TRUSTS CORPORATION.

Sixth Annual Meeting of the Shareholders—An Encouraging Showing for the Past Year.

The sixth annual meeting of the shareholders of the Trusts Corporation of Ontario was held at their offices, corner of King and Jordon street, Toronto, on Tuesday, the 12th February, at 12 o'clock noon.

The President the Hon. J. C. Aikins, occupied the chair and among those present were:—Hon. S. C. Wood, Edward Martin, Q.C, W. H. Cawthra, A. A. Nairn, J. H. Plummer, John Catto, Donald Mackay, J. L Blaikie, William Gordon, Wm. Cooke, Thomas Long, Alexander Manning, John Stuart, W. D. Matthews, Hugh Ryan, J. J. Kenny, Matthew Leggatt and others.

The Manager, Mr. A. E. Plummer, having been appointed Secretary of the meeting, read the report of the directors, which showed that after providing for dividends of 6 per cent. up to and including that payable on the 1st January, 1895, the remuneration of the directors from the commencement of the company's business on January, 1894, writing off the balance of preliminary expenses, and settling the claims of the company's late solicitors, the sum of $14,738 was carried forward to the credit of the profit and loss account. The directors add:—

It will be seen from a comparison of these statements with those of former years that a most satisfactory increase has been made in the accumulation of our trusts. The additional business acquired by the corporation during the year, embracing administrations, executorships trusteeships, and similar offices, amounted to $2,141,000 in actual assets, and, after winding up a large number of estates, and distributing the funds to beneficiaries and others, the total value of trust assets remaining in the hands of the corporation amounts to over four million dollars.

In addition to this, a large number of wills, appointing the corporation executor and trustee, have been lodged in our vaults for safe custody, or reported to us for record upon our books.

These various trusts have been committed to us from all parts of Ontario, and afford the best possible evidence not only of the steady and spreading growth of our business, but also that the duties devolving upon the company in the past have been discharged in such a manner as to ensure continued confidence and support.

Your directors regret to announce the death of one of their number during the past year, viz., Mr. George W. Kiely, who had been a friend and director of the corporation since its inception. His selection of the corporation as his executor and trustee was a mark of confidence which, coming from one so well qualified to judge of its capabilities, cannot but be gratifying to the shareholders.

In accordance with the resolution passed last year, the remainder of our authorized capital has been issued and subscribed, thus increasing our capital stock to $1,000,000.

In moving the adoption of the report the President made the following remarks:—

It affords me great pleasure in presenting such a satisfactory statement of our business, which during the year almost doubled the accumulation of trusts placed with us since the company was organized. This is all the more gratifying as our chief aim and object has always been the building up of the business of administering estates, our duties as an investing company being solely confined to moneys remaining in our hands as trustees, or guardians after winding up estates or placed with us on special trusts.

During the year the following business was acquired by the corporation, I speak of course in round figures:—

38 administrations, amounting to	$860,000
30 trusteeships	250,000
3 executorships	760,000
8 guardianships	260,000
2 committeeships	5,000
2 receiverships	6,000

That the management has given every attention to prompt and speedy winding up of estates placed with us is evident, as during the past year we disposed of 23 administrations, 2 executorships, 2 guardianships, 1 committeeship, and 1 trusteeship, and I have much pleasure in saying that I have read more than one letter from solicitors in charge of estates complimenting the Manager on the prompt and courteous manner in which the administration had been conducted.

Our safe deposit department shows an increase in box rents for the year, but our storage branch was not so largely patronized during the summer. No doubt this department feels the general economy of the times, as well as other branches of business. After allowing for wages, light, etc., the safe deposit vaults yield at present about 9 per cent. upon our investment, which is a fairly good return.

The report was then adopted, and the usual resolutions passed. The election of the directors was then proceeded with Messrs. Emilius Jarvis and Frederick J. Stewart being appointed scrutineers, who reported the unanimous election of the following directors:—

Hon. J. C. Aikins, J. L. Blaikie, Sir R. J. Cartwright, Wm. Cooke, Hon. J. R. Gowan, Wm. Hendrie, J. J. Kenny, Matthew Leggatt, Thomas Long, Chas. Magee, Alexander Manning, Hon. Peter McLaren, W. D. Matthews, B. B. Osler, E. B. Osler, Hugh Ryan, John Stuart, Hon. S. C. Wood.

At a subsequent meeting of the board the Hon. J. C. Atkins was re-elected President, and Sir R. J. Cartwright and Hon. S. C. Wood re-elected Vice-Presidents.

TWO DEAD SOLDIERS.

"Who ever saw a dead cavalryman?"

It was the common sneer from the ranks of other branches of the service.

There was no attempt to disguise this contempt from those who wore the yellow braid and rode around with noisy and cumbersome blades of steel that looked so formidable and were yet so harmless.

The very air of superiority with which this shining relic of a bygone age was worn was tantalizing to the humble foot soldier. The latter carried on his sturdy shoulder the power to pick one of these fine fellows off as far as he could see a horse. In the "rally by fours" a handful of infantry might successfully withstand a score—in the "hollow square" route a squadron. The cavalry always fooled around the enemy until it provoked him to fight—at safe distance, of course—and then retired and left the infantry and artillery to do the fighting. It was only after the battle had been won and the enemy was in retreat that the cavalry was called in. It was good to kick a man after he was down. That was all. Didn't every infantryman know that?

The cavalry seemed always to break camp last and reach camp first, so as to cast dust and mud upon the weary foot soldier as it passed and taunt him with affected ease when he dragged his aching limbs in at the close of day. On the long march as rear guard it drove him out of the fence corners and goaded him with its sharp steel when he would fain lie down forever. It was the police who ran him down during his predatory attempts to replenish his larder from the stores of the enemy.

Every infantryman had these contemptible qualifications of the cavalryman down pat and never lost an opportunity of reminding the latter of his general worthlessness. Whenever and wherever the two met the mounted man had to stand a good deal of guying, and it was not always good naturedly administered. From the roadside on the march the passing cavalry were always greeted with a regular fusillade of sarcasm and showered with all the playful invective that could be invented. The cavalryman grew so accustomed to this that he rarely paid any attention to it. He accepted it as incidental to the service.

Being an infantryman myself, I was early imbued with the prejudices of my arm of the service and poked fun at the saber that might, with equal justice, have been applied to the bayonet. Yet I had recovered from them long before the government began to turn its cavalry into mounted infantry and drill its mounted men to fight on foot.

It was a warm, sultry day in 1862. We had been marching and countermarching across Kentucky and Tennessee for weeks—rebuilding railroads, guarding trains, restoring telegraph wires and making a continual struggle to maintain the threatened and reopen the broken lines of communication with the north. There was more or less fighting in front and rear every day, though the casualties were few and known only to the advance guard and the particular command which covered the rear on that particular day. During these long marches of the Bragg campaign every division took its turn in front and rear, each brigade of that division alternating on the skirmish line or extreme post. If there was any fighting on that day, that particular command was in for it as much as it could stand, but the fighting was the lightest part of its work usually, for companies of infantry were deployed right and left, supporting a squadron of cavalry that scoured the crossroads and felt the enemy in front when occasion seemed to demand it, and being supported by a section of full battery of light artillery. The latter now and then shelled a suspicious wood and dispersed larger and more impudent bands of the enemy, who sought to harass the northern army on its march. Scouts and sharpshooters swarmed on either flank and had many a brush with the bushwhacker, now and then bringing in a gray prisoner or two or a deserter.

As the commanding general, accompanied by his brilliant staff and followed by his picked bodyguard, usually rode with the leading brigade, all of this work was done under his official eye, which fact greatly stimulated the troops. Brigade and regimental commanders were great sticklers for the right of the line, and every private soldier was eager for the approving glance of the commander. Ambition and vanity are entitled to much that has been laid at the feet of patriotism. A single word of praise from the lips of a popular commander has sent thousands unflinchingly to certain death.

On this particular morning our division was early on the road, but not until shortly after daylight, when our brigade was ordered to the front, did we suspect that we were to be honored with the advance. Camp after camp had been passed, and in these the men were yet getting breakfast. Prior information of such movements never reaches the common soldier, and even the company officers never know anything about it beyond surmise. It was only when he had gone as far as the picket line and been halted there that we understood. A dashing young officer, followed by a clattering orderly, rode up to our [illegible] colonel and rode away again. Long [illegible] the order reached the place in the [illegible] where I bore a rifle we had divined [illegible] it was and greeted it with a yell.

[illegible] the same moment I saw our young [illegible] lieutenant conversing with an officer [illegible] the reserve picket guard with a [illegible] face. He walked over to us.

"[illegible]se boys had a lively time last night,"

"Th[illegible]

"Fou[illegible] the cavalry outpost driven in and [illegible]ily. [illegible] prisoners, probably."

[illegible] two [illegible]" was the general comment.

"Of [illegible] it was still going up along our

The [illegible] it really seemed to me that this [illegible] bu[illegible] was no funny business; that the boys were shouting before they got out of the woods.

"We are evidently getting nearer the main body of the enemy," continued the lieutenant.

"Well, I should hope so!" exclaimed our fifth sergeant, with an oath. "And if we don't catch him pretty soon my feet will be worn out so I can't run."

Which was putting it pretty aptly, for most of us were already showing signs of being "on our uppers" from constant marching on pike and railroads. To the soldier worn down by camp or march or fort building nothing is more welcome than the immediate prospect of a fight. It is not courage, it is not patriotism; it is ennui, disgust, desperation.

The extreme advance fell upon our regiment, a fact that was immediately demonstrated by the command for us to move forward and deploy as skirmishers. Owing to the supposed near presence of the enemy, the entire regiment was brought into action, a battery of artillery supporting the center and the rest of the brigade acting as reserves. We privates knew only what we saw and rarely knew what to expect till we got to it. For all we knew this might be the preliminary of a battle. All we had to do was to obey orders, however, and take things as they came. So up the broad stone pike we went in quick time, the artillery rumbling along in the rear, while the rest of the brigade rested along the roadside. From the elevation where we first paused, about half a mile beyond the picket reserve, we could look back upon the gathering columns of the main body of our army.

It was a royal sight! The rising sun fell upon countless files of twinkling bayonets and burnished barrels and bathed the waving lines and patches of blue with a richer coloring. The flags and guidons fluttered here and there in the gentle breeze like so many gaudy butterflies over beds of violets, while the red flashes of the reflected sun marked the glowing brasses of the artillerymen. The faint strains of the distant bugle came breathing on the morning air and the steady, rythmic, swaying motion of the sea of steel showed us that the army was on the move.

"Deploy as skirmishers!"

The battalion opened its shining wings. Over the fences, across the fields, skirting the opposite wood, down in the meadows, on the double quick for position. The scared thrushes abandon the stubble in a fright; the screaming jays flutter into the deeper undergrowth; the ground squirrel dashes for his earthly covert. Right well they scent the hunter, but the hunter is after higher game.

The line bends in the center outwardly, like a great bow, the ends of which are not in sight. The strong center lies upon the road, and the column in reserve, with its colors and cannon, forms the deadly explosive arrow, in readiness to be launched upon the foe.

"For-war-r-rd!"

The command comes echoing and re-echoing down the scattered line from captain to lieutenant, lieutenant to sergeant, in unnecessary iteration, for at the first sound of the bugle the men spring forward simultaneously, so eagerly and so quickly indeed that the hoarse voice of the major, dismounted and walking in our rear, roars out with a torrent of imprecations:

"Captain, restrain your men! Steady there! You fools, you've got a big day's work cut out for you!"

My place falls somewhere in the left center and within plain sight of the reserves as long as the ground is open. The line is unusually strong, and from this we argue that business is expected. We did not know until after the war that another column of our army was advancing upon parallel lines with us, and that another set of skirmishers, nearly touching our elbows, was sweeping the country to our right.

The last night's picket line has been reached, and as the men relieved fall back they hastily show us the bullet scars upon the tree trunks to vouch for the night's experience. We dive into the woods now, knowing that we are covering fresh ground, and the possibility of being potted by the cowardly bushwhacker or coming suddenly upon gray uniforms makes the situation keenly interesting. Every eye is strained to pierce the dark shadows. With guns at a low trail we slink beneath the brush, clamber over fallen logs, picking out the most accessible places, each for himself, and all with that alertness and stealthy tread that distinguish the hunters of men. We never for an instant lose sight of the fact that there are other human hunters somewhere in the unexplored front, just as keen for blood as we, and just as likely to get it. This knowledge gives a zest to the chase experienced by no other hunters on earth. Every nerve is strung to the highest tension. The muscles are rubber, and the sinews are pliant steel. The blood is quicksilver.

Tiger hunting in the jungles? Bah! There is no game like your armed and bloodthirsty fellow man!

And thus we go, through wood and swamp and clearing, and not a living soul, eh?

Only a passing hornet, but how it stops the circulation for the instant!

Ping! Spat!

Zip, ping, zip, spat!

Yes, it is a hornet whose sting is death!

"Steady, lads!" cries the major.

Our major is inclined to be fat, and he is unaccustomed to the sort of exercise he has been taking. He has stepped into a bog somewhere, and his uniform is splattered with mud, his face is scratched with briers, he sweats like a harvest hand. But the major is of undaunted courage and quick of conception, albeit given to strange oaths and many of them.

"Steady, lads! They come from the farther wood. Never mind! See yonder house? Down upon it, sergeant, with two fours! Down upon the house now—double quick!"

It is a southern farmhouse in the middle of the fields, directly ahead as we emerge from the wood, a typical farmhouse, with its outlying cabins and cribs and fences and the usual long poplar shaded drive leading up from the road. As we close down upon it with a light hurrah two or three puffs of smoke rise from the other corner of the field at the back, and as many bullets come singing merrily across the stubble. To the right, resting on the pike, we catch a glimpse of the reserve, and beyond the straggling line of skirmishers stretches over the rolling fields.

Scrambling over the fences into the yard, expecting every moment a shower of bullets which never comes, we inadvertently stumble over a bench full of bee hives, sending the whole row in confusion to the ground. The bees are the only enemies in sight, but they attack the last man over with such concentrated fury that two bluecoats are sent rolling and yelling on the grass, only to be laughed at by their more fortunate comrades. Their noise brings the sergeant on the scene just in time to get a sting immediately under one eye that soon closes that organ for the day. They are evidently Confederate bees.

(To be continued in our next.)

WICKED CHICAGO.

A Scheme to Purify It and to Establish an Honest Municipal Government—The Mayor to Have Big Powers and $10,000 a Year.

Special to the Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 10.—There will be introduced simultaneously in the House and Senate today a measure that if passed will completely reorganize the city government of Chicago. It was prepared by the Legislative Committee of the Civil Federation.

By its provisions the city will be almost in absolute control of the Mayor instead of the departments as now exist. The Mayor will have a Cabinet to be known as the Board of Control. It does away with the election of the City Treasurer and provides for the election of one alderman from each ward for a term of two years and twelve aldermen at large for a term of four years, the latter to be on the minority representation plan.

THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

The Board of Control will consist of the Comptroller, the head of the Department of Finance; the Commissioner of Public Works, the head of that department; the Treasurer, the head of the Department of Public Funds and Disbursements; the Commissioner of Public Safety in charge of the Police, Fire and Health departments, and the Corporation Counsel, the legal officer of the city. The office of City Attorney is abolished.

SALARIES OF MAYOR AND ALDERMEN.

The salary of the Mayor is to be $10,000 and of heads of departments $8,000 a year. Salaries of aldermen are to be $2,500 a year, and they will not be allowed to hold any other office. The Mayor is to have power to remove any of his Cabinet at any time, and he is given absolute veto power. The Board of Control shall say in what banks the city's money shall be deposited, and such banks must give bonds. All franchises must be passed upon by the Board of Control and then sold to highest bidder at public auction.

AN ELECTION IN APRIL.

That is What the Knowing Ones at Ottawa Predict.

OTTAWA, Feb. 19.—The Supreme Court sat today, when a start was made with the maritime province appeal case Fairbank v. Queen. This is a land expropriation case whereby property of the appellant was expropriated for the Shubenacadie. The defendant, though not a lawyer, argued his own own case.

That "pent up feeling" over the political situation is not so keen today, and politicians have about concluded that there will be no session. All the printers at the Bureau started on the voters' lists this morning, and they will be kept exclusively at them until completed. On all sides is predicted an election in April.

LAURIER IN MONTREAL.

A SERIOUS PANIC AT SOHMER PARK BARELY AVERTED.

The Question of Steam-Fire Engines in Toronto – Purchased a Merryweather – Toronto Student Incident.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—Mr. Wilfred Laurier, leader of the Liberal party in the Dominion, addressed a Liberal meeting of nearly ten thousand people at Sohmer Park last night. Mr. Laurier who spoke in French, dealt with the minor issues before the electors, covering the same ground as already covered in his previous speeches. He scored the government for not announcing its decision in regard to the general elections, and challenged the ministers to make some announcement of its plans. Regarding the Manitoba school question Mr. Laurier said the government was evidently afraid of it. It was a question that had to be settled, but it required men of courage to settle it, and the only policy that the government seemed to have was one of procrastination. Mr. Laurier said that his attitude in this question was what it had always been. He had frequently said, and he repeated it, that if the schools were Protestant as had been represented it was an outrage on the Catholic minority, and justice demanded that the question should be settled as speedily as possible. He promised that if the Liberals were returned to power they would see that justice was done to all. Mr. Laurier also denounced protection, which he claimed had been an injury rather than a blessing to the country. Mr. Laurier was loudly cheered.

Mr. H. G. Joly endorsed Mr. Laurier and speeches were also delivered by Messrs. Tarte, Devlin and others.

THE QUESTION OF FIRE ENGINES.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—At the city council meeting today there was considerable discussion on the question of steam fire engines. The experts engaged by the city, recommended the purchase of two Merryweathers of 1,200 U. S. gallons capacity, at a cost of $7,000 each. Mr. Ronald, on behalf of the Canadian engine, offered to supply the same sort of engine of quite as large capacity for $6,000 or $11,000 for two. The debate largely took the direction of a discussion on home manufacture versus foreign. Ald. McMurrich was, he said, rather disappointed that the experts had not recommended at least one Canadian engine, but there seemed to be a little doubt that the Merryweather was the superior engine. The members spoke of the Canadian manufacture as desirable, but they did not apply the principle. Every gentleman around the board wore imported broadcloth. Why did they not wear Canadian tweed? (Laughter.) Simply because the other was better. He must, reasoning along this line, support the report of the experts.

After considerable discussion it was agreed to buy one Merryweather at once, and to test the Ronald against it when the Merryweather arrives. If the test is satisfactory the second engine purchased will be a Ronald.

STUDENTS ON STRIKE.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—The Toronto University boycott began in earnest today and of the seven hundred students registered, only five were in attendance at the lectures this morning.

These five were looked at with scorn and are described as traitors. At one lecture only one student attended and he was a freshman. The other four attended only one lecture each.

Something that looks a little queer was developed this morning, when it was learned that though the rules say that applications for Fellowships will be received until September 29, each year, the offices last year were filled prior to that date. A man who applied in August received a letter signed by the Minister of Education, dated September 19, saying all positions had been filled. This is very like advertising for tenders and then awarding the contract before the time for receiving tenders expires.

Indications are that the fight is on in earnest. The students are very determined, and they declare they will not weaken. There is a good deal of uneasiness in Government circles, for it is known that the matter will be brought up in the Legislature, and the Opposition is priming itself with facts to make a warm fight.

Hon. G. W. Ross, in an interview, said the Government would probably see its way to appoint a commission of investigation on the formulation of such charges, but that it would be out of the question to look for the re-instatement of Prof. Dale. He stated also that Student Tucker, editor of the 'Varsity, would not be allowed to return to the institution. Mr. Ross stated also that such a commission could not be appointed until the students had returned to the lectures. The students will probably compromise and return to the lectures after they have secured the promise of a commission.

ALMOST A PANIC.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—During the Laurier meeting here last night what nearly proved a panic took place owing to the breaking of a window. The crowd rushed on to the platform, and it was only after a strong appeal from Mr. Laurier that quiet was restored and the speakers were able to proceed.

GLASGOW, Feb. 19.—The recently launched 160 ton rater Ailsa has been painted black above the water line and coppered below. Her profile above water bears a striking resemblance to the Vigilant.

The Ailsa left the Clyde with her racing spars aloft and her mainsail and jib set, and is expected to meet the Britannia in the first race in the Mediterranean.

SCHEMES OF PAWNBROKERS.

How a Barber Paid a Quarter to Look at a Glass "Diamond."

A young knight of the razor in Lexington avenue told me that he had been swindled out of $2 by one man and out of 25 cents by a pawnbroker. He was shaving a customer a week or so ago when a seedily attired man entered, and waiting an opportunity displayed pawn tickets showing an advance of $20 on a watch, $18 on a diamond ring and smaller amounts on other articles.

"He offered to let me have the tickets for $2, and I thought if a pawnbroker would advance $20 on a watch it must surely be worth three times as much. Pawnbrokers, I know, only advance one-third of the value of goods at most. So I paid him the $2, and the next day I went to the pawnbroker's shop.

"I may be green, but that watch couldn't fool me. It was of brass, thinly washed with gold and worth about $4. That pawnbroker must have hired the man to take the tickets around, for he wouldn't have given $1 on that timepiece. I wouldn't pay $20 and interest to get it out, and I am out $2.

"It wasn't long after that that I had evidence that pawnbrokers stand in with these men. A shabby individual came in here and told a story of misfortune. He had been compelled to pawn a diamond ring, he said, for $35. It was half a carat diamond, he said, and he showed me a ticket. He said I could inspect the ring if I wanted before buying the ticket, so I went with him to a pawnbroker's near Seventy-fifth street.

"'Here's a man to see that ring,' he said to the pawnbroker, handing him the ticket.

"'I'll show you the ring if you give me 50 cents,' said the pawnbroker.

"I told the pawnbroker I wouldn't give 50 cents to see the ring, but I offered him a quarter, and he showed me the ring. It was one of these glass affairs that you can buy for 10 cents in the Bowery. I wouldn't buy it and left, but he had my quarter, and I have heard of other quarters he has made in the same way. It's a pretty easy way to make money—exhibiting 10 cent rings for a quarter a sight."

While I was in the barber shop a man entered and wanted to sell a pawn ticket for a pair of trousers for $1, but no one would buy.—New York Herald.

THE TEA HABIT.

Tepid Fluid Conduces to Neuralgia, Dyspepsia and Ruined Complexion.

Tea drinking as a habit is very much on the increase throughout the country, and women who have fallen into the way of taking a cup three or four times a day would do well to be warned in time against its insidious influence, says the New York Sun. Two cups of good tea is all the average feminine system can readily assimilate in 24 hours, and the usual results to the woman of oversociability in her dainty cups is apt to take the form of neuralgia and common dyspepsia that injures the best complexion.

In extreme cases very frequent among women of the lower classes in England and Ireland, where thousands of pounds of very inferior grades of tea are always boiled long and hard before considered fit for drinking, effects as serious as from alcoholism have been discovered recently, and yet the medical commissioners who inquired into this lamentable state of affairs contend that tea as a steady tipple would be robbed of half its ugly effects if always properly brewed and drunk hot, with very little sugar. It is more digestible, too, without any milk or cream, and the whole secret of its proper making lies in never permitting the boiling water more than an instant's contact with the leaves.

Nothing, if women only knew it, is more indigestible than the cups of tepid, oversweet fluid they sip at contentedly during a half dozen receptions of an afternoon in winter, that, shame be it to hostesses, is too often the only refreshment they offer.

Chinese Street Smells.

The foul smells of the streets of Canton are to my mind greatly exaggerated. But it is no doubt a city of many odors, strange and various. The houses being generally open to the streets for almost their whole front and the greater part of the town being roofed in, vapors from cooking continually fill the covered ways. Strictly speaking, few smells from the process of food preparation are pleasant, and to European nostrils the odors from Chinese cook pots are certainly unsavory. Imagine Shoreditch, Whitechapel and Wapping compressed into the narrowest avenues, covered in overhead, with all the houses open at the front, with cookery going on in every house at the same time within a few feet of the pavement where every one walks. Conjure up, as a setting for these culinary vapors, a moist, sweltering heat, an atmosphere heavy with the mingled odors of incense, joss sticks, opium, sandalwood, Chinese cabbage, strange roots and vegetables, which fill the place of our onions and garlic, wood smoke and vapors from fried fish shops, and add to the conglomerate smell thus obtained an occasional reek of a stagnant drain or a public latrine, then possibly it will be understood how in Canton there are strange pervading odors which are perhaps more trying to a foreigner than would be any definite nastiness.—"In the City of Canton" in Century.

Queen Victoria's Sham Rubies.

Real rubies are scarce. Most of the stones in use are shams. Even the queen of England cherished a pair of imitations. They were, after great trouble and large expense, exhibited in the London exposition of 1862 and proved to be merely spinels. When a customer goes to a reliable dealer and asks to see some rubies, he is asked, "How much are you willing to pay?" There is one ruby in a New York shop. It spends most of its beauty in the safe. Anybody with $8,000 can have it. Rubies are full of sentiment. It is the supposition that they give the wearer health and a happy frame of mind. Rubies were among the delights of King Solomon. Lapidaries say that he got hold of all the fine stones, and since his day the supply has steadily diminished.—Philadelphia Times.

The Jeweler's Carat.

The carat is a standard used by the jewelers to express both weight and fineness. When it is used as a weight, it is equal to four grains, or the one hundred and twentieth part of an ounce troy. In determining the fineness of precious metals 24 carats is considered the highest standard of purity. According to this standard, an 18 carat gold ring contains three parts of gold and one of some base metal.—St. Louis Republic.

Delaware river and bay were named after Lord de la Warr, who came to this country with Captain Samuel Argall on a voyage of discovery about 1610.

"I strongly recommend Pond's Extract for lameness, and use it constantly."—MICHAEL DONOVAN, N. Y. Athletic Club.

SORENESS

"Had a large eating sore on my ankle, which had eaten to the bone. For nine months I doctored to no purpose. Tried a bottle of Pond's Extract, and was cured immediately."—MINNIE VANATTA, Lochloosa, Fla.

BRUISES

"Pond's Extract has been used with marked benefit by our inmates in many cases of bruises, and has always proved very beneficial."—LITTLE SISTERS OF THE POOR, New York City.

SPRAINS

"I have been prescribing Pond's Extract, and find it a valuable remedy in strains and affections of like character."—W. P. BURDICK, M.D.

BURNS

"Had my left hand severely burned, and lost the use of it completely. Secured relief by use of Pond's Extract in twelve hours."—Mrs. A. SHERMAN, New York City.

HEMORRHAGES

"Am troubled with hemorrhages from lungs, and find Pond's Extract the only remedy that will control them."—GEORGE W. WARNER, Scranton, Pa.

INFLAMMATIONS

"I have used Pond's Extract in a case of long standing internal inflammation, and obtained relief within a few hours."—JAMES Z. READE, Philadelphia.

Second Day of the Women's Convention in Washington.

Special to The Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb., 20.—There was a somewhat larger attendance at Metzerott's Hall this morning, when President May Wright Sewell called the National Council of Women to order at 10 o'clock.

An elaborate paper on "The influence of women in bringing religious conviction to bear upon daily life," was the first thing on the programme. It was read by Minnie D. Louis, of New York. She said Edward Bellamy was the prophet of the new religion. His, she contended, was the only theory by which the divinity became a thing of fact.

Mary F. Lovell, of Pennsylvania, delegate of the anti-Vivisection society, discussed Mrs. Louis' paper.

Murdered with a Razor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Mary Nino, an Italian, aged 30 years, was murdered yesterday morning by her husband, Vincenzo, a barber, who cut her throat with a razor. The murderer was arrested.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

Hurrah for the Carnival on Friday night.

Norwood Ice Races.

The postponed ice races at Norwood will come off next week on Tuesday and Wednesday. The purses embody substantial prizes and the races will doubtless be well filled.

Mr. Stratton Chairman.

The selection of Mr. W. D. Balfour for the Speakership of the Ontario Legislature will leave the chairmanship of the Printing Committee open. Mr. J. R. Stratton, M. P. P., will be appointed.

Wedding Bells.

The marriage of Miss Kate Nelson, of Otonabee, and Mr. Cephas Edwards, head master of the Keene School took place yesterday morning in the presence of a few friends and relatives of the contracting parties. For some time the bride was a student at the Collegiate Institute, and her many friends will join with THE TIMES in extending hearty congratulations.

A Conversazione.

A conversazione was held last night at St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, which was largely attended. A splendid program was rendered. Mrs. Barker, of Lakefield, gave an excellent solo, which was adapted to her rare contralto voice, while Mrs. Seward, Mrs. Weir and Miss Long also sang in their usual excellent manner. Refreshments were served and all seemed to appreciate the spread placed before them. An enjoyable time was spent and all who were present thoroughly appreciated the efforts of the promoters of the event.

Funeral of the Late Wm. O'Brien.

A large cortege of sympathizers followed the remains of the late Wm. O'Brien yesterday morning to the Cathedral, where the services were conducted by Rev. Archdeacon Casey, Revs. Fathers Collins and O'Brien officiating as deacon and subdeacon respectively. The music furnished for the occasion by the choir was of a special nature. The pallbearers were: Messrs. G. Henry, T. Mahoney, F. Sullivan, B. Dolan, T. Dineen, T. Henry, all schoolmates of the deceased. Rev. Father Collins performed the services at the grave. The pupils of the convent and the Murray street school in a body went to church to pay the last tribute to their departed schoolmate.

Albert Weighill Committed.

In the manslaughter charge arising out of the recent G.T.R. accident at Agincourt, which was heard before Magistrates Wingfield and J. C. Clark (Unionville) yesterday afternoon, Albert Weighill, station agent at Unionville, was committed for trial at the May Assizes, bail being granted, himself in $4,000 and two sureties of $2,000 each, as before. Evidence was given, all of which has already appeared in THE TIMES, by Richard Boundy, conductor of the express; Rob. J. Stripe, train despatcher, Lindsay, who swore that the block system has been in operation on the G.T.R. in reference to snowploughs for eight or ten years; Geo. Mimms, driver; Phillip McCabe, fireman, and James Tapley, brakeman. Mr. Robinette is watching the case on behalf of Weighill.

The Bible Society.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in the George street Methodist church last evening. The church was well filled with an audience comprising many prominent citizens and on the platform were the resident ministers, Rev. Dr. Henderson, Toronto, the speaker of the evening, and Sheriff Hall, who presided. Rev. A. MacWilliams submitted the reports of the depository and treasurer and they were adopted. Rev. Dr. Henderson followed with an able address. He referred to the Bible as the protector of the people. It had raised the world to its high state of civilization and was necessary for the enlightment of the nations. Dr. Henderson at the conclusion of his much appreciated remarks, was extended a hearty vote of thanks.

Of Interest to Artists.

Mr. D. A. Shaw has moved to his new studio, corner of Hunter and George streets, where he will be prepared to meet with pupils who may desire instruction in any branches of painting, drawing, ect. Mr. Shaw will make a specialty of teaching china and pottery painting. Having studied in Chicago and New York all the latest methods of decorating china, he is in a position to impart the latest ideas in the art. His rooms will be open to the public on and after Thursday, 21st inst., at 3 o'clock—main entrance first door south of Hunter on George; private or ladies' entrance, first door west of George on Hunter. Mr. Shaw has purchased a kiln for firing china, so that the great risk and expense of sending it to the city to be fired will be done away with. tf19

THE ICE RACES.

"Harry B" Won in the 3 Minute Event—A Large Attendance.

The first days ice racing came off very successfully yesterday afternoon, and the two events proved interesting and good drawing attractions. The gathering on the Little Lake numbered away up in the hundreds. Of these a large number were from outside points. There was a fair sprinkling of ladies present and the procession of equipages was by no means small. The ice was in excellent condition. The weather was mild and everything was propitious for the afternoon's sport.

In the three minute race, the local horses won, taking first and second places. "Harry B," owned by Mr. H. LeBrun took first prize. "Essie Carr," owned by Mr. Ed. Brown, took second and "Lulu B," won the third prize. The heats were as follows:

First—Essie Carr, 1; Harry B., 2; Last Chance, 3; Lulu B., 4; Black Bess, 5; Canadian Goldduet, 6; Lapidist Chief, 7.

Second—Harry B., 1; Lulu B., 2; Essie Carr, 3; Last Chance, 4; Black Bess, 5; Lapidist Chief, 6; Canadian Goldduet, 7.

Third—Harry B., 1; Lulu B., 2; Last Chance, 3; Essie Carr, 4; Black Bess, 5; Lapidist Chief, 6; Canadian Goldduet, 7.

Fourth—Harry B., 1; Lulu B., 2; Essie Carr, 3; Last Chance, 4; Black Bess, 5; Lapidist Chief, 6; Canadian Goldduet, 7.

THE COLTS' RACE.

There were four entries for the Colts' race as follows:

"Lucky Star," owned by S. E. Ferguson, of Cavan.

"Livery Boy," owned by Richard Croft, of Cobourg.

"Dolly Stanton," owned by R. N. Nattrass, Millbrook.

"Stride-away," owned by Andrew Hogg.

It was a clean and pretty race in every heat and good speed was shown. "Livery Boy" won and the second and third prizes were awarded to Stride-away and Dolly Stanton respectively. The horses came under the wire in the four heats in the following order:

First—Livery Boy, 1; Dolly Stanton, 2; Stride-away, 3; Lucky Star, 4.

Second—Livery Boy, 1; Dolly Stanton, 2; Stride-away, 3; Lucky Star, 4.

Third—Stride-away, 1; Livery Boy, 2; Dolly Stanton, 3; Lucky Star, 4.

Fourth—Livery Boy, 1; Stride-away, 2; Dolly Stanton, 3; Lucky Star, 4.

NOTES.

The crowd was enthusiastic.

Mr. H. LeBrun is justly tickled over the conduct and success of his trotter.

Mr. Joseph Daly, formerly proprietor of the Grand Central hotel here, but now of the Daly House, Toronto, attended the "meet" and took the place of Mr. Paxton, of Port Perry, who had been appointed judge. Joe is a genial fellow and his many friends in town were pleased to see him again.

Billy Bordick's attempt to furnish the crowd with hot coffee by running a stovepipe through the tent proved a failure. Billy says he will have fragrant Java in abundance today.

The judges performed their duties to the entire satisfaction of the contesting horsemen.

The entries for the races today are well-filled and the day's sport promises to be a good one, if the weather allows. There are enough entries for the dog race to make it an interesting event.

So much encouragement has been given the promulgators of the present "meet," that $1,600 in purses will be offered for a fall meeting.

Mr. Richard Croft, of Cobourg, brother of the well-known proprietor of the Croft House, was a prominent figure on the track.

Sam Ferguson, of Cavan was there as large as life.

Mr. Ed. Brown, who drove "Harry B," handled the reins with as much grace and expertness as a professional.

Essie Carr was driven by William Sherin.

A good offer was made for "Harry B" yesterday.

There will be lots of fun Friday night at the Carnival. Come and see for yourself and you will never regret it.

ARE AWAY DOWN.

So Says a Despatch from Our Curlers in Toronto.

Peterborough curlers are in Toronto playing in the tankard competion. A brief despatch was received from Toronto last night containing these words:

"Peterborough away down."

It was gathered from this that our curlers were playing in hard luck. The News throws more light on the matter, showing that Collingwood had beaten Peterborough. The News says:

"The first round of the tankard matches was played today on Toronto ice. Local clubs are not regarded as having very much chance for first place. Peterborough played eight skips at the Granite, and Chesley, the Hamilton Thistles and Peterborough are the rinks that excite most interest.

At the Granite rink Dr. J. C. Carlyle acted as umpire and the scores were:

Ham. Thistles.... 52 Oshawa.......... 28
Chesley.......... 45 North Bay........ 27

At the Victoria rink Mr. John Bain wore the umpire's badge. The scores were:

Buffalo.......... — Chatham.......... —
Chatham won.
Collingwood ..... — Peterborough..... —
Collingwood won.

At Prospect Park Mr. Robert Armstrong decided the knotty points and the curlers piled up the following scores:

St. Thomas...... — Brantford....... —
Brantford won by 5 shots.
Granites.......... — Guelph Union.... —
Guelph won by 5 shots.

At the Granite rink Prospect Park secured a bye, as did the Lindsays at Victoria."

Speaking of the competition and how Peterborough curlers are regarded, the World says: "There was a great influx of brithers of the broom into the city yesterday afternoon, and it was a merry though earnest gathering in Mr. Russell's office, Bay street, last night, when the draws were made for the final competition of the Ontario Silver Tankard curling competion. Of the 16 group champions, 11 reported, and will be ready for the play that starts this morning. Stratford of group 13 and Kincardine of group 14 were unable to get their men to visit Toronto. North Bay and Buffalo were the new comers, and yesterday they made their first appearance in the finals.

"Of course there are favorites and favorites. Prospect Park, Lindsay, Oshawa, Peterborough and the Hamilton Thistles are much fancied as the horsemen would say, and the chances of the two first named are enhanced from the fact of securing the byes. Then, besides these five, there are nine dark horses, and this is one of the races that it is only by chance that the winner is selected."

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

The Ontario Legislature opens today.

The Finance Committee of the Council met last night and passed accounts.

A blinding snow storm set in about 11 o'clock last night that bid well to rival the storm of a week ago.

The Belleville Colts were entertained in the parlors of the Palace restaurant last night after the curling match.

The McCarthy League demonstration tonight will probably be largely attended. The Opera house has been nicely decorated.

The Masonic Lodge of Instruction opened last night. About 70 delegates from provincial lodges are present. The principal session will be held today.

John Palmer and Adam Ross, who were arrested a few days ago for making counterfeit money, were tried at Ingersoll. Ross was discharged, there not being sufficient evidence to convict him, and Palmer was sent for trial at the spring assizes.

WON THE TROPHY.

Peterborough Colts Defeat Belleville and Secure the Trophy.

Last night two rinks of the Belleville Colts played the scheduled game with the local Colts and were defeated by the decisive majority of 21 shots. This victory gives the trophy to the local curlers, having won two games from Campbellford and one with Belleville. There remains only one match to play, namely, Peterborough at Belleville, which if the local curlers lose will not alter the result, so far as the trophy is concerned. "Dick" Davidson skipped his rink like an old veteran and played one of his very best games, which means a good deal. After the first few ends he steadily forged ahead and came out victorious by a score of 25 to 6. He was ably assisted by his vice, "Teddy" Clegg, and the rest of his rink played well.

Skip George Horkins had a close match with his opponent, but secured a victory, coming out two shots ahead. The rinks were as follows:

PETERBOROUGH.	BELLEVILLE.
D. Hall,	M. Wright,

DOMINION GRANGERS.

They Opened their Annual Meeting Yesterday Afternoon—President's Address.

President Dawson Kennedy, of Peterborough, presided at the opening session yesterday afternoon of the annual meeting of the Dominion Grangers's Association in the Albion hotel, Toronto.

The president's address recommends a number of important changes, which it is expected will strengthen their membership. It is also proposed to wait upon Sir Oliver and his Ministers to legislate in the interest of the grangers of this province. The address concludes with a general review of the association during the past year, and says while there has been no new local bodies instituted many of the old ones have been brought back to the fold.

At the conclusion of the president's address it was referred to a special committee, who will report on the recommendation suggested today.

President Kennedy when asked how they viewed political affair, said: We are not a political organization, nor do we nominate candidates for Parliament, but it is an unwritten law with us that we give our preference to farmers every time and especially to the Patrons of Industry.

It is also expected that during next week a joint meeting of Grangers and Patrons will be held when matters of interest to both will be discussed. The meeting may be held in Peterborough.

Trust Corporation o' Ontario.

An institution that well fills a great public need, and a concern that stands high in the confidence of the people of Ontario, is the Trusts Corporation of Ontario, with offices in Toronto. The sixth annual meeting of the Company was held on February 12, and in another column appears the annual report, outlining the business of the past year, and showing the wonderful growth and satisfactory state of affairs of the Company. The Trusts Corporation of Ontario is composed of the best known men in Canada. Hon. James C. Aikens is President and on the Board of Directors are J. T. Blaikie, Sir R. J. Cartwright, Wm. Cook, Hon. J. R. Gowan, Wm. Hendrie, J. J. Kenny, Matthew Leggatt, Thomas Long, Charles Magee, Alexander Manning, Hon. Peter McLaren, W. D. Matthews, B. B. Osler, E. B. Osler, Hugh Ryan, John Stuart, Hon. S. C. Wood. With gentlemen of this calibre behind it, it is not to be wondered that the Trusts Corporation enjoys a wide-spread confidence, and yearly handles in trust millions of dollars. The principal business of the company is the administering of estate, investing trust monies, executorships, etc. In this respect a large and profitable business has been built up, increasing yearly. The past year's business shows a marked increase in every important particular. In view of the fact that the company was formed but six years ago, the amount of business it has built up is a high tribute to its reliability and the excellent management its affairs are under.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden bread board knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

THE McCARTHY MEETING.

A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING IN THE OPERA HOUSE.

FOUR ABLE SPEECHES.

Mr. McCarthy's Masterly Exposition of the Manitoba School Question—He Counsels no Interference—Col. O'Brien Attacks the N. P.—A Challenge by Mayor Kendry—The Sarcastic Mr. Hunter.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy, Col. O'Brien and Messrs. Hunter and Godfrey, arrived from Toronto last evening on the 5.12 G. T. R. The distinguished politician and his colleagues were met at the station by a committee from the McCarthy League and escorted in a cab to the Grand Central hotel. Between 7 and 8 o'clock Mr. McCarthy conferred with his supporters.

The reception tendered D'Alton McCarthy in the Opera House last night in point of attendance equalled that given the cabinet ministers two weeks ago. But at that meeting there was nothing like the enthusiasm evinced as was shown last night. From the time the first speaker took the floor until Mr. McCarthy closed his technically constructed address, the closest interest was paid the speakers and the great enthusiasm manifested.

The opera house was neatly and prettily decorated, there being an absence of mottoes, but an abundance of colored effects. The audience assembled before 8 o'clock filled the seating room and those who came in after that hour were obliged to stand in the aisles. It was nearly 8.15 before Mr. McCarthy appeared on the stage, followed by Col. O'Brien and Mr. Hunter and Mr. Godfrey. These gentlemen were preceded by officers of the McCarthy League.

Mr. William Graham, of Smith, took the chair and made a brief opening address in which he referred to Mr. McCarthy as a bright star arisen to guide the people through a pending crisis. The country was groaning and a deliverer had come. Mr. McCarthy and his co-patriot, Col. O'Brien, he said, were the only two men in the country with "backbones." The chairman's forcible remarks were loudly cheered, and he then introduced Mr. Godfrey, who spent about 30 minutes in reviewing the political situation and particularly the present government's defense of its handling of the country's affairs, and the operations of the tariff. He immediately referred to the visit of the Ministers to Peterborough. Their song here, as elsewhere, was that the country was prosperous; that the cry of depression was imaginary. He thought the remedy they expounded was purely imaginative. The country was suffering from depression, from an iniquitous policy, and in the hands of a party steeped in political crime and corruption. The Ministers said nothing of these things on their visit to Peterborough. They built up an imaginative tale of prosperity. Mr. Haggart spoke of the building of the Trent Valley Canal as one of the greatest enterprises in the country. "I hope it won't turn out as did the Tay canal in his own constituency," said the speaker. "This enterprise exceeded the estimated cost by over $300,000. Mr. Haggart said nothing of this. He didn't inform the citizens of Peterborough that the Tay canal cost $2,000 yearly and the receipts last year were $137. In their tale of prosperity did any of the Ministers mention the Curran bridge scandal and its excessive costs or the Turcotte scandal.

Mr. Godfrey dealt at length with the tariff question, and explained that a policy of protection was inaugurated 16 years ago for the purpose of nourishing infant industries and manufactories. At the same time other great results, it was expected, would ensue. But the results had proven disastrous. The population increased in less proportion. The tax on goods instead of benefiting the consumer went into the pockets of the manufacturer. For a tax amounting to $3,600,000 pocketed by cotton manufacturers there had been an increase in employees of only 4,560. Manufacturers had been protected for 16 years. Now they could stand alone and compete with the world. A continuance of the N. P. meant the enrichment of the manufacturers to an extent that admitted of a dividend of 20 per cent. while at the same time they had watered their stock exactly 100 per cent. Sugar refineries could do without protection, so could most of the manufacturers, while the citizens were ill able to afford the tax imposed by the N.P.

COL. O'BRIEN.

Col. O'Brien was received with loud cheers. He went more fully into facts and figures regarding the high protective tariff, and his remarks evoked tremendous applause. He said that during the past several months there had been generally evinced a strong feeling of dissatisfaction in political affairs. Recently, he said, the citizens of Peterborough had had the inestimable privilege of hearing the Cabinet Ministers. Any one who had paid close attention to what they said knew that their whole argument was that the country was not as bad as it might be. He thought they might have had a little more to say of a nature to allay the widespread and manifest feeling of unrest. This feeling was not confined to any particular party; in both parties it existed, and the feeling was growing strong that partyism had been carried to such an extent that the will of the electors had been stifled.

He divided the chief questions of the day under two great heads. The first were all those questions that related to tariff: the second were those that related to religion and education. In regard to the latter was the Manitoba School question, which he intended to leave entirely in the hands of Mr. McCarthy, whom no better man in Canada could be found to deal with it.

Then Col. O'Brien branched off on the National Policy, the cause of its inauguration in the Dominion, the results that were expected, the results that had been derived, and why at one time he was a protectionist and was now a free trader. He had supported the N. P. in the belief that it would stop the exodus, increase our population and at least keep it at home—bring us the advantage of increased population in increased home markets, etc. To do this, certain revenues were imposed to help manufacturers, with a view of giving them stability, and to induce capital to the Dominion. The policy was inaugurated and he didn't regret it at the outset, but as time went on it was found that what was only meant to meet the exigencies that existed at that time, was taken to be a permanent thing. Again, it was found that certain results that it was expected would be the outcome of the N.P. were not forthcoming. For a time there was competition—a healthy and prosperous competition, then there became an overflow of competition and small concerns were forced to the wall. Finally there followed a system of combination among manufacturers that frustrated the purposes of the N.P., and such a general system did it become that today there was not a single manufacturing concern not under a combination regulating the output and raising prices of manufactured products as high as the tariff would permit. "In view of this," said Col. O'Brien "is there any inconsistency, if we, who in 1878, were in favor of the N.P. now denounce it?"

He then lead off on the census and by statistics showed that the anticipated results of a tariff policy had not been fulfilled. "Now, let us look at it fairly. We should be as honest in politics as anything else. The last census tells us that during the period of the N.P. the population has increased less than during the previous ten years. Where has our home markets gone to that our farmers are taxed for at the rate of 35 per cent? The census tells us that the home markets have not increased. If that is so how has the farmer benefited? We are told by the duty on pork and beef. But this is a slight advantage only and for this he is submitted to a ten years' tax. Don't think that the farmer has not considered this. He has, and all over this Dominion the farmer has come to the conclusion that his condition is not as satisfactory as it should be. This is clearly evidenced by the attitude of the Patrons of Industry.

How many benefit by protection and how many pay for it? We will take the figures of the census to show this, and they should be correct, and they are kindly compiled for our use by the census department. Of our population 47 per cent. are engaged in agriculture, mining and fisheries. None of these are manufacturing industries. In trade and transportation there are 11 per cent. None of these are manufacturers. In domestic and personal service are 19 per cent. In the professions are 3 per cent. In the non productive class are 19 per cent. This leaves 19 per cent. of the population of the whole Dominion engaged in manufacturing. This 19 per cent. alone is benefited by the N. P., and 81 per cent. are taxed for their benefit. A certain percentage of the manufacturing trade, such as cobblers, (and glancing at the gallery) milliners, etc., are not effected by any policy. Coming down to the fine thing only about 8 per cent. is benefitted by the N.P., and 92 per cent. is taxed for it. No wonder they can build music halls, which the poor, struggling farmer who buys the Massey binder helped to pay for. No wonder the money of sugar refineries can pay for and erect hospitals." (Cheers.)

AN INTERRUPTION.

Then by an apt illustration the speaker went to show that the difference in the cost of manufactured cloth, here and in England: that is the less cost, did not benefit the consumer but went into the pockets of the manufacturer. "I will take my tweed suit of clothes," said the speaker. "I will take an item in cotton manufacture known as dyed selicia and show comparative prices of this article in the mills in England, Scotland and Canada. In the two former countries the cost is 4½ cents per yard and in Canada 6 cents per yard. The N.P. keeps that foreign product out, and you farmers should get the benefit of the 1½ cents. But the difference goes into the pocket of the manufacturer in every instance and in amount as it corresponds to the amount of duty, which, were it imported, he, the buyer, would pay to the Government. Therefore, by virtue of the combination I mentioned, I pay the tax on my tweed suit into the pocket of the manufacturer."

The speaker held in his hand a list of comparative figures, which he claimed had never been denied, and which were secured from a source that rendered them unanswerable. He made this claim before going into comparative costs.

As he concluded his point, Mayor Kendry, who was an interested member of the audience, arose and said:

"I apologize for interrupting the speaker, but I cannot remain quiet and let go unchallenged a statement that is untrue. The speaker has made statements that are not true. He does not know what he is talking about. I challenge the truth of those figures."

This interruption on the part of the Mayor created an uproar of mingled applause and cries of order. Amid the din the Mayor walked up to the front and up the steps on to the platform. Col. O'Brien turned one way and then the other and made some remark that could not be caught. For about three seconds the Mayor and the speaker faced each other. When the uproar ceased Mayor Kendry continued:

"I am prepared to put up $100 against an equal amount—to go to any charitable institution—that the Colonel has not been telling the truth. The difference (meaning the cost of production) comes out of the consumers' pocket. I want to say that we make goods as cheap here as in England. I have been in England and I say they starve their employees. The difference between the cost of manufacture in this country goes to the employees. (Cheers.)

Col. O'Brien here interposed: "I want to tell you (shaking the paper in his hand at the Mayor) that those figures and my statements based on them, stand on the very firmest foundation. They were prepared by wholesale houses in Toronto, and have never been contradicted, and if they were susceptible to contradiction they would have been before now. This is the first occasion on which any person has come forward to find fault with them."

Mayor Kendry had in the meantime taken his seat in the audience and the speaker continued: "I will stand by them. (Voice; put up the $100.) I am not prepared to put up that amount of money. I am a farmer and there are very few farmers can get that much money with wheat at 50 cents a bushel. (Cheers.) I have made out my case by those figures. Where is our home markets? (Voice: we have them here) yes, by bonusing manufacturers and paying shops to stay here. By bonusing such manufacturing industries as the gentleman who interrupted me represents. I know not who this gentleman is. (Voice: he is mayor of the town) well, I want to say, Mr. Mayor, that this little breeze don't bother me."

After referring to the mal-administration of the Conservative party, he referred again to the tariff. "If the duty is all right, why did the government seek to revise it? If they are honest in their tariff views, why change the tariff. The government is either honest or dishonest, in this respect. The ministers came before the people and said: we will revise the tariff and reduce the duties. And who prevented them? It was just such companies as is represented by the mayor of this town. (Cheers.) These companies are responsible to nobody, but powerful enough to come behind the ministers. They are the power behind the throne, and in privacy with the members of the cabinet, they dictated whether duties should be reduced or increased. The country is not governed by the Government, but by the manufacturers. I hope the next election will put an end to this sort of influence. There is a consideration involved in this collusion of Ministers and manufacturers that told heavily in past elections. The spirit of partyism has gone too far, and this with the influence of the combined manufacturing conspirators is dooming the country. To put an end to this my voice and the voices of my colleagues are raised." (Prolonged applause.)

SARCASTIC MR. HUNTER.

Mr. Hunter, the son of a Methodist minister and a lawyer, was the next speaker, and for humorous, dry sarcasm, he has not had his equal on the platform in Peterborough. His remarks, in a slow, deliberate voice, created round after round of cheering. He began by saying that there were a great many doubts and very few certainties in the public mind at the present time. One certainty was that the present party government was dead. "The electorate," he said, "is patiently waiting for Bowell to read the obsequies." The ministers who recently visited Peterborough had arguments that could be embodied in 4 figures—1878. It had been 1878 with them on the public platform throughout the country. He said the Conservatives cast away their last chance when they drummed out McCarthy. It was a matter of history how Sir John Macdonald had saved his own party by rebelling against it. In a like manner had McCarthy and O'Brien hoped to do it, but the Quebec power prevailed, and they refused to be vaccinated. "This was the origin of the McCarthyites," said the speaker. He referred in a flight of eloquence to the death of Sir John Thompson and said it was a great loss to the Conservative party. The Conservatives said that McCarthy had quarrelled with the late premier, and now that he was dead the object of the McCarthyites was gone. He characterized this as a vile slander on Mr. McCarthy. His differences with the Conservative party did not consist of any objections to such men or in the utterances or policy of such men as the late premier, and the Conservatives knew it.

"And now as to the Manitoba school question and the dual language question," continued this man of sarcasm. "They have shoved their language as far down our throats as they can. Every man who sends a dollar bill through the mails has the French language shoved under his nose. We don't ask you farmers to melt your plow shares and forge swords, and wade deep in gore over this French question, but we ask you to send men to parliament who won't crawl on their vest buttons before the French majority. (Cheers.) They said that McCarthy couldn't follow Thompson because he was a Catholic, and a few Orangemen think that he will drop in behind Bowell because he is an Orangeman. But we have no confidence in Bowell."

Comparing Bowell's Cabinet with that of Sir John Macdonald's, he heaped bitter sarcasm upon it. It was like an extension table with a new leaf added every time it was spread. Anybody could get in the Cabinet. Montague had been taken in without a carpet bag, and no doubt Montague was an able man and knew the price of pork. (Cheers.) He characterized the Premier as a man who was bullied by his Ministers. He ended his brilliant remarks with a reference about the general elections, the gates to which were broad and the road very crooked.

MR. D'ALTON McCARTHY.

As Mr. McCarthy stepped forward to speak he was presented with an address by Mr. W. H. G. Armstrong, secretary of the McCarthy League. Mr. McCarthy returned thanks very briefly.

The famous politician and confidant of the late Sir John Macdonald, was greeted with prolonged cheering. His opening remarks, after a brief introduction were as follows:

"I know Peterborough has and is enjoying prosperity on account of her manufactories, denied other towns. You are fortunate in the possession of water powers, and men who are willing to put their capital into industries. And by reason of this, you people are apt to take kindly to tariff protection. But throughout the Dominion this prosperity does not exist and it is the interests and welfare of the whole country that must be looked to.

"I was surprised to hear the indignant protest of your mayor to those figures. I read the same figures in Parliament and the Commons and they have never been challenged. They were prepared for me by two wholesale merchants, who, on account of the tyranny that prevails in the customs department, are not willing to reveal their names. This is not the free country that we think it to be."

At this juncture, Mayor Kendry again arose in the audience and stated why he had challenged those figures. He was willing to make the same offer to Mr. McCarthy, who was wealthy and could put up $100 if Col. O'Brien couldn't. The question would be left to any three gentlemen to decide.

"I will accept that proposition," said Mr. McCarthy, if the mayor will accept the letters to the gentlemen who do not care to have their names revealed, and will not reveal the names—that is, if he thinks this is the way political questions should be settled. I know it is a manufacturer's way."

The mayor was willing to accept the evidence of the letters and remarked that Mr. McCarthy's $100 would come in handy for charitable purposes in Peterborough.

"And elsewhere," retorted Mr. McCarthy. "The people are all needy under the N.P."

Before touching on the Manitoba school question, Mr. McCarthy spoke of the Ministers humbugging the people in refusing to call a session with 15 parliamentary months of power before them, or to go into dissolution. They daren't face the people; they were afraid to call a session with a deficit bigger than ever and a little further on, he got in another shaft at the mayor. "I believe he is an aspirant," said the speaker, and I advise him to get his house in order.

Then Mr. McCarthy waded right into the Manitoba school question and outlined it from the time of Confederation. His remarks were regarded as specially interesting as since the decision of the Privy Council Mr. McCarthy has not spoken on a public platform. The question was an important one, and the people must pronounce upon it, for, unfortunately, the leaders of both parties were shirking it, and the people would have to take it into their own hands or the next parliament would plunge the country into trouble. It was a question that threatened confederation. It was a question that the Government would be responsible for if it interfered. It was not a question of law, as Sir Hibbert Tupper claimed, nor a question of fact as argued by Sir Wilfred Laurier. The Government could not absolve the responsibility under either these pleas, if it interfered. To tell him that it was a question of law was to insult his common sense. It was a question upon which the people would be divided at the coming elections. The governments action on Tuesday next could be regarded this way. The government by interfering would secure the solid vote of the French province, and only the divided opposition of the Protestant people because the latter were divided on other questions.

"If the government refuses to interfere the trouble is at an end. If it does it will place itself in a position to be called on to grant an order-in-council for remedial legislation. A more dangerous exercise of power cannot be evoked than of educational interference. Between secular and

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 22, 1895.

Good morning!

In several of the constituencies four-cornered contests will take place. The electors are evidently determined to do the square thing to the very last round of the fight.

If the Japs would consent to go back to first principles and fight with bows and arrows, the Chinese are inclined to think that they might stand some chance of whipping them.

Charles Booth, of England, in his "Life and Labor of the People," the most careful study of the condition of the poor ever made, says that out of 5,000 poor in a given district in London only 13 per cent. owed their poverty directly to drink; of the remaining 87 per cent., it was caused by constant work at low wages—occasional work at high wages. Many of this 97 per cent. lost hope and took to drink in consequence.

Willie K. Vanderbilt has given to the wife from whom he is separated an income of $250,000 a year and the use of two palaces, one in New York and one in Newport. For himself he has taken a suite of rooms at the Metropolitan Club which costs him $12,000 a year, but which he doesn't use, because he has returned to Europe to hunt for pleasure there. Yet this pair, to whom money is no more than dirt to most people, are not happy.

There is no sense in denying the report that a deliberate attempt is being made to knife Sir Richard Cartwright these days by good reformers. There are too many straws to show the way the wind blows. Sir Richard is a clever old fellow but he is such a wet blanket on everything and everybody that it is small wonder he is not any too popular.

Attorney-General Sifton, of Manitoba, stated the other day that the schools of Manitoba were not Protestant but secular, no complaint ever having been made against the text books in use. This will give Mr. Laurier a chance to drop his famous "if" and the pleasing generalities connected therewith unless he is of the opinion that schools in which there is religious instruction of any kind can not be secular schools.

According to the Buffalo Express "the town of Ida Grove, Ia., has been trying the Gothenburg system of dealing with the liquor question, and as far as it has gone the experiment has been successful, so it is said. The system consists in the appointment of trustees of the municipality, who manage the business in the interest of the community." As the Gothenburg system has a good many friends and advocates in Canada who believe that it is the true solution of the liquor question, how would it do for the Legislature to pass an act allowing municipalities to introduce it whenever a majority of the people might declare for it? It would hardly do to ram it down people's throats off-hand, and it is always better to have one or two experiments made to demonstrate how things work out before introducing radical changes. But it would not hurt to give the people local option in the Gothenburg system if it can be done without smashing the blooming constitution into little pieces.

GOOD ROADS ASSOCIATION.

The first annual convention of the Good Roads Association of Ontario was held in Toronto a few days ago and the number of delegates that were present from all parts of the Province, and also the close attention paid to the speeches (according to the reports) indicated the great interest that has been aroused in the Province on the subject of the improvement of the roads and highways of the country. There is no doubt that the great obstacle between the successful trade relations between country districts and the centers of trade at the present time is bad roads. If we take our own town as an example, we find this fully exemplified. Since the New Year there has been only three or four really first-class markets, and for two weeks there has been barely enough of certain lines of farm produce coming forward to meet the local demand. The cause has invariably been bad roads and inclement weather. The merchant accordingly suffers, and the farmer is inconvenienced; and at the best the trade between the two is unsteady and fluctuating.

The roads in Ontario are generally good when the farmer has least use for them, and that is in summer and early fall. In the fall whilst fine weather lasts the farmer is too busy, putting in wheat, barreling apples, cutting corn, taking up roots and doing fall plowing to attend to marketing his produce. And then when he is about ready to do business with the trade centers the fall rain have set in, and the bad roads stare him in the face, and if he does get to market it is under serious disadvantages. Those who can afford to do it put it off until good sleighing comes, and this may come or may not. For five winters, up to the present, we have had none of any account, and a long period of sleighing any more it appears is not to be relied upon. But taking for granted that we have sleighing, the snow now, since the country is destitute of trees, generally comes in drifts, and for days and weeks in some places the roads ore blockaded and impassable.

So with bad roads and inclement weather in the fall and winter months, sleighing or not, the good days that farmers have for coming to market are few. But again in the severe weather, that we have had for a couple of weeks, vegetables, fruit and eggs would not stand a journey, and our markets have been destitute of potatoes and other vegetables, and also apples for a week or so back.

SIR OLIVER MOWAT.

The Toronto World publishes a rumor to the effect that the Ontario Liberals are endeavoring to induce Sir Oliver Mowat to lead them in the coming general elections, "disapprobation of Sir Richard Cartright" being the reason advanced for the desire to shift him and put Sir Oliver in his place. The Premier was interviewed by a reporter on the subject and he declined to speak on it, refusing either to deny or affirm the statements made. If there had been no truth in the story it would, of course, been a simple matter for Sir Oliver to say so and have done with it.

We agree with the Hamilton Herald that at the same time it is hardly likely that Sir Oliver can be induced to take his coat off and plunge into the thick of Dominion politics at his time of life. The years have dealt with him in kindly fashion, it is true, and he is still in comparative good health. But there is no telling what effect the excitement of a campaign would have upon him. When a man gets up into the seventies he has to nurse his strength and energies very carefully. Apart from all this is the fact that Sir Oliver is comfortably settled in office for the next four years, and, from the point of view of his own personal convenience, would be foolish to make a change.

It is, in fact, hardly the generous thing of the party to ask or expect him to do so under all the circumstances. Whether he wins or loses, he will, if he consents, be sacrificing his comfort and convenience for the benefit of his party, he will have to throw away away a certainty for an uncertainty, and leave a field with which he is thoroughly familiar for a prospective pasture land of which he knows little. Altogether while Sir Oliver will doubtless appreciat the proffered honor to the full, it seems improbable that he will desert the provincial ship at this juncture. He can serve his country quite as well in Toronto as at Ottawa.

ALONE.

Since she went home—
Longer the evening shadows linger here,
The winter days fill so much of the year,
And even summer winds are chill and drear.
Since she went home.

Since she went home—
The robin's note has touche a minor strain,
The old glad songs breathe a glad refrain,
And laughter sobs with hidden, bitter pain,
Since she went home.

Since she went home—
How still the empty rooms her presence blessed;
Untouched the pillow that her dear head pressed;
My lonely heart hath nowhere for its rest,
Since she went home.

Since she went home—
The long, long days have crept away like years,
The sunlight has been dimmed with doubts and fears,
And the dark nights have rained in lonely tears,
Since she went home.

STOLE AT PRAYER.

At a Revival Meeting a Young Woman Kneels by Another to Plead With Her to Mend Her Ways and Has Her Pocket Picked.

Special to the Times.

CROWN POINT, Ind., Feb. 20.—Pastor Watson, who is conducting a protracted meeting in this city at the Methodist church, was interrupted during his sermon Sunday night by a woman's voice in the audience, which said:—"I have been robbed in this church." She was Miss Minnie Houk, a school teacher, who had just come to town and had drawn a month's salary. When Preacher Watson requested that all members take it upon themselves to try and convert some person in the audience Miss Houk kneeled down before Mrs. Minnie Mitchell and told her she should mend her ways. While she was doing this Mrs. Mitchell robbed Miss Houk of her pocketbook, containing $25 and valuable papers. Mrs. Mitchell left the church during the services, and she was suspected. Sheriff Hayes found the remnants of the purse in the stove, and also found the money sewed in the lining of Mr. Mitchell's cap. The Mitchells are both in jail.

REBUKED BY POPE LEO.

The Rochester Prelate Reprimanded for Attacking Archbishop Ireland.

Special to The Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Last week's Freeman's Journal of New York gave out editorially that Bishop McQuaid, of Rochester, had been reprimanded by Pope Leo XIII for the attack made from the pulpit of his cathedral on Archbishop Ireland, and that notice of the reprimand had been conveyed by the Pope's order through Cardinal Ledochowski to Archbishop Corrigan, who is Bishop McQuaid's metropolitan. Inquiry made from men who have correct information of this case from Rome confirms the news. Bishop McQuaid has received a severe reprimand and is expected to make due apology for his grave breach of ecclesiastical discipline. The right of Archbishop Ireland to speak and act as he did in New York just before the late election is practically acknowledged.

THE CUP AND THE KISS.

Milwaukee Ministers Have New Ideas Concerning Communion Goblets

Special to the Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 20.—The Methodist ministers of the city at their monthly meeting yesterday discussed the question of individual communion cups. The Rev. Mr. Iwert read a paper on the subject, giving the arguments advocated on both sides of the question. Mr. Iwert favored the use of two cups, one for the women and one for the men. The Rev. E. D. Huntley of Summerfield Church created considerable stir by saying he did not believe in any cup. He believed in a wine-laden wafer. This plan Dr. Huntley thought practical, and if the wafers could be manufactured it would do away with the discussions and objections regarding the various methods of distributing the wine. The Rev. Robert Sherin declared the individual cup to be a fad. He did not object to the mustache dragging in the cup. The women, he said, did not "object to the mustache, but rather liked it. "The Rev. Dr. Eaton did not think there was any more danger in the cup as a means of communicating microbes than in kissing.

A HOME RULE IN CAMBRIDGE.

Lord Acton Appointed Regious Professor of Modern History.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—Lord Acton has been appointed Regious Professor of Modern History at Cambridge University in succession to the late Prof. Seeley.

"Lord Acton," the Times observes, "probably is the first Roman Catholic who has held high office in either Cambridge or Oxford University since the reign of James II.

"Lord Acton is a pupil and disciple of Dr. Dollinger, and is an advanced Liberal of the German academic type. He is believed to have been one of the first English politicians to favor Home Rule for Ireland and is said to have helped seduce Mr. Gladstone into that heresy.

"The fitness of Lord Rosebery's selection must be judged by its results."

ENGLAND IN EGYPT.

A Sore Point with France—An Opinion that Reveals Her Feelings.

Special to the Times.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—The Journal des Debats, commenting on a despatch from Cairo to the London Times, dealing with Egyptian affairs, says: "The English press seems to have lost the respect which is due to the Khedive, and also to have lost its capability to appreciate the real position of affairs. It is France's task to arouse Europe from her apathy and cause a demonstration of sympathy with Egypt and against Great Britain. Inquiries at all the Chancelleries show that the whole of Europe considers itself wronged by the indefinite occupation of Egypt by England."

Skipped to Canada to Avoid Arrest.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 20—It was learned today that Chief A. B. Hunt of the Fire Department, who disappeared a few days ago, has gone to the home of his father in Bradshaw, Lambton County, Ont. Hunt was under indictment for having procured naturalization papers fraudulently.

Did Not Know His Name.

The men of the Light division in the Crimea always spoke of Sir George Brown as "the general," as was then and is still, though in a lesser degree, the habit of soldiers, possibly from not knowing the name of the immediate leader. This ignorance cost Sir George £1 during the worst of the winter. He had seized an opportunity of meeting Lord Raglan to urge the desirability of his showing himself more frequently in the camps.

"What good will it do?"

"Oh, 'twill cheer the men up! Why, sir, numbers of my men don't know your name."

"But they don't know your name, George."

"Every man in the Light division knows my name."

"I'll bet you £1 the first man we ask does not."

"Done," said Sir George, and they rode to the Light division camp.

"Come here, my man. Who am I?"

"You're the general sir."

"But my name?"

"You're the general, sir," and nothing more could be elicited from him. Sir George Brown paid up on the spot.

No one who saw him ride straight toward the foe, without an indication that he was in any danger, is likely to forget the animating effect of his bearing on the soldiers.—Sir Evelyn Wood in Fortnightly Review.

The Lady of the Plains.

A young woman from the treeless plains of the west had gone to Boston to a music school on her first trip east, and among the first persons she met at her boarding house was a youth from Bangor. As their acquaintance ripened she told him of what had interested her on the journey.

"Why," she said, with an exultant spirit, "I saw at one place in Pennsylvania a hundred saw logs in one pile."

"A hundred?" he asked, with a tinge of a smile.

"That's what they told me. You know, we don't have saw logs where I came from."

"Is that so? You ought to come to Maine once."

"Do you have them there?"

"Do we?" he replied magnificently. "Do we? Why, my dear young lady, saw logs grow on trees in Maine."

"Really?" she asked in open eyed astonishment.

"It's a literal fact," he asserted positively.

"Well, I don't believe it," she contended, and, do what he could, he could not convince her that he was telling plain, unadorned truth.—Detroit Free Press.

Twenty Years Hence.

Mrs. Newera (entering kitchen hurriedly about 3 p. m. registration day)—Alfred, dear, I am sorry to disturb you, but if we don't register every vote we've got in the ward they are going to lick us sure! Take off your apron and come along. There's a carriage at the door.

Mr. Newera—Ethelberta, I've tried to be a good husband to you. I've never refused to do anything reasonable you have required of me. I have taken care of the house and kept the children out of mischief while you've been at the club or hobnobbing with the candidates down town, and I've never complained, but I'm right in the middle of the fruit canning season, and if you think I'm going to leave this porcelain kettle full of peaches all ready to put in the jars and let the six gallons of apple butter in this washboiler burn and go to waste just for the sake of going out to register you don't know me, madam, that's all. Now, you get out of my way and go on about your business, or I'll throw a dipper of hot water on you!"—Chicago Tribune.

Comparative Strength of Materials.

Cast iron weighs 444 pounds to the cubic foot, and an inch square bar will sustain a weight of 16,500 pounds; bronze, weight 525 pounds; tenacity 3,600; wrought iron, weight 480, tenacity 50,000; hard "struck" steel, weight 490, tenacity 78,000; aluminium, weight 168, tenacity 26,000. We are accustomed to think of metals as being stronger than wood, and so they are, generally speaking, if only pieces of the same size be tested, but when equal weights of the two materials are compared it is then found that several varieties of wood are stronger than ordinary steel. A bar of pine just as heavy as a bar of steel an inch square will hold up 125,000 pounds, the best ash 175,000 pounds and some hemlock 200,000 pounds. Wood is bulky. It occupies 10 or 12 times the space of steel. The best steel castings made for the United States navy have a tenacity of 65,000 to 75,000 pounds to the square inch. By solidifying such castings under great pressure a tensile strength of 80,000 to 150,000 pounds may be obtained.—Railway Review.

The Old Time Husking Bee.

A story is told of husking bee deviltry in the pioneer days of Dexter. Captain Small, one of the first comers, after he had grown to the dignity of having a big barn, gave a husking, to which a large and merry party gathered. While the supper was progressing and the coast was clear some of the "boys" drove one of the captain's steers into the barn floor, and attaching a rope to him lifted him up over the high beams to the top of the haymow. They were so spry about it that the joke was not discovered. The steer was missed, of course, and a search of all the surrounding country was made without success. The animal was given up for lost when one day, a week after the husking, the captain was in his barn and heard a long "moo!" up in the ridge pole. Looking up, there was the missing steer gazing calmly down at him over the high beam. Such was the sport the daddies had in their young days. Modern huskings are more prosaic.—Lewiston Journal.

Sufficient Excuse.

An exchange remarks of John Quincy Adams, recently deceased, that he was very fond of fishing and not especially fond of his legal profession.

One day a case in which he was counsel was down for trial in a Boston court. Mr. Adams did not make his appearance, but sent a letter to the judge. That worthy gentleman read it and then postponed the case with the announcement:

"Mr. Adams is detained on important business."

The note read as follows:

"Dear judge, for the sake of old Isaak Walton, please continue my case until Friday. The smelts are biting, and I can't leave."

Not Hasty.

A very small boy was trying to lead a big St. Bernard up the avenue.

"What are you going to do with that dog?" asked a kindly gentleman.

"I can't make up my mind," was the answer, "not till I find out what the dog thinks o' doin weth me."—Washington Star.

TWO DEAD SOLDIERS.

(Concluded from yesterday)

"Search the house!" cries the sergeant, warding off fresh attacks, "and, mind now, no plundering!"

We have already rapped, and receiving no answer raise the latch and enter without opposition. Everything within shows that the late occupants have but recently fled. Confusion is evident in the pile of unwashed dishes on the bare table, the marks of dirty boots on the floor, the contents of the drawers spilled here and there. It was as if a considerable company had snatched a hasty breakfast, and after plundering the place of all things valuable that could be carried away had bolted to avoid the invader. The fire still burned in the stove, and the warmth yet remaining in frying pan and coffeepot indicated the recent hour.

"No one up stairs," said a comrade who had just come down.

"Those confounded bees have almost killed me!" moaned a man who stands rubbing his back against the door jamb.

"Come, fall in, men!" shouts the sergeant. "We must get back into line as"—

"Sergeant, sergeant!" yells another from the yard. They rush off at once to ascertain what is the matter.

As I am about to follow my eyes rest upon a side door, apparently leading to a closet or bedroom. I carelessly push it inwardly and look inside.

The sight that meets my gaze causes me to stagger against the wall for support. I would run away, but I am rooted to the spot. I would cry out, but my tongue cleaves to the roof of my mouth.

The body of a dead soldier lies stretched stark and stiff upon a bed. It is the body of a powerfully built man and wears the uniform of a Federal cavalryman. Beside the bed is a chair, and on a small stand are various bottles and cloths. On the white counterpane are great splotches of human blood. A lady's handkerchief of delicate material lies upon the floor.

Involuntarily I pick it up. It is moist with tears and flecked with crimson. With a casual glance at the initial "Y" in a corner I gently lay it down again. Then I note that the dead man's hand is slightly extended toward the empty chair, as if some one had sat there and held the hand to the last. And I see the cavalry jacket is unbuttoned, and by laying it open I expose the manly chest. A small round hole below the heart tells how he died. It is very small, not so deep as a well nor as wide as a barn door, but it is enough.

All of this passes in an instant, and I rush out of the house, horror stricken at the scene. On the threshold I am seized by an excited comrade and dragged across the back yard so impetuously that I am almost certain the enemy have surprised us. But he points to a corncrib, about which others are now clustering in silence or subdued conversation.

"There's a dead rebel in there," he hoarsely whispered, and his face, swollen and distorted by the sting of the bees, takes on a grotesque solemnity.

"And there's a dead Union soldier in there," is my echo, astounding him in turn.

The corncrib is a slat affair, built upon posts, and is half full of hay. The men make room for me for the new sensation in the house, and I clamber up over the half door. The sun shines through the broad crevices upon a gray figure at full length on the hay. It is that of a young man and an officer. His uniform is of fine texture, and it fits the figure like a glove. His feet are aristocratic in shape, and his hands are small and delicate and evidently unused to toil. The bandaged arm sufficiently indicates that he had crawled up here to bleed to death alone. His face is that of one who has died an easy death. There is something familiar in it—a face broad and full of self confidence and animal courage. And the wavy brown hair—

Great God! The same expression! It is the same face of the dead cavalryman! Younger, it is true, but it is still—

But, pshaw, it must be my excited imagination! Still it is a remarkable coincidence. I mention the fact to the old sergeant.

"Bosh!" says he as he moistens a little clay and applies it to the swollen eye. "I don't see it. There is but one resemblance, now I come to think of it—they are both dead. But that's all. That cavalry was from Michigan, and that man was shot by bushwhackers."

Anyhow it was strange that this young southerner should lie down here all alone and die unattended, while the sturdy northerner should sink to final rest upon yonder hospitable bed, with soft feminine hands to close his eyes in death, but this is war.

"Fall in, men! We must regain the line—double quick too!" The sergeant turns to me in a low voice and directs me to report to the colonel at once; then away they go pellmell over the fence and across the fields, leaving me standing there in a sort of a daze, alone with the deserted dead and my new duty.

At the foot of the long shaded lane I see the reserves resting in the fence corners. The scattering line of skirmishers is just entering the farther wood on our left. The three minutes lost here seem to have been three hours, and I am conscious of a feeling of surprise at the nearness of the troops. Some terrible fascination ties me to the spot. The bugle notes of the "attention" remind me of the living. Yet my steps lead directly to the bloody bier of the dead cavalryman. There is momentary risk of surprise, but I cannot resist.

It is but for a moment. I really must see that face again, then back once more to the corncrib. No; it is not my imagination—the remarkable resemblance grows upon me. It is a youthful and more refined edition of the dead cavalryman, and yet I cannot define it—cannot particularize. I merely feel that it is so.

The bugle sounds "forward," and I hasten away, and now that I am free from this curious thrall I grasp my rifle more tightly and run down the lane under the trees as one pursued by some horrible specter.

Breathless, I overtake the colonel and his adjutant, who rein up sharply with expectant looks. Having at last found words, I tell them somewhat incoherently of our discovery at the house. The young staff officer smiles at my confusion. But the colonel, a taciturn man, sighs, and turning to the former says grimly:

"Have the bodies buried." And then he rides on.

A scattering musketry fire is heard on the extreme left, and, being ordered to report to my regiment at the nearest point, I hurry forward, dripping with perspiration. The center is halted at the brow of a hill not far away. As I near it a solid shot comes plowing down the stone pike, and I lose no time in obeying a dozen orders to "get off the road." It is accomplished just in time to avoid getting off the earth. Over in the field, and I see two or three small puffs of smoke from a clump of trees, but not a sign of our skirmish line. Wondering how it could have got so far away from the reserves in so short a time, I skip lightly down the hill toward a narrow swale overgrown with high grass, and at the next instant my mistake is made manifest by a couple of rifle shots right ahead and from this same grass. The first were from the enemy, far out of range. Now in the swale I am ordered to lie down by an officer, who is roundly cursing the men who fired away their ammunition uselessly.

"You'll need it soon," he muttered. "Look at that!"

A squadron of cavalry move out from behind the wood en echelon and flash their shining sabers in the sun. At this distance their pale gray is one prancing patch of smoke, the atoms of which are aflame with points of scintillating steel. They are forming for the charge. In two minutes or more we shall be trampled beneath 800 iron hoofs. Strange, but that does not so much concern me as the little terrified fieldmouse that has taken refuge up my trousers leg!

S-s-s-shannng! S-s-s-shannng!

Who ever heard that awful ringing, rasping sound of shotted brass and lived to forget it? For it is our 12 pound howitzers. As the shrieking shells rise in graceful trajectory and burst immediately above the rebel cavalry we could almost weep for joy. A loud hurrah, a quick command, the bell-like voice of the withdrawn sponges, and then:

S-s-s-shannng! S-s-s-shannng!

But the second shells that go screaming over our heads find an enemy already on the run. This is a little more than they bargained for, and they have retired for the rest of the day. A death stricken steed lies writhing in the field, and two riderless horses lead the frantic retreat.

"Forward!" rang the bugles. The pause has been but a few minutes. One of our howitzers sends a solid shot ricochetting and whirring down the road and over the next rise of ground as a reminder that we are coming, and that everybody not of our thinking had better get out of the way. And everybody apparently does, for there are no signs of obstruction for two miles. Then a perfect shower of rifle balls greets us from the outskirts of a small village. We halt and lie down in silence, thoroughly fatigued, while the howitzers are again brought to the front and unlimbered. Then we slowly push the enemy through and beyond the town. It is an hour's hot work, for we must tear down fences of dry cedar driven into the ground and get through back yards in the face of a treacherous fire, but it is finally accomplished and with only trifling casualties in wounded.

When it has been done, our regiment is called from the front, and a fresh regiment takes its place, and thus the army steadily moves on all day, and 90,000 men behind us know nothing of all this and think it very dull and stupid.

That night as we lie about the bivouac fire under the sky of stars I tell the tale of the dead cavalryman. There is one listener, a gaunt Kentuckian, who had joined us but recently to avoid the rebel conscription, whose eyes seem to burn with inward fire.

He came over to the half prostrate group and stood diffidently among men who wore the same uniform, but who were strange to him and his. When I had finished, his fierce look softened, and he turned away to hide the tears that started down his bronzed cheeks. Later he took me out beyond the firelight alone and said:

"'Bout that cavalryman—I"—

"Did you know him?"

"Yes, sah. His name's Young—Bill Young. He jined you uns when I jined, 'n fur same reason. He went into the cavalry, 'cause he did know hosses, shuah. He—he!" And here the speaker's voice grew husky. "He lived there."

"Wh-a-a-t? And then"—

"That were Bill's son."—Charles Theodore Murray in Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Reminder of Home.

The man from Kansas was making a trip across the Atlantic, and during the passage the weather was extremely boisterous. One morning when it was blowing great guns the Kansan appeared on deck. Nobody was in sight except the captain.

"Go below there!" he shouted.

The passenger looked around to see who he was talking to.

"You mean me?" he yelled back when he saw there was no one else in sight.

"Of course I do. Go below," and the captain came alongside.

"Well, I guess not," protested the Kansan. "I'm up here to see how one of your 'mountain high' waves and 'terrific gales' compares with what we have in Kansas in the way of cyclones. This ain't a patching to what I've seen out our way."

Before the captain could offer further objection a big green wave came curling over the place where the passenger stood, and the next thing he knew he was swept off his feet and carried aft over ropes and boats and all the paraphernalia of a ship's deck and landed in a heap in one corner, where he was saved from being washed overboard. When they got him out, he had a broken leg, a twisted shoulder, a sprained wrist, his face looked as if it had been dragged backward through a brier patch, and he was unconscious. They carried him to the captain's room and after much effort restored him to consciousness. He gazed around a minute in bewilderment, and his eyes fell on the captain.

"By gravy, cap," he said feebly, "that reminded me of home, only it was a darn sight wetter."—Detroit Free Press.

Early Suspension Bridges.

The towline is doubtless the earliest as it is still the simplest application of a rope for the removal of material. Hitched to a floating log, the genesis of all water craft, canoe or sledge, it was used before history learned the art of writing or mankind the art of reading.

The towline was combined with the suspension cable as a means of crossing streams in the mountains of Hindustan at a very remote period. The suspension cable, often several hundred feet in length, was made of twisted fibers or slender stalks of climbing vines. This was solidly secured to large trees or masses of rocks on the banks of the chasms to be crossed. On this cable a wooden block, grooved underneath, was placed, suspended from which was a small, rude platform, or at times a simple loop of rope, for the passenger or baggage. The wooden block, with its attached load, was pulled across the chasm in either direction by a towline attached to the block. This rude contrivance is the genesis of the most refined aerial ropeways of the present day and of the suspension bridge also, which is, of a crude form, of very great antiquity.

When the Spaniards first visited Peru, they found suspension bridges which could be traversed by men and burdened animals. Some of these bridges were of over 200 feet span and were formed of half a dozen cables of twisted osiers stretched from bank to bank and passed over wooden supports. These cables were bound together by smaller ropes and were covered with a layer of bamboo, which formed a support for the roadway.—W. F. Durfee in Cassier's Magazine.

ROYAL TEMPLARS.

Their Convention at Woodstock—Second Day's Proceedings.

Special to The Times.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Feb. 20.—The Royal Templars' convention this afternoon was chiefly occupied with committee business. The reports of the sick and funeral benefit department was submitted, but no important changes were recommended in the working of the laws. This morning the session was opened with a well-attended and inspiring prayer and praise service, led by Rev. Mr. Brandon Orton. Greetings were received from the Grand Council of Quebec, Royal Templars, and the Grand Council of Manitoba, Royal Templars.

Charged with Bigamy.

BUFFALO, Feb. 20.—Mildred Harkiss, a pretty brunette, 21 years of age, who is wanted in Canada for bigamy, was arrested here yesterday. The prisoner made no resistance and voluntarily returned with Officer Thomas Smith, of Orangeville, without extradition papers. About four years ago, it is alleged, she married a man named Harkiss at Dufferin, Ont. She was 17 years old then. Three years afterwards she eloped with a man named Whitmore, and has since passed as Mrs. Whitmore. Her first husband located her, and her second spouse caused her arrest on the charge of bigamy. She was indicted on this charge and let to bail. While awaiting trial she jumped her bond and came to this city on Wendnesday last, where she went to live with her sister at 434 Seneca street.

Russian Skaters Drowned.

MOSCOW, Feb. 20.—While a number of students were skating on the Moskval river yesterday the ice gave way and 20 of them were plunged into the water and drowned. None of the bodies have been recovered.

LOCAL ASSEMBLY OPENS.

a brand new copy of the public accounts. "I want to see those accounts myself," said Dr. Ryerson, "but as they will not be ready for two or three weeks we'll have to amuse ourselves over something else."

RYERSON LOOKED CHEERFUL.

The doctor was one of the few Opposition members who looked really cheerful over the commencement of the fray.

J. W. St. John looked his best and saluted everyone he met in a way that would have made the Premier himself envious had he been around.

"Big" Tom Crawford and O. A. Howland both took the oath together.

Mr. Whitney, of Dundas, looked business like. His opponents expect him to liven up things on the "speech" by a vigorous attack. However, that will not take place until tomorrow or Monday.

ALL TAKE THE OATH.

By noon two-thirds of the members had been duly sworn in and by 2.30 practically all of them had taken the oath of office.

W. Reid, M.P.P. for West Durham will be the only absent member it is expected. His opponents are endeavoring to prove that he is a bad man, who bought drinks and paid some of his old debts just before the election. It looks, however, as if he would be on deck all right next week. The judges are so pleased at seeing a man who paid his debts that so far they have unanimously dismissed charges of corruption against him.

Donald McNish, of Elgin, who is the seconder of the "address," is a typical Scotchman, such as Sir Walter Scott has described in his novel. He is bound to be a conspicuous figure in the House.

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor formally opened the Legislature at 3 o'clock. Brave men and fair women trampled on each other's corns to get a glance of the proceedings. They were purely formal, but more or less imposing. Lots of feathers, but no fuss, was the order of the day. A detachment of Dragoons escorted the Queen's representatives to the main entrance, where a detachment of infantry received them. There was no booming of cannon as of years gone by.

Entering the chamber the Lieutenant-Governor found no Speaker in the chair. He called the attention of the House to the fact and then left the hall, while Mr. Balfour was duly installed. Returning he delivered the following

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:—

In opening this, the first session of the eight Parliament of the Province, I am glad to welcome you as the representatives of the people assembled for the dispatch of business.

While the past year was unfavorable to the agricultural in some respects, the prices of many products, especially grain and stock, remaining unusually low, it is very gratifying to know that increased interest has been taken in improved methods of farming and in the reports and publications of the Department of Agriculture. Various agricultural associations and organizations have been making increased demands for instructors. The special dairy work in connection with the Agricultural College at Guelph has been prosecuted with very satisfactory results, and I am pleased to learn that last year proved to be the most successful year in the history of the College.

From time to time public attention has been directed to our northern districts as suitable for settlement by an agricultural population. At the present time considerable interest is being manifested in this direction, and it is proposed to establish, with your approval, at a moderate expense a pioneer diary farm to attract further attention to these new districts and also to prove their adaptability to agriculture.

RAINY LAKE GOLD FIELD.

During the past year the Rainy Lake region has come into notice as a gold field. Many explorers have been attracted to it, a number of promising locations have been taken up and partially developed, and it is expected that several mills for treating ore will be in operation this year. The prospect of gold mining in this district will no doubt promote settlement of the rich agricultural lands in the Rainy River valley.

A bill will be laid before you containing some supplementary provisions which the experience of the last general election has indicated to be desirable in the election laws. The Registration of Voters' Act of last session with respect to cities having worked satisfactorily you will be asked to consider the propriety of extending its operations to towns.

Your attention will be invited to a measure designed to lessen the number of appeals in the courts of the Province and otherwise to simplify the proceedings of the High and Superior Courts; a measure to provide, in matters of Provincial jurisdiction, that where jurors are not unanimous, ten jurors may give a verdict, and some other measures of law reform.

You will further be asked to consider bills for extending the benefit of the Factory Act and the Children's Protection Act; for revising and consolidating the Acts relating to Mechanics' Institutes and Free Libraries.

WILL APPEAL TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

The Supreme Court of Canada having held that the province has no power to pass a prohibitory liquor law, my Government is taking the necessary proceedings for an appeal to her Majesty's Privy Council upon that question, and the appeal is expected to be heard and disposed of before the end of the present year.

In accordance with the promise made to the House last session, I appointed a commission to collect and report the facts bearing on the views which have been expressed with respect to the mode of remunerating and appointing certain provincial officials now paid by fees and with respect to the extent of the remuneration they should receive, including in regard to the said matters respectively the practice and experience of other countries. The commissions have pursued their task with diligence and have made full enquiry into the matters referred to them. The report is about completed and will soon be placed in your hands for consideration, with a view to such legislation as may appear to be proper.

AS TO GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

The question of the maintenance of Government House at the expense of the Province will no doubt receive your earnest attention; and I trust that the policy which may be adopted will be such as may prove to be generally satisfactory.

Since the last session the main building of the Brockville Asylum has been completed, and patients were admitted before the end of the year, relieving thereby the crowded condition of some of the other institutions.

I am pleased to be able to inform you that considerable progress has been made during the past year by the arbitrators to whom were submitted all questions relating to the unsettled accounts between the Dominion and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, and between the two Provinces, and that all the parties interested have shown their sincere desire to have the differences between them settled speedily and amicably.

The Public Accounts for the year just closed will be placed in your hands at a very early day. You will be glad to know that the total expenditures of the Province were kept well within the appropriations, and that the actual receipts were considerably in excess of the estimate.

The estimates for the current year will, without delay, be submitted for your approval. They will be found to have been prepared with a due regard to economy and the necessities of the public service.

The session will, I trust, be noted for the wisdom and prudence of your deliberations and for measures calculated to promote the best interests of the Province.

THE McCARTHY MEETING.

separate schools I prefer the former. But it is a question for the province of Manitoba to decide.

"There can be no mistake in leaving Manitoba alone. If there is an injustice let it be corrected by the people it alone concerns.

The census establishes the fact that the French system of schools is not a wise one. It costs 30 per cent. more to maintain them than public schools. The French province is last on the list in educational advancement of all the provinces and Manitoba is second.

"Let no man go from your constituency unpledged or uncertain upon this matter."

Mr. McCarthy then refuted a statement made by the new Minister of Finance at the Massey Music Hall. The latter had said that Mr. McCarthy slandered Sir John Macdonald by saying that Sir John was a Free-trader, and had adopted protection to gain strength.

"Why," said Mr. McCarthy "if I had said Sir John was a Protectionist I would come nearer slandering him. There are not a dozen men in England who are not free traders. The Tories of England are agitating to move a vote of censure on Lord Rosebery because he placed a duty of 5 per cent. on cotton from India, while we have a duty of 35 per cent. I very possibly said Sir John was a believer in free trade and adopted protection, hoping for those results that did not and have not yet ensued."

The meeting came to an end with loud cheers for the speakers, Canada, and by the singing of the National anthem.

THE ICE RACES.

"Harry B" Won in the 2.40 Event—An Amusing Dog Race.

The blustering weather of yesterday had the effect of diminishing the crowd at the races, but still the attendance was fair. The drifting snow rendered the track heavy and slow but as it drifted on as fast as it was cleared there was no help for it.

In the 2.40 event "Harry B" won easily. This horse has made a splendid record this winter and has a great future before it, which of course is a matter upon which its owner, Mr. H. LeBrun, can congratulate himself. The second prize was won by "Last Chance," while "Lulu B" took third money.

There were four entries in the free for all as follows:

"Demand," owned by Natress; "Medium" owned by a Cobourg syndicate; "White Stocking," owned by Wilson; and "Rowdy Boy," owned by Mr. Sam Curry. "Demand" took first money, Medium second and White Stocking third.

The dog race was an amusing event, the dogs showing a disposition to lie down and scratch fleas when the starting bell was rung. After a great deal of dragging "Soupbone," owned by Fred Whitcroft started and got about 200 yards in the lead. Then H. Brennit's "Muttonchops" decided that he would start and started after "Soupbone." H. Roberts' "Buffalo Robe" got on his legs by this time and the race was fairly begun. "Soupbone" lead for a half and then decided to lie down. "Muttonchops" immediately spurted, took the lead and kept it the rest of the race, coming in first. Whitcroft carried his dog in the rest of the way and got second money. "Buffalo Robe" finished third, and now all the lads will go to the Rugby Minstrels on Monday night. There was lots of fun in the race.

"Harry B" made the fastest time during the "meet," trotting a mile in 2.45.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 22, 1895.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

Hurrah for the Carnival on Friday night.

County S. S. Convention.

The Peterborough County Sabbath School Convention, will be held on Feb. 28th and March 1st at Havelock. All interested in Sabbath school work efficient Sabbath school workers have been secured to introduce the subjects. An interesting time is anticipated.

Council Meeting Tonight.

A special meeting of the Town Council will be held tonight. The meeting is called for the purpose of acting upon the report of the Committee on Appointments, which recommends the dismissal of certain civic officials. The session promises to be both interesting and exciting, and no doubt will be largely attended by citizens and ratepayers.

A Most Atrocious Act.

One night recently some one entered the stables of Mr. Henry Crawford, 6th con., Uxbridge, and fed his horses Paris green mixed with chop. Only two of the animals swallowed the dose and when discovered in the morning one was dead and the other nearly so. Several cases similar to the above have been perpetrated in different parts of Western Ontario. In one instance a milkman on going to his stable found a fine three-year-old colt with his hind quarters literally sliced off.

There will be more fun at the Sons of Canada Carnival on Friday night than there is in a barrel full of monkeys.

A Happy Gathering.

Mr. T. Biole, who for a number of years has been in the employ of the G.T.R. here, has been transferred to Peterborough which necessitates the removal of himself and family to that place. During their residence among the people of Port Hope they have made many friends by their agreeable and social character. It was always a pleasure to meet Mr. and Mrs. Biole. Between fifty and sixty personal friends made an unceremonious call at their residence last Tuesday night, and after order had been secured, Mr. F. Wood, Principal of our Public School, read an address and presented them with a handsome cardinal plush easy chair.—Port Hope Guide.

Of Interest to Artists.

Mr. D. A. Shaw has moved to his new studio, corner of Hunter and George streets, where he will be prepared to meet with pupils who may desire instruction in any branches of painting, drawing, ect. Mr. Shaw will make a specialty of teaching china and pottery painting. Having studied in Chicago and New York all the latest methods of decorating china, he is in a position to impart the latest ideas in the art. His rooms will be open to the public on and after Thursday, 21st inst., at 3 o'clock—main entrance first door south of Hunter on George; private or ladies' entrance, first door west of George on Hunter. Mr. Shaw has purchased a kiln for firing china, so that the great risk and expense of sending it to the city to be fired will be done away with. tf19

ANOTHER MOVE

That Makes the New Railway Look Like Business.

On Thursday last, Campbellford was visited by a company of Grand Trunk Railway officials, consisting of Mr. Crowley, engineer, Mr. McNab, road master, and a couple of assistants, who spent a few hours taking levels of that part of the village from the Grand Trunk crossing at Booth street, down to the Rathbun mill, in a northwesterly direction. This was done with a view to the removal at no distant date, of the Grand Trunk "spur" running across Ranney and Rear streets, and along Market street to the old railway bridge crossing the river.

The chief object of this contemplated move is to avoid a "diamond" on Rear street where the Cobourg, Northumberland & Pacific Railway would cross the present "spur" on the said street. This will prove a great advantage to the village, as the building of the C. N. & P. road would necessitate the throwing up of a high embankment along Rear street in order to get over the old road.

The officials called upon Reeve W. W. Armstrong and wanted to know if the Council would give them assistance. Mr. Crowley asked if the corporation would grant them the same privileges as were given to the C. N. & P. Railway with reference to the crossing of streets. Mr. Armstrong replied that he thought the Council would accede to the Grand Trunk the same terms as were stipulated in the by-law regarding the crossing of streets by the C. N. & P. road, provided the proper safeguards to life and property were observed.

TWO FIRES.

One in Hastings Village and one in Lakefield.

HASTINGS, Feb. 20.—The farm house of Mr. James Carter, one and a half miles east of this village, on the north shore of the River Trent, was burned at noon today. The building was a frame house, worth between six and eight hundred dollars. It is supposed that it originated from an ash barrel in the rear of the building, but very little of the contents of the house were saved, as there were only Mrs. Carter and the children at home, Mr. Carter being away. There was no insurance, as far as can be learned.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 20.—Fire was discovered in the frame dwelling of William Matthews, a retired farmer, about 2.30 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire had made great headway before being discovered. The contents were saved, but the building is a total loss, of about $1,000. No insurance.

There will be lots of fun Friday night at the Carnival. Come and see for yourself and you will never regret it.

A WEARY TRAMP.

The Hardships of an Old Scotchman—Robbed in Toronto.

On Friday evening an old Scotchman, giving the name of Thompson, struck town. He was apparently about eighty years of age, well dressed and quite respectable looking. He said his home was about ten miles northwest of Peterborough, and that he had been visiting friends in Guelph. On his return he reached Toronto safely, but while walking along York street in that city his arms were suddenly pinioned by two young men, who took his pocketbook, containing about $25, and then threw him heavily on the walk.

He notified the police, but the thieves could not be found. He then, being destitute of means with which to reach his home, applied to two prominent Presbyterian ministers in the city, but they refused to give him aid. Not wishing to alarm his relatives by sending for money, he started to walk home. On Friday morning he reached Roseville, some four miles west of here, Mr. T. Forsyth, proprietor of the hotel there, treated him kindly, giving him what ministers of the gospel had refused—food and a small amount of money.

The old gentleman on reaching Uxbridge was cared for by some members of the order of Sons of Scotland, and by them sent to Peterborough. He first appealed to one of our local divines, but was refused aid, the reverend gentleman thinking, no doubt, that the applicant was undeserving.—North Ontario (Uxbridge) Times.

THE HYAMS DISCLOSURES

HARRY SAID TO HAVE TWO WIVES LIVING.

A Millionaire to the Rescue—The Liberal Pair for Halifax—Lennox Liberals Working Hand in Hand With the Patrons.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—At the police court yesterday Crown Attorney Curry was not ready to go on in the case of of Dallas T. and Harry P. Hyams, charged with the murder of William C. Wells. Mr. Murdoch, counsel for the defence, was ready to go on, but an adjournment was made until the 27th at the request of the crown.

The court room was crowded with curious spectators, most of whom quickly dispersed as soon as the matter was disposed of. The prisoners maintained a passive demeanor and looked well, their confinement evidently agreeing with them.

It was learned from a private source today that Chapman Hyams, the New Orleans millionaire, brother of the twin prisoners, was either in the city or would be here tomorrow. He could not be found at the hotels. This is the man whom New Orleans despatches stated claimed to be no connection whatever of the accused. This would give credence to the report that $5,000 had been sent here to the prisoners' counsel and that two private American detectives would reach Toronto by the first of March to assist in getting up the case for the defence.

Information has been received from New York which leads the Crown to believe that Harry Hyams is a bigamist, as it is alleged that he was married ten years ago in Brooklyn.

A BRILLIANT BALL.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21.—The Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen were tendered a ball by the citizens of Montreal at the Windsor hotel last night. Nearly 500 leading citizens were present and the event was a brilliant success.

LIBERALS VS. PATRONS.

NAPANEE, Feb. 21.—The annual meeting of the Lennox Reform Association was held today in the town hall and was well attended. Mr. Allison made a good address in which he advised the Liberals of Lennox to stand true and vote for the candidate, be he a Liberal or a Patron. At the close of his address, he said that owing to the action of the Patrons in nominating a candidate he considered it worse than folly for him to attempt to be elected. He said he had concluded to resign. The majority of the party were of the opinion that in view of the generosity of the Patrons in some constituencies in not offering the Liberal candidates any opposition, notably South Oxford, that the Reform party in Lennox could well afford to turn in and assist in electing the Patrons.

LIBERAL PAIR FOR HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, Feb. 21.—At the Liberal convention today James W. Carmichael and John D. McLeod were the party choice for the ensuing elections.

CONSERVATIVES ORGANIZING.

Hon. Mr. Ouimet and Hon. John Haggart are in the city looking after Conservative organization in the Montreal district. They met a number of prominent Conservatives today and talked over local organization.

VICTORIAS DEFEATED.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21.—The Crystal Shamrock hockey team defeated the Victoria team last night by eight goals to three in the championship series.

STRIKE IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The piece work system, which caused the long strike of the United Garment Workers of America, is now responsible for a strike in the ranks of the K. of L. This morning at 8 o'clock 3,000 members of the Children's Jacket Makers' Union 155, K. of L., went on strike and it is probable that 5,000 or 6,000 affiliated with that order will go out.

SUGAR BOUNTY.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—There is said to be a strong probability that the Senate will pass the bill paying sugar growers of this country the bounty on all sugar grown up to the time the new tariff act went into effect and all that will be produced under the lyons and authorised prior to the McKinley bill, up to the time of the expiration of these lyons and July 1st next. An amendment to this effect will be offered in the Senate to the Foundry Civil bill.

LOCAL ASSEMBLY OPENS.

THE LIEUT.-GOVERNOR DELIVERS THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Our Law Makers in Session—A Patron Deputation Waits Upon Sir Oliver—It Will be a Very Busy Session—Opening Ceremonies.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—The Legislative halls of the Province were all life and bustle this forenoon. Scores of members were there shaking hands and swearing in the members.

Lieut.-Col. Chas. Clarke, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, and his able lieutenant, Mr. A. H. Sydere, assisted in the latter operation. The swearing was quite promiscuous, and Liberals Conservatives and Patrons all took turns at it.

It was an easy matter to distinguish the new members from the old. Col. Clarke stood with a Bible resembling a half-grown volume of Webster's unabridged dictionary.

HOW THEY KISSED THE BOOK.

When an old stager who had been there before came along he viewed it on both sides, examined the edges, changed it from one hand to the other, and barely touched the near corner with his lips.

When a rising young statesman took a turn he seized the "book" with a firm grasp of his strong right arm and gave it a smack that made Sergeant-at-Arms Glackmeyer doubtful as to whether he was in the halls of state or a boiler plate factory.

THE PATRONS ALL TOGETHER

Patron leader Haycock was on deck early with a number of his friends. He and his followers will all sit together.

"There was no friction over the seating arrangements," he said. "When we found they had separated us up we asked to be put together and our request was promptly granted. There was no trouble over it."

However, one Patron at least will be safely installed among the Liberals. Macpherson will have Rayside's old seat. The explanation of this is that he wrote for his predecessor's seat some time ago and it was allotted to him. His allegiance to the cause of agriculture, however, remains unchanged so far.

Regarding the seating arrangements evil-minded persons have been mean enough to insinuate that the Government intended to hive four or five Patrons in among the faithful so that the moral influences surrounding them might be used successfully when absolutely necessary. Of course every one who knows the Ontario Cabinet will not believe this.

PATRONS WAIT ON SIR OLIVER.

The Patron members in town have not been long in getting their heads together. After a consultation among themselves, they sent a deputation, consisting of Messrs. Haycock, Caven, McNichol, Macpherson and Gamy, to interview Sir Oliver and his Ministers. The interview took place this morning, but as to what it was all about all parties were as dumb as a Dominion politician on the Manitoba School question.

It is hinted, however, that they talked over some reforms they wanted pressed through, and also impressed incidentally on the Government that the Patron members were a party and intended to be regarded as such.

They will hold a caucus shortly to appoint a "whip" but so far have no one in view.

LIBERALS LOOK HAPPY.

The Liberal members appeared in better spirits than their opponents.

Hon. Wm. Harty, of Kingston, was the only Minister to come in and swear along with the common rank and file. He didn't look worried either over the threatened protest against his peace and welfare and also his position as member for Kingston.

While he carefully adjusted a pair of gold eyeglasses preparatory to inscribing his autograph on the roll and also on the declarations, Mr. Dana came along and made the various "X marks" as required by the statute.

"Say, Dana, can you subscribe to that declaration after reading it?" queried the Commissioner.

"That won't trouble you!" retorted Mr. Dana, "for I don't believe you've even read yours."

Mr. Harty declared he had duly affixed his name and seal, and bolted down the room to welcome the latest Patron arrival

"SALVATION TOM."

"Here comes Salvation Tom," somebody remarked as the member from London arrived.

The oldest inhabitant in the Forest City cannot remember when the Liberals ever before sent more than a transient member to any kind of a Parliament. Therefore when Mr. Hobbs was ready to leave for Toronto the crowd escorted him to the station and started him for Toronto in a manner which made the Grand Trunk's through Pullman passengers wonder if the Industrial Fair Association of Toronto was holding an adjourned meeting up there on the railway platform.

HOW HE GOT THE NAME.

The appellation "Salvation Tom" was not applied to him here because he is a devout follower of and worker for General Booth. Although an admirer of that great leader he has never actively entered the army's ranks. But when he ran in London Sir Oliver was in a minority. Mr. Hobbs' victory changed a minority of one into a majority of one. Hence he was regarded as the party's saviour.

THE NEW SPEAKER.

Speaker elect Balfour stood around, smiled and shook hands. He is not looking in the best of health, but his spirits seem good.

"Dominion politics are all that the people of Essex are worried about now and as usual the most of them are good Grits, and will do their duty."

Along came Bob Ferguson. He had just escaped from the clutches of "Doc" Willoughby, who had been talking 400 words a minute into him for over half an hour. Mr. Ferguson lives in and represents one of the Kents for Provincial purposes, but when the Dominion elections come round he finds himself in Bothwell, the territory of Hon. David Mills.

SAYS MILLS IS SAFE.

"Mills is all right," he said. "He'll have a bigger majority than ever this time. So far, there are three in the field—Mills, Liberal; Sharpe, Conservative, and McCoy, Patron. McCoy will probably retire, and Sharpe will wish he had, too, before Mills gets through with him."

NOT HALF OF THEM BACK.

Not half of the old members have come back. Consequently many strange faces appeared on the scene. There are a good many members well up in years in the House this time. This is especially true of the Patron representatives.

"But, on the average," said that old legislative veteran, Col. Clarke, "they are the youngest lot of men I have ever seen here."

NO TROUBLE AHEAD.

It is not likely there will be any serious fighting at the outset.

"I know of nothing out of the way," said Leader Merter. "This opening will probably be similar to those of previous years."

While Mr. Marter may criticise parts of the Queen's speech he does not agree with he will not feel really at home until he gets

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

IS IT TO BE A SESSION?

THE ELECTION NOT TO TAKE PLACE FOR SOME MONTHS.

So Said Hon. W. B. Ives in Collingwood—A Young Man Whirled to Death—Toronto Mayoralty Protest—Hamilton Strikers.

Special to the Times.

COLLINGWOOD, Feb. 22.—Hon. N. Clarke Wallace and Hon. W. B. Ives addressed two meetings in the Opera House here today—one in the afternoon and the other this evening. Mr. Ives surprised the audience by announcing that a general election would not take place for some months and when it does come off the people will not need the overcoats. The addresses at both meetings were devoted to National Policy. As this is D'Alton McCarthy's riding there was considerable feeling expressed among the audience at the afternoon meeting by interrupting the speakers whenever Mr. McCarthy's name was mentioned. The Ministers will speak at Aurora tonight.

THE STUDENTS EPISODE.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—The lectures were not much better attended today in Toronto University than they were at any day during the week. This is partly due to the arrangements which are being made for the conversation tomorrow night and partly due to the determination of a number of the students to still remain away from the lectures.

A PATRON REFUSES TO STAND.

WALKERTON, Feb. 22.—Mr. Jas. Tolton, who was nominated last week as the Patron candidate for the Commons in East Bruce, has definitely declined the nomination.

THE HORSE MARKET.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 22.—Good prices have of late been paid for horses here, good rangy drivers and coachers. Walter Fanning states that a team which he bought from Asa Mott, of Thurlow, for J. W. Canniff, a dealer at Montreal, sold for $500 there, and a team which he purchased from J. W. Ross, of Thurlow, for a dealer at St. Albans, Vt., brought $1,000 there.

THE DEAD ACTRESS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The funeral services over the remains of Margaret W. Drysdale, the actress, whose stage name was Madge York, and who was murdered in Philadelphia, took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the church of the Eternal Hope on 31st street. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. E. C. Bolles, pastor of the church, and a quartette furnished the music. Many theatrical people attended the funeral.

COOLING DOWN STRIKERS.

HAMILTON, Feb. 21.—About 50 laborers were at work on section 20 of the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway today, and a couple of hundred strikers looked on and jeered the workers. A squad of constables under the head of ex-Chief McKinnon kept the strikers from doing violence. There is likely to be serious trouble if the laborers are not paid soon, as they are in debt and without funds and are getting very unruly. Lawyer Teetzel says the laborers will be paid shortly and the men will resume work, but up till this evening no money was forthcoming, and the men threaten to tear up the track unless paid very.

THE MINISTER OF RAILWAYS.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.—Hon. John Haggart, Minister of Railways, who has been here for some days conferring with local Conservatives, left for the Capital this evening.

VICE REGAL PARTY.

HORSE SHOW.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—The date for the opening of the Canadian horse show has been changed to Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 18, 19 and 20. The show will in all probability be held in the new Armory building on University avenue.

MAYORALTY PROTEST.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Before the Master-in-Chambers this morning the new quo warranto proceedings were taken by Wm. Britnell, Somerhill avenue, against the election of Mayor Kennedy. An application for a trial was made and granted and the proceedings will be pressed at once. Mr. Britnell alleges many acts of corruption in connection with the election.

CHICAGO ERUDITION.

An Opinion of Raphael from the Bench—The Decameron in Court.

Special to the Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—J. L. Veronee, of the Chicago Publishing Company, was arraigned in Justice Bradwell's court yesterday on charges of disposing of illegal literature. The book in question was an edition of the "Decameron," which the court, after considerable obscene, and in consequence held the defendant to the Criminal Court in bonds of $1,000.

During the progress of the trial the defence introduced a publication entitled "Raphael"—a life of the great artist by Eugene Muntz, which was taken from the files of the public library. Certain pictures in the work were shown to Justice Bradwell, who said: "Well, I don't like these either. Who is this man Raphael?"

"He was a great painter, your Honor," was the answer.

"Did he belong to the union?" next queried the justice.

"Why, no, your Honor; he was a great artist nearly a thousand years ago," replied Veronee's attorney.

"Well," said Justice Bradwell, "it's a good thing that Raphael didn't live in this city, because if he did and was brought before me I should feel it my duty to hold him to the Criminal Court, art or no art.'

War on the Isthmus.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The Herald's special from Panama says: A war bulletin, just issued by the Government, gives news of the repulse of a detachment of invaders near Hababia. The Government forces, which were commanded by Dr. Ponsoo, took 250 prisoners and a large supply of arms of the latest manufacture.

PANAMA, Feb. 21.—The Star and Herald says: "The invaders from Venezuela were defeated at Santa Rosa and 250 prisoners, with all their amunition and new rifles, were captured. Five thousand Government troops are marching on Santander."

Colonial Copyright Correspondence.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Sir John Lubbock has announced his intention of asking the Government to publish the correspondence respecting the matter of colonial copyright.

To the Far East.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A despatch to the Globe says the Russian Mediterranean squadron has been ordered to the far east.

TROUBLE IN EGYPT.

The Malabar to Land Five Hundred Troops There.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The Times correspondent in Cairo says that the attitude of the Egyptian lower classes in Alexandria towards European, especially British soldiers and sailors, is openly defiant and agressive. The circumstances favor the chances of a popular disturbance. He says: "One disquieting feature is the large influx of Bedouins into the outskirts of the town. All the symptoms vividly recall those that heralded the massacres of 1882. For some time past one of the Khedive's proteges, formerly removed from the Government service for peculation, has been busy disbursing Khedival largesse among the Bedouins and recruiting the body guard of his Highness. That a dangerous agitation has been artificially provoked in Alexandria is evident from the contrast between the excitement there and the complete tranquillity and contentment of the rest of Egypt since Nubar Pasha's Ministry has been in power."

It has excited considerable comment in Portsmouth that the troopship Malabar, which is on the eve of her departure for India with a relief force, has received orders contrary to the original programme to land 500 men at Alexandria and to embark there a smaller number of men than the first orders called for.

The Standard has this despatch from Cairo:—The situation in Alexandria has been somewhat overdrawn. Symptoms of inquietude exist, but probably they will go no further.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The Debats' correspondent in Cairo says that British agents are circulating the rumor that the natives in Alexandria are preparing to attack the Europeans. The correspondent describes the rumor as a pure falsehood, gotten up by provocative agents, who foment trouble for the benefit of Great Britain.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 22.—Mail despatches from West Africa gives details of the native raid on the Niger Company's headquarters at Akassa last month. The natives captured Mr. Wyee, chief of the Company's printing works, and took him to Nimbi, where they beheaded him. It is believed that a large number of the Company's native employees were killed or captured. It is understood that a British advance upon Nimbi is imminent.

WHOLE FAMILY INSANE.

THREE BROTHERS AND TWO SISTERS COMMIT A MURDEROUS ATTACK ON THEIR MOTHER.

A Strange Family This—A Sensation Which is Arousing Brampton and Vicinity—Two of Them Now in Brampton Jail.

Special to The Times.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 22.—Considerable excitement was caused here by the arrest of D. J. McLure, a highly respected farmer who lives about three miles from Brampton, and his two brothers. They were brought to Brampton and lodged in jail charged with a murderous attack upon their mother.

ACTED STRANGELY.

The family has been acting strangely for some time, and only recently they killed all their hogs and threw them away, believing the end of the world was near. They also believed that food would not be required long. It is thought to be a religious craze.

The immediate cause of the arrest was the attack upon their mother, who rushed out and made her way to a neighbor's, where help was obtained.

ALL WERE IN BED.

Proceeding to the homestead the three brothers and two sisters were found in bed all naked.

Constable Hurst brought the young men to jail, and the young women will be sent to Toronto asylum.

MANUFACTURER'S LIFE.

Financial Statement for 1894—Progress of a Well Known Insurance Company.

The financial statement of the Manufacturers' Life Assurance Company for 1894, which is published hereunder, exhibits some features which deserve more than passing mention. The conservative policy which was inaugurated by the present management five years ago and which has been indicated in every yearly statement since, continues to be rigidly adhered to with the most satisfactory results. The first policy issued by the company is dated 19th August, 1887, seven and a half years ago, in which time the company has placed upon its books $9,555,300 of business which is beyond all question the very best. From 1889 until the end of 1894, the gross assets have increased nearly 300 per cent., and now amount to the handsome sum of $831,330.88; the net surplus has increased from zero to $50,469.72; the cash income has increased nearly 100 per cent., and the insurance in force has increased 50 per cent. These results have been attained by principles of method and caution, by principles which prefer a moderate amount of carefully selected business secured at a moderate expenditure, to large totals obtained at a correspondingly large outlay.

The death rate of the Manufacturers' Life, which has always been remarkably low, and which in the year 1893 was less than in 1892 by $20,000 in claims paid, was for 1894 less than 1893 by nearly $10,000, being for 31 deaths for $44,122; a most remarkable mortality experience, and one which fully attests the careful medical supervision exercised in the selection of risks for which the Manufacturers' is noted.

But what will be of equal interest to our policyholders and others concerned in the welfare of the company is that notwithstanding the steady increases which have been made during the past year, (at a time when the cry of "hard times and no money," was heard early and late, and when the greater part of the insurable community were as so many Jeremiahs, whose lamentations made life underwriting exceptionally difficult, not to say tedious); these increases have been secured at no corresponding increase of expense. And in proof of this the put by for the year amounts to $150,000 or over 50 per cent. of the income, whilst an increase of insurance in force of 50 per cent. of the income, whilst an increase of insurance in force of 50 per cent. over 1889, has been secured at an increase in expenditure of less than 5 per cent. These results speak for themselves, and are an eloquent tribute to the present sound and economic management of Managing Director Ellis.

Special S. A. Meetings.

The Salvation Army will hold three days special meetings beginning today and extending over Sunday and Monday, to be conducted by Brigadier Scott, of Kingston. The Brigadier is on a farewell tour of east Ontario province, and this will be his last visit to Peterborough. On Monday night Brigadier DeBarrett, of Toronto, will be in attendance.

Swallowed Poison.

On Tuesday the little daughter of Joseph Parkin, aged two and one-half years, got access to a balladona liniment, which as a child of her age would naturally do, drank some of it. Medical assistance was at once called in as soon as the occurrence was known. We are glad to learn she is now out of danger.—Warder.

A G. T. R. Incident

On Wednesday evening of last week, a somewhat curious accident occurred on the Victoria branch of the Grand Trunk railway. When the north express train of which Conductor Charles Pym, engineer Ralph Clarke, and fireman William Pym, were in charge, was within about six miles of Haliburton, the baggage car and two passenger coaches jumped the track, but fortunately very little damage was done. The passengers were shook up but no one injured. A loose rail half a mile back from where the train stopped, was found to have been the cause of the accident. The derailed cars were got back on the track without much difficulty.

WON THE TROPHY.

Peterborough Colts Defeat Belleville and Secure the Trophy.

Wednesday two rinks of the Belleville Colts played the scheduled game with the local Colts and were defeated by the decisive majority of 21 shots. This victory gives the trophy to the local curlers, having won two games from Campbellford and one with Belleville. There remains only one match to play, namely, Peterborough at Belleville, which if the local curlers lose will not alter the result, so far as the trophy is concerned. "Dick" Davidson skipped his rink like an old veteran and played one of his very best games, which means a good deal. After the first few ends he steadily forged ahead and came out victorious by a score of 25 to 6. He was ably assisted by his vice, "Teddy" Clegg, and the rest of his rink played well.

Skip George Horkins had a close match with his opponent, but secured a victory, coming out two shots ahead. The rinks were as follows:

DOMINION GRANGERS.

They Opened their Annual Meeting Wednesday Afternoon—President's Address

President Dawson Kennedy, of Peterborough, presided at the opening session Wedday afternoon of the annual meeting of the Dominion Grangers's Association in the Albion hotel, Toronto.

The president's address recommends a number of important changes, which it is expected will strengthen their membership. It is also proposed to wait upon Sir Oliver and his Ministers to legislate in the interest of the grangers of this province. The address concludes with a general review of the association during the past year, and says while there has been no new local bodies instituted many of the old ones have been brought back to the fold.

At the conclusion of the president's address it was referred to a special committee, who will report on the recommendation suggested today.

President Kennedy when asked how they viewed political affair, said: We are not a political organization, nor do we nominate candidates for Parliament, but it is an unwritten law with us that we give our preference to farmers every time and especially to the Patrons of Industry.

It is also expected that during next week a joint meeting of Grangers and Patrons will be held when matters of interest to both will be discussed. The meeting may be held in Peterborough.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLARS

In Annual Convention—The Grand Chief's Address

The annual convention of the Royal Templars of Ontario was opened in Woodstock Tuesday morning with upwards of 100 delegates present. The first hour was devoted to a prayer and praise service. The report of the presiding officer, Rev. W. Kettlewell, Paris, was quite an important document containing extended reference to public affairs, matters of historic interest relating to the plebiscite battle, the deputation to the Dominion Cabinet, the peregrinations of the Royal Commission, the debate in Parliament precipitated by Mr. B. F. Flint, Yarmouth, N.S., the advent of Messrs. Dickey and Ferguson, prominent prohibitionists, into the Dominion Cabinet; the course of the test case now before the courts, etc. Peterborough was well represented.

HE RETURNS THANKS.

Premier Bowell Makes a Fitting Acknowledgment to the Orangemen.

C. W. Sawers, Esq., Peterborough:

PRIVY COUNCIL OFFICE,
OTTAWA, Feb. 13, 1895.

DEAR MR. SAWERS—I have your letter of the 8th instant—signed also by other members of your lodge—conveying to me a copy of a resolution passed by the West Peterborough County L. O. L. in relation to myself. Please assure the brethren that I sincerely appreciate their congratulations and sentiments of esteem. You may also say to them that I shall earnestly try to observe the advice they have given and in accordance with the aims and principles of the Orange Association, do justice to all classes and creeds in the Dominion. In doing this I feel sure that I shall not forfeit the valued confidence of our brethren throughout the country.

Fraternally yours,
MACKENZIE BOWELL.

THE ICE RACES.

"Harry B" Won in the 3 Minute Event—A Large Attendance.

The first days ice racing came off very successfully Wednesday afternoon, and the two events proved interesting and good drawing attractions. The gathering on the Little Lake numbered away up in the hundreds. Of these a large number were from outside points. There was a fair sprinkling of ladies present and the procession of equipages was by no means small. The ice was in excellent condition. The weather was mild and everything was propitious for the afternoon's sport.

In the three minute race, the local horses won, taking first and second places. "Harry B," owned by Mr. H. LeBrun took first prize. "Essie Carr," owned by Mr. Ed. Brown, took second and "Lulu B," won the third prize. The heats were as follows:

First—Essie Carr, 1; Harry B., 2; Last Chance, 3; Lulu B., 4; Black Bess, 5; Canadian Golddust, 6; Lapidist Chief, 7.

Second—Harry B., 1; Lulu B., 2; Essie Carr, 3; Last Chance, 4; Black Bess, 5; Lapidist Chief, 6; Canadian Golddust, 7.

Third—Harry B., 1; Lulu B., 2; Last Chance, 3; Essie Carr, 4; Black Bess, 5; Lapidist Chief, 6; Canadian Golddust, 7.

Fourth—Harry B., 1; Lulu B., 2; Essie Carr, 3; Last Chance, 4; Black Bess, 5; Lapidist Chief, 6; Canadian Golddust, 7.

THE COLTS' RACE.

There were four entries for the Colts' race as follows:

"Lucky Star," owned by S. E. Ferguson, of Cavan.

"Livery Boy," owned by Richard Croft, of Cobourg.

"Dolly Stanton," owned by R. N. Nattrass, Millbrook.

"Stride-away," owned by Andrew Hogg.

It was a clean and pretty race in every heat and good speed was shown. "Livery Boy" won and the second and third prizes were awarded to Stride-away and Dolly Stanton respectively. The horses came under the wire in the four heats in the following order:

First—Livery Boy, 1; Dolly Stanton, 2; Stride-away, 3; Lucky Star, 4.

Second—Livery Boy, 1; Dolly Stanton, 2; Stride-away, 3; Lucky Star, 4.

Third—Stride-away, 1; Livery Boy, 2; Dolly Stanton, 3; Lucky Star, 4.

Fourth—Livery Boy, 1; Stride-away, 2; Dolly Stanton, 3; Lucky Star, 4.

FIFTY HOURS WITHOUT SLEEP

Weary Nights to Suffering

NERVOUSNESS AND SLEEPLESSNESS THE CAUSE.

Paine's Celery Compound Brings Sweet Rest and Sleep.

MISS ANNA DAWSON.

Modern civilization and life is marred and saddened owing to the great prevalence of nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, depression of spirits and nervous headache.

Women are the chief sufferers. The constant cares and crosses of daily life in the home, and the worries and exactions of society, all tend to disturb and break up the nervous organism.

Medical science has given to the world Paine's Celery Compound, a true nerve food, vitalizer and builder, the only medicine that can restore health and bring sweet rest and natural sleep. Mrs. Dawson, of Wilkesport, Ont., who was once a great sufferer, testifies as follows:—

"I consider it a pleasure and duty to put on record what Paine's Celery Compound has done for for me. I have been afflicted with nervousness and sleeplessness, and at times have been without sleep for fifty hours. All ordinary medicines failed, and nothing met my case until I used Paine's Celery Compound. Now I never miss a night's sleep. I strongly recommed your medicine to all nervous sufferers."

THE ICE RACES.

"Harry B" Won in the 2.40 Event—An Amusing Dog Race.

The blustering weather of Thursday had the effect of diminishing the crowd at the races, but still the attendance was fair. The drifting snow rendered the track heavy and slow but as it drifted on as fast as it was cleared there was no help for it.

In the 2.40 event "Harry B" won easily. This horse has made a splendid record this winter and has a great future before it, which of course is a matter upon which its owner, Mr. H. LeBrun, can congratulate himself. The second prize was won by "Last Chance," while "Lulu B" took third money.

There were four entries in the free for all as follows:

"Demand," owned by Natress; "Medium" owned by a Cobourg syndicate; "White Stocking," owned by Wilson; and "Rowdy Boy," owned by Mr. Sam Curry. "Demand" took first money. Medium second and White Stocking third.

The dog race was an amusing event, the dogs showing a disposition to lie down and scratch fleas, when the starting bell was rung. After a great deal of dragging "Soupbone," owned by Fred Whitcroft started and got about 200 yards in the lead. Then H. Breault's "Muttonchops" decided that he would start and started after "Soupbone." H. Roberts' "Buffalo Robe" got on his legs by this time and the race was fairly begun. "Soupbone" lead for a half and then decided to lie down. "Muttonchops" immediately spurted, took the lead and kept it the rest of the race, coming in first. Whitcroft carried his dog in the rest of the way and got second money. "Buffalo Robe" finished third, and now all the lads will go to the Rugby Minstrels on Monday night. There was lots of fun in the race.

"Harry B" made the fastest time during the "meet," trotting a mile in 2.45.

A WEARY TRAMP.

The Hardships of an Old Scotchman—Robbed in Toronto.

On Friday evening an old Scotchman, giving the name of Thompson, struck town. He was apparently about eighty years of age, well dressed and quite respectable looking. He said his home was about ten miles northwest of Peterborough, and that he had been visiting friends in Guelph. On his return he reached Toronto safely, but while walking along York street in that city his arms were suddenly pinioned by two young men, who took his pocketbook, containing about $25, and then threw him heavily on the walk.

He notified the police, but the thieves could not be found. He then, being destitute of means with which to reach his home, applied to two prominent Presbyterian ministers in the city, but they refused to give him aid. Not wishing to alarm his relatives by sending for money, he started to walk home. On Friday morning he reached Roseville, some four miles west of here, Mr. T. Forsyth, proprietor of the hotel there, treated him kindly, giving him what ministers of the gospel had refused—food and a small amount of money.

The old gentleman on reaching Uxbridge was cared for by some members of the order of Sons of Scotland, and by them sent to Peterborough. He first appealed to one of our local divines, but was refused aid, the reverend gentleman thinking, no doubt, that the applicant was undeserving.—North Ontario (Uxbridge) Times.

RAN AWAY FROM HOME.

A Young Girl Found Sobbing Piteously on the King Street Bridge.

Standing sobbing on the sidewalk adjacent to the bridge over the creek on King street, a young girl, very daintly costumed in a dress which matched the beauty of her countenance, was found last evening crying piteously, in a manner that at once attracted attention.

A well-known citizen while returning to his home in the South ward about 11 o'clock was forced to halt on George street at the corner of King street, where he heard cries ascending from some human person near by.

The gentleman was moved. The thought of some person being alone in the cold night appealed to his sensitive instincts and he at once commenced to investigate. Walking west on King street, he listened to the sobs and after he had walked several yards he espied the figure of a young lady leaning against the railing of the King street bridge. He quickly stepped up to the wailing girl and on questioning her, he learned she had ran away from home, as the result of the treatment inflicted severely by a cruel stepmother. The girl said her home was in Smith Falls and in that town she claims her position in society was a creditable one, but the unsympathetic step mother, had caused her to leave friends and father, to gain seclusion from the unhappy home life. But this was not to be and she fared, possibly worse, than at her home in the railroad town. The girl, who would not declare her name boarded the C.P.R. train at Smith Falls yesterday morning and when Peterborough was called, she left the train for a few minutes but the few minutes proved to be many, and she was not in time to step on the moving cars. Luckily the girl had placed her hat and cloak on. But the situation of being left in a town, where she had no friends, fell heavily upon her young mind and she was unable to plan out any way of helping herself. Her sorrow was increased when she found that her satchel containing her purse had been left on the seat in the car. She walked around the streets from 4.48, when the train arrived, until she was found crying, too proud to ask for help and sympathy.

The citizen was informed by the young lady that she had intended going to Toronto to stay with friends but he advised her to return to her father in Smith Falls and the necessary fare was kindly handed the sorrowing sixteen year old maiden. When the midnight C.P.R. express going East halted at the station, the girl, quickly boarded it with the determination to go back home and put up with home life.

TWO FIRES.

One in Hastings Village and one in Lakefield.

HASTINGS, Feb. 20.—The farm house of Mr. James Carter, one and a half miles east of this village, on the north shore of the River Trent, was burned at noon today. The building was a frame house, worth between six and eight hundred dollars. It is supposed that it originated from an ash barrel in the rear of the building, but very little of the contents of the house were saved, as there were only Mrs. Carter and the children at home. Mr. Carter being away. There was no insurance, as far as can be learned.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 20.—Fire was discovered in the frame dwelling of William Matthews, a retired farmer, about 2.30 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire had made great headway before being discovered. The contents were saved, but the building is a total loss, of about $1,000. No insurance.

ANOTHER MOVE

That Makes the New Railway Look Like Business.

On Thursday last, Campbellford was visited by a company of Grand Trunk Railway officials, consisting of Mr. Crowley, engineer, Mr. McNab, road master, and a couple of assistants, who spent a few hours taking levels of that part of the village from the Grand Trunk crossing at Booth street, down to the Rathbun mill, in a northwesterly direction. This was done with a view to the removal at no distant date, of the Grand Trunk "sper" running across Ranney and Rear streets, and along Market street to the old railway bridge crossing the river.

The chief object of this contemplated move is to avoid a "diamond" on Rear street where the Cobourg, Northumberland & Pacific Railway would cross the present "sper" on the said street. This will prove a great advantage to the village, as the building of the C. N. & P. road would necessitate the throwing up of a high embankment along Rear street in order to get over the old road.

The officials called upon Reeve W. W. Armstrong and wanted to know if the Council would give them assistance. Mr. Crowley asked if the corporation would grant them the same privileges as were given to the C. N. & P. Railway with reference to the crossing of streets. Mr. Armstrong replied that he thought the council would accede to the Grand Trunk the same terms as were stipulated in the by-law regarding the crossing of streets by the C. N. & P. road, provided the proper safeguards to life and property were observed.

The Prince of Wales was absent, owing to an attack of influenza, the result of a cold which he contracted while skating. The Princess of Wales and her daughters were present.

The Dowager Empress Frederick, Princess Christian and all of the ladies of the Royal family accompanied the Queen into the throne-room at three o'clock.

BANK ROBBER CAUGHT.

By Mistake the Cashier, Who Was Guarding the Bank, Was Shot.

LOS ANGELOS, Cal., Feb. 21.—Details have been received here from the attempt bank robbery at Azusa, Cal., early this morning. The bank was entered a week ago, and an attempt made to open the safe. Last night Cashier Daniels and Bookkeeper Anderson, who were sleeping in the rear room, heard the burglars enter. They jumped into the bank, Daniel with a shotgun and Anderson with a revolver. The robber jumped through a window and ran. Daniels fired at him.

At the time Daniels fired, a deputy constable, Tom Stevens, was passing the bank, and supposing that the robber had fired from the window, opened fire in that direction. His first shot struck Daniels in the left shoulder. He is in a precarious condition. Constable Crawford ran up at this time and gave chase to the robber, capturing him. His name is Ellsworth Myers.

GENTRY FOUND

Lying Unconscious on a Philadelphia Doorstep —Had Attempted Suicide.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.—James B. Gentry, the murderer of Madge Yorke, the actress, was found unconscious on a doorstep at Thirty-Third street and Columbia avenue shortly before 1 o'clock this morning. A patrolman was summoned and he was taken to the General hospital, where he soon after regained consciousness, disclosing his identity and acknowledging his guilt.

An examination by physicians revealed two incised wounds, penetrating the lungs. Gentry explained these by saying that he had attempted suicide by stabbing himself with a penknife, but the knife broke, or he would have persisted in his attempt. He had $9 on his person but said that he had had nothing to eat for two days except snow, because he was afraid to go anywhere. He had been wandering about the park since Sunday night and had fallen in the corner where he was found from sheer exhaustion.

Gentry is also suffering from a compound fracture of the skull and is also severely bruised and wounded. These injuries, he says, he received in jumping from the fire-escape in the rear of Zeiss hotel, after the commission of the crime. The physicians at the hospital say that he is in a very dangerous condition.

He freely gave his name as James B. Gentry, aged 38, of Richmond, Va. In one of his pockets was found two telegrams signed "Madge." One of these said, "Will meet you in New York; unable to come today on account of rehearsal." The other told him that she would be in Chester, Pa., on the 14th inst., and in Philadelphia on the 16th. Both were signed, "With love, Madge."

After his admission to the hospital, Gentry started to tell the physicians a rambling story and it is their opinion that he is simulating insanity.

TRUSTS CORPORATION.

Sixth Annual Meeting of the Shareholders—An Encouraging Showing for the Past Year.

The sixth annual meeting of the shareholders of the Trusts Corporation of Ontario was held at their offices, corner of King and Jordon street, Toronto, on Tuesday, the 12th February, at 12 o'clock noon.

The President the Hon. J. C. Aikins, occupied the chair and among those present were :—Hon. S. C. Wood, Edward Martin, Q.C., W. H. Cawthra, A. A. Nairn, J. H. Plummer, John Catto, Donald Mackay, J. L. Blaikie, William Gordon, Wm. Cooke, Thomas Long, Alexander Manning, John Stuart, W. D. Matthews, Hugh Ryan, J. J. Kenny, Matthew Leggatt and others.

The Manager, Mr. A. E. Plummer, having been appointed Secretary of the meeting, read the report of the directors, which showed that after providing for dividends of 6 per cent. up to and including that payable on the 1st January, 1895, the remuneration of the directors from the commencement of the company's business on January, 1894, writing off the balance of preliminary expenses, and settling the claims of the company's late solicitors, the sum of $14,738 was carried forward to the credit of the profit and loss account. The directors add :—

It will be seen from a comparison of these statements with those of former years that a most satisfactory increase has been made in the accumulation of our trusts. The additional business acquired by the corporation during the year, embracing administrations, executorships trusteeships, and similar offices, amounted to $2,141,000 in actual assets, and, after winding up a large number of estates, and distributing the funds to beneficiaries and others, the total value of trust assets remaining in the hands of the corporation amounts to over four million dollars.

In addition to this, a large number of wills, appointing the corporation executor and trustee, have been lodged in our vaults for safe custody, or reported to us for record upon our books.

These various trusts have been committed to us from all parts of Ontario, and afford the best possible evidence not only of the steady and spreading growth of our business, but also that the duties devolving upon the company in the past have been discharged in such a manner as to ensure continued confidence and support.

Your directors regret to announce the death of one of their number during the past year, viz., Mr. George W. Kiely, who had been a friend and director of the corporation since its inception. His selection of the corporation as his executor and trustee was a mark of confidence which, coming from one so well qualified to judge of its capabilities, cannot but be gratifying to the shareholders.

In accordance with the resolution passed last year, the remainder of our authorized capital has been issued and subscribed, thus increasing our capital stock to $1,000,000.

In moving the adoption of the report the President made the following remarks :—

It affords me great pleasure in presenting such a satisfactory statement of our business, which during the year almost doubled the accumulation of trusts placed with us since the company was organized. This is all the more gratifying as our chief aim and object has always been the building up of the business of administering estates, our duties as an investing company being solely confined to moneys remaining in our hands as trustees, or guardians after winding up estates or placed with us on special trusts.

During the year the following business was acquired by the corporation, I speak of course in round figures :—

38 administrations, amounting to	$860,000
30 trusteeships	250,000
3 executorships	760,000
8 guardianships	260,000
2 committeeships	5,000
2 receiverships	6,000

That the management has given every attention to prompt and speedy winding up of estates placed with us is evident, as during the past year we disposed of 23 administrations, 2 executorships, 2 guardianships, 1 committeeship, and 1 trusteeship, and I have much pleasure in saying that I have read more than one letter from solicitors in charge of estates complimenting the Manager on the prompt and courteous manner in which the administration had been conducted.

Our safe deposit department shows an increase in box rents for the year, but our storage branch was not so largely patronized during the summer. No doubt this department feels the general economy of the times, as well as other branches of business. After allowing for wages, light, etc., the safe deposit vaults yield at present about 9 per cent. upon our investment, which is a fairly good return.

The report was then adopted, and the usual resolutions passed. The election of the directors was then proceeded with Messrs. Emilius Jarvis and Frederick J. Stewart being appointed scrutineers, who reported the unanimous election of the following directors :—

Hon. J. C. Aikins, J. L. Blaikie, Sir R. J. Cartwright, Wm. Cooke, Hon. J. R. Gowan, Wm. Hendrie, J. J. Kenny, Matthew Leggatt, Thomas Long, Chas. Magee, Alexander Manning, Hon. Peter McLaren, W. D. Matthews, B. B. Osler, E. B. Osler, Hugh Ryan, John Stuart, Hon. S. C. Wood.

At a subsequent meeting of the board the Hon. J. C. Atkins was re-elected President, and Sir R. J. Cartwright and Hon. S. C. Wood re-elected Vice-Presidents.

ALONE.

Since she went home—
Longer the evening shadows linger here,
The winter days fill so much of the year,
And even summer winds are chill and drear.
Since she went home.

Since she went home—
The robin's note has touched a minor strain,
The old glad songs breathe a glad refrain,
And laughter sobs with hidden, bitter pain,
Since she went home

Since she went home—
How still the empty rooms her presence blessed;
Untouched the pillow that her dear head pressed.
My lonely heart hath nowhere for its rest,
Since she went home.

Since she went home—
The long, long days have crept away like years,
The sunlight has been dimmed with doubts and fears,
And the dark nights have rained in lonely tears,
Since she went home.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 22, 1895.

Good morning !

In several of the constituencies four-cornered contests will take place. The electors are evidently determined to do the square thing to the very last round of the fight.

If the Japs would consent to go back to first principles and fight with bows and arrows, the Chinese are inclined to think that they might stand some chance of whipping them.

Charles Booth, of England, in his "Life and Labor of the People," the most careful study of the condition of the poor ever made, says that out of 5,000 poor in a given district in London only 13 per cent. owed their poverty directly to drink ; of the remaining 87 per cent., it was caused by constant work at low wages—occasional work at high wages. Many of this 97 per cent. lost hope and took to drink in consequence.

Willie K. Vanderbilt has given to the wife from whom he is separated an income of $250,000 a year and the use of two palaces, one in New York and one in Newport. For himself he has taken a suite of rooms at the Metropolitan Club which costs him $12,000 a year, but which he doesn't use, because he has returned to Europe to hunt for pleasure there. Yet this pair, to whom money is no more than dirt to most people, are not happy.

There is no sense in denying the report that a deliberate attempt is being made to knife Sir Richard Cartwright these days by good reformers. There are too many straws to show the way the wind blows. Sir Richard is a clever old fellow but he is such a wet blanket on everything and everybody that it is small wonder he is not any too popular.

Attorney-General Sifton, of Manitoba, stated the other day that the schools of Manitoba were not Protestant but secular, no complaint ever having been made against the text books in use. This will give Mr. Laurier a chance to drop his famous "if," and the pleasing generalities connected therewith unless he is of the opinion that schools in which there is religious instruction of any kind can not be secular schools.

According to the Buffalo Express "the town of Ida Grove, Ia., has been trying the Gothenburg system of dealing with the liquor question, and as far as it has gone the experiment has been successful, so it is said. The system consists in the appointment of trustees of the municipality, who manage the business in the interest of the community." As the Gothenburg system has a good many friends and advocates in Canada who believe that it is the true solution of the liquor question, how would it do for the Legislature to pass an act allowing municipalities to introduce it whenever a majority of the people might declare for it ? It would hardly do to ram it down people's throats off-hand, and it is always better to have one or two experiments made to demonstrate how things work out before introducing radical changes. But it would not hurt to give the people local option in the Gothenburg system if it can be done without smashing the blooming constitution into little pieces.

A PROSPEROUS COMPANY.

Elsewhere will be found a report of the general annual meeting of the Wellington Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which took place in the head office of the Company, Guelph, on Feb. 12th. The report submitted bears ample evidence of the progress and stability of the company, which, notwithstanding the prevailing depression and the increased number of conflagrations, is able to report a balance in hand, after providing for everything, of $5,652.07.

During the year 2152 new policies were issued, being an increase of 448, and bringing the total up to 4905 now in force covering property to the amount of $5,283,626.25. This is an increase of $359,938.44 over last year.

THE MANUFACTURERS' LIFE.

The financial statement of the above named company for the past year is a very gratifying one. The total amount of insurance in force is $9,555,300. The net surplus is slightly over $50,000, while the cash income has increased, since 1889, over 100 per cent. The steady progress made by the Manufacturers', notwithstanding, the prevailing depression, is an evidence of careful, economic management.

The interests of the company are ably looked after here by Mr. George Horkins, agent for the Peterborough district.

HARD ON THE SPARROWS.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature of New York, which proposes to exterminate the English sparrow—a bounty of one cent is to be paid for each bird killed and five cents for each nest destroyed. A more stupid bill could hardly be invented. Assuming that it was desirable to exterminate sparrows, which is doubtful, how can it be done with five other states bordering on New York, in none of which have they any such absurd laws ? With every sparrow in the state exterminated on May first, by June first we should have almost as many as ever. The tendency of such a law will be to incite and propagate cruelty among young people. Under it thousands of little chipping sparrows would be killed and the bounty would be paid for them all the same. It is not a desirable law—it is born of ignorant zeal and reflects no credit on its originator.

THE LIME JUICE CLUB.

REGULAR WEEKLY MEETING OF THIS CHASTE SOCIETY.

Full Report of What Took Place at the Hall of Wisdom Last Night—A Joint Letter and What Became of it—A Lecture, etc.

The Hall of Wisdom was again the chief place of attraction last night, where the regular weekly session of the Lime Juice Club took place.

A JOINT LETTER.

The Secretary read the following letter :

DEAR PRESIDENT :

The undersigned most respectfully petition your honorable body to send Bro. Talkaway to this place to establish a branch lodge in the part of the town known as "Lick Skillet."

Your petitioners, of course, have some faults common with the whole human race.

Thirty-six of us have just interviewed the mayor who insists on us paying a fine of ten dollars each for indulging in a little pastime known as "poker playing." This has made many of us desirous of joining of order whose teachings tend to elevate the race, giving them nobler thoughts and higher aspirations.

We desire your opinion on the following subjects :

1. Is it right for a person to borrow money to go to a ball when he owes two months' house rent ?

2. Who is benefitted by the railway laws, the people or the railroad companies ?

3. Does a membership in the Anti-Poverty Society enable a man to loaf around saloons while his wife keeps company with the wash tub to make him a living ?

Respectfully submitted,
JOE YOOKUM,
SANDY SHAW,
ELDER DUPREE,
ROSEBUD STELL,
COLONEL TAYLOR,
GEO. WASHINGTON MORLIT,
And thirty others.

"Firstly," replied the President, "if a man who owns every store in town has the face to borrow a plug hat and dress coat to appear at an evening party, folks shouldn't be too hard on the poor man who happens to be a few weeks behind in his rent.

"Secondly, if any law or regulation can be passed in this country which the railroad companies can't dodge or twist to their own bennfit I should like to have a copy. I want to put it on ice and leave it as a curiosity for my grandchildren.

"Thirdly, such anti-poverty societies as I have thus far heard of don't extend a member any special privilege except cussing the rich.

"As to establishing a branch club at Ottawa, Talkaway Foulweather will probably be down in that section next fall and and will look into the merits of the case. The fact is, we have had mighty poor luck with those Ottawa people. Every branch established in that neighborhood has had a short life and a disastrous ending up. They seem to be a lawless, trifling lot, and we can't count on them."

SAT ON.

Cripes Mulcahey secured the floor after a violent fit of coughing and stated that he had long cherished the idea of writing the history of the Lime Juice Club. He had already mapped out his work and could promise a book of 600 pages and 500 illustrations. He wanted the approval and backing of the club. He thought the club should give him an order for at least 200 books, and it would greatly encourage him if they were paid for in advance. The price would be $10 per volume, and at the rate he was working the history would be ready inside of seven years.

The proposition was cried down from all parts of the hall, and the President arose and said :

"Bro. Mulcahey, I have a few words of fatherly advice to offer you. I have had my eye on you for some months past, and I was calculating to have a talk with you when the sign come right. The Lime Juice Club ain't hollering to be written up in a book of 600 pages. We know all about what has happened without reading it. We're not going crazy for 500 illustrations, and we're not trading off $10 bills for histories. There's a family named Mulcahey who is in want of shoes, clothes and food. That family belongs to you. You have been loafing around for the last three months, getting in debt and beating your way. Now, sir, you just drop this history business. Drop it tonight. Drop it this minute. When you get up in the morning you look for a job, and you keep on looking till you find one. If you don't do it you will hear something fall at our next meeting. The Lime Juice Club is all right. You just let it alone and tend to yourself and family."

HE IS INTRODUCED.

At this stage of the game Fortypercent Duncefort was seized with a fit of coughing which tore his coat up the back, loosened his shoe strings, rattled the window panes and disturbed the whole hall. The President observed that if he would work as hard at sawing wood he wouldn't have to move so often, and Bro. Duncefort withdrew to the ante-room in a huff and took his cough with him. The Hon. Mr. Dewdrop, a lecturer, was then brought in and introduced. He at once created a favorable impression, being built after the style of modern architecture, and having a pleasant and benevolent cast of countenance.

HE BEGINS.

"My dear friends," he began as he got settled on his feet, "I am happy to be with you this evening. As you have doubtless been informed, I shall speak to you on the subject of health. I answer that it is nature in her simplest form. Man is supposed to be created in a perfectly healthy state. He is a finished piece of mechanism. All the wheels, levers, springs and gearing are in place, and all run smoothly. Now, what stops the machine ? Man's own ignorance and carelessness. Tiedup Garley, for instance, has a baby at his house about a year old. (Bro. Garley blushes.) That bady was born in the best of health, and nature would keep him that way if she were allowed to. But she is not allowed. Mrs. Garley goes and puts clothes on it, and she feeds it sweetened milk, and doses it with paregoric, and weakens its spine by drawing it in a baby carriage, and it is tumbled into a feather bed at night to roast between two grown people. (Agitation.) That machine is out of order before it is a year old. Then the old woman she recommends sarsaparilla, and the old man he recommends burdock and all the women come in and, recommend this, that and the other and if the baby lives through it luck is with him. (Hear ! hear !)

"My friends, the average man comes mighty near being an idiot in taking care of himself. You have seen him wearing a fur cap on his head, while his shoes let in the snow and water. He wears an overcoat on his back and nothing but a thin shirt over his chest. He is mighty scared about freezing his fingers, while his throat is exposed to blizzards, and he is ailing, ailing or he thinks he is. It's herb teas, root tonics, McKee's pills, Nugent's pine tar cordial, plasters and cures until the balance-wheel in the machinery comes to a dead stop. (Applause.) Nature wants to keep going, but she can't. He drinks whiskey and that clogs the valves. He drinks beer and that clogs the wheels. He pours down lemonade, gingerale, buttermilk, ice-water, tea, coffee and what not, and then wonders why the fire under his boilers won't burn. (Shouts of applause.) If you should take an ox and put him through a like performance, he'd be dead in a year.

"The simplest and plainest laws of health are outraged every hour of the day by the average man. Did Adam smoke ? Did Eve wear corsets ? Did Solomon chew tobacco ? Did Ruth chew gum ? Did the children of Israel make for a beer saloon after crossing the Red Sea ? Did Rebecca eat gum drops and ice cream and call for soda water ? Adam was the first man and was made perfect from head to heel. How long would he have remained so after eating half a mince pie before going to bed ? Suppose he had slept in a bedroom 6x8, with the window down, the door shut, and two dogs under the bed ?) Yells of applause.) Suppose Eve had laced herself up in a corset, put on tight shoes, sat up all hours of the night, eaten her fill of trash and sizzled her hair ? When you come to look into the way man misbehaves himself you can only wonder how he ever lived to get there.

"The man who wants to live a good old age and keeps clear of the doctors has got to observe certain principles. No dead cats must be allowed to remain under the house above a week. He may love his dog, but the dog should be given the parlor bedroom if he must sleep in the house. Bones, fish-heads, hens' feathers old rags and rats should be cleaned away from the back door at least once a year. He must wash his feet now and then, even if it is a little extra trouble. Good, plain water is what his system wants, and anything else is an injury. Let the air into your sleeping rooms, even if you are behind in your rent and expect a visit from your landlord. Adam had only fruit and vegetables to eat, but so far as I can discover Frank Fauren's chicken pot-pie isn't unhealthy. (Yells of applause.) Warm biscuit and honey may not do you any particular good, but they seldom kill. Roast beef and baked potatoes may or may not cause a fluttering of the heart, but I always risk it. I reckon Java coffee acts to thicken the blood, but it can be drank in moderation. Crease LeBrun's free lunch—"

The speaker was here interrupted by tremendous applause, so hearty that 13 joints of stovepipe fell with an awful crash and such confusion resulted that the hall was not quieted for ten minutes. Then he said :

"My friends, my time is up. This has been a glorious occasion to me. Thanking you for your kind attention. I will now bid you good-night."

When he had retired Sir Richard observed that it was a very forcible and logical essay, and one which every brother would do well to heed.

A MUSICAL TREAT.

The Harmony Club now secured the floor and proceeded to render the following touching lines, which were specially written by the club's own poet :

On a corner Jamfed sat,
Come along—come along ;
He is young an fairly fat,
Sing a song—sing a song.
Oh ! you brother have a care,
For Joe Stewart draweth near.

Policeman was a sly old coon
He crept along—crept along ;
By the light of a new full moon
Ding-a-dong—ding-a-dong.
Oh ! you brother don't you know
Why policemen creepeth so ?

Now policeman stops a pace,
Hum-a-dum—rum-a-dum ;
And tears a mask from off his face,
Dum-a-rum—rum-a-dum.
But our brother in a crack,
Puts policeman on his back !

The applause which followed broke a score of lamp chimneys and loosened the two hind legs of the stove. It was only after several moments of incessant rapping that order was finally restored.

"If our poet will persist in writing such blood-curdling poetry, I will be obliged to interview him in the ante-room where he may feel something drop that will jar his constitution. This club is no hospital for the cure of the wounded policeman's feelings. The janitor will now unbar the door and we will all go home."

"KNOWLEDGE IS POWER"

What are Microbes ? Their Mission.

It is supposable, at least, that every man will some time be at the head of a house, and have the chief responsibility of surrounding his family with most favorable conditions of health, and guarding them against the encroachments of preventable disease. Modern science has developed the fact that of all the enemies of life and health the most potent are germs. Germs are invariably connected with organic death and decomposition

All forms of animal or vegetable life constantly pass through the change called death. Every living thing, from the delicate fungus which springs up in the night to the stalwart oak that braves the frost or gales of centuries, obeys the mandate. "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." Every tempest shriek is a wail of woe for the death of a forest monarch or a king of beasts. Every leaflet's rustle or booklet's ripple is a requiem sung to the death of a million blooming flowers or humming insects. Every instant countless myriads of creatures in earth, air or water fall victims to the great destroyer. The whole world that we know is one vast charnel house. The soil we tread upon is strewn with corpses. The air we breathe, the waters we drink, are teeming with the carcasses of organic beings that have finished their life work, and given place to a new generation, which will soon meet the same fate as its predecessors

The universal dominance of death is often used to point a moral lesson, appealing with telling forces to the sentiments ; but to the sanitarian it has a much more than sentimental significance. Science points out with unmistakable clearness that each death is accompanied by danger to the living, as well as misfortune to the victim. Chemistry brings to light poisonous vapors, the presence of which is generally confirmed by smell ; but the microscope reveals to us the presence of myriads of specks of life, to which the name of germs, or microbes, has been attached. Whenever decomposition takes place, these organisms are present ; whether they are a product of such decay, or its cause, is in many instances still a question, but one thing is certain, they are never absent from any process of decay. In infectious diseases there can be no doubt that they are the origin of such, but, on the other hand, it is not susceptible of proof that they cause diseases of a non-infectious character. The functions of living cells and tissues of the living may be perverted or destroyed, by other agents than micro-organisms. The fact is, the cells and tissues of the living have an organization and properties similar to those of the microbe, and when these properties are changed they often become veritable parasites themselves, secreting or excreting matter, real poison, similar in its effects to that produced by germs. Microbes are infinitesimal in size—so small that millions may range with unrestricted freedom in the smallest drop of water ; they are yet more potent for harm to human life and health than all other agencies combined. It is possible for the air to be swarming with disease germs without an offensive odor being present, but there can be no odor of putrescence without the presence of noxious germs. A foul smelling air is a dangerous air.

The oxygen gas of the air is at once the great stimulant and the great destroyer of life. In fermentation, growth, putrefaction, combustion and oxidation, which are all merely different names for the same process in different forms, oxygen is doing its universal work. It is no metaphor, but a chemical fact, that our world and everthing in it are burning with a greater or less degree of rapidity.

It is only when the process becomes very rapid that we can see the flames. So, instead of saying that we are in the midst of everlasting fire, a saying which might alarm the timid, the scientific merely say that oxidisation in its varous forms is going on without cessation. "Pure water and pure air" are the vital elements necessary for all living, breathing beings, and when these become vitiated in their purity, or limited in quantity, disease sets in, and then recourse must be had to medical agents that will assist in purifying the blood and tissues from its poisons ; and what could be more perfect, as well as useful and simple, than the administering of an oxygenated water, to be used as an auxilliary towards assisting insufficent oxygen breathed in from a vitiated atmosphere, in producing sufficient oxidation in the sick system, by which not only fermentive processes of decay are stopped and weakened cells are revitalized, strengthened so as to restore the equilibrium and keep the person well. "Oxygenator" is this "Water of life" that will do this in every instance, unless vital processes have been allowed to reach such a final state of decay that nature itself would object to a further prolongation of life because of danger to the living. Therefore, it behooves all sensible people to exercise their independence as well as God-given faculties of common sense, and grasp that which approaches nearest to a harmonious action with nature's methods, "Oxidization." Nothing published in any of these advertisements can be controverted ; they are the simple, plain truths. My own family of seven, together with servants and employees, as well as many intimate friends, have for years been kept in a state of health—yes, even were exposed to contagious diseases which had then attacked their systems, such as in diphtheria, scarlet fever, pneumonia, etc., the danger was overcome by the immediate use of "Oxygenator" without calling into use any other medicine. In these cases, "Physician, heal thyself," has been aptly demonstrated to be a veritable fact, for I do not wish to induce poor suffering humanity to use anything which I am not willing to depend upon myself. I will forfeit $500 to any charitable society if anything to the contrary of my above statements can be proven. I practice what I preach in this respect.

"OXYGENATOR" is guaranteed to be absolutely free from any and all chemical sediments or impurities, and thus its gaseous, oxidizing elements will have complete sway in purifying the entire system through nature's method of "Oxidation" by pure water and air, without any counter reactions brought forth through chemical impurities, consciously or otherwise, as so often happens with medicines of nearly all kinds. "The Blood is the Life!" Purify it, and disease cannot hold forth in your body. "OXYGENATOR" will assist in bringing about this desirable result.

"MODERN PROGRESS OF MEDICAL SCIENCE."

A STEADY PROGRESS

Has Characterized the Business of the Wellington Mutual Fire Insurance Co.

THE ANNUAL MEETING

The general annual meeting of the Wellington Mutual Fire Insurance Co. was held in the company's office, Guelph, on the 12th of February, 1895.

James Goldie was appointed chairman and Charles Davidson acting secretary.

The secretary read the directors' report with financial statment and auditors' report.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

The Directors of the Wellington Mutual Fire Insurance Co., in submitting their 55th general annual report for year ending 31st Dec., 1894, feel a pleasure in being able to state that notwithstanding the excessive number of fires that have taken place through the country during the past year, of which this company had its share—97 in all—being 19 more than in 1893, and nearly 50 per cent., more than in 1892—(showing the effect of hard times) with losses amounting to $35,023.50, which they are very glad to be able to state have all been satisfactorily settled with the exception of three small losses not then adjusted (two of which amounting to $115 and $200 have since been paid), besides paying the sum of $1,490 of 1893 year's losses.

The number of policies issued during the year was 2,152, being an increase of 448, making now a total of 4,905 in force, covering property to the amount of $5,283,626.25, which in comparison with last year................4,923,687 81
shows an increase of........ 359,938 44
which your directors consider shows the steady progress the company is still making, while it is giving its members the very lowest rate of insurance, as it has always done in the past.

The manager reports the harmony and efficiency existing among the office staff—which the Board is highly gratified with, and the general efficiency of the agents, on whom the Board relies to still further advance the interests of the company, as they did last year, by adding over a third of a million to the amount insured, which the Board highly appreciates.

The finance statement, with the auditors' report, will now be submitted, which gives a clear account of the position of the company, showing, as it does, the amount of debentures, cash, agents' balance, etc., which are all good, and which with the balance of premium notes, shows a sum of $151,539 as security, which they trust will meet with the approval of the members.

Owing to the death of Fred. W. Stone, and the resignation of J. E. McElderry, Charles Davidson is the only director who this year retires and is eligible for re lection.

AUDITORS' REPORT.

Guelph. Jan. 8, 1895.

The auditors have completed their audit of the books, accounts and vouchers of the Wellington Mutual insurance Company, for the year ending Dec. 31, 1894, and they have found everything connected therewith to be correct and in order, exhibiting the usual neatness and carefulness in the keeping of the books. The balance in the Bank of Commerce at the credit of the company on 3rd December, 1894, was $5,426.51, and the cash on hand at that date was $226.56.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
(Signed)
THOS. W. SAUNDERS,
ALEX, MACKENZIE,
Auditors.

It will be seen, as before stated, that the losses have very much increased during the yast year, and the directors cannot but remark (as they did last year) that a very large number are due to gross carelessness, and they fear even something worse, which ought to be thoroughly enquired into, but which is not the province of the companies to do, but in our opinion it is the province of the Government to appoint properly authorized persons to examine into all suspicious fires, which they believe would be a great saving to the country at large.

The chairman having made a few remarks regarding the losses, etc., moved the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Mr. J. I. Hobson, and that the same be printed and circulated as heretofore.

It was moved and seconded that Messrs. Harry Murton and George Preston be scrutineers for the election of three directors. A ballot having been taken they reported that Charles Davidson, W. H. Storey and Thomas Gowdy were duly elected.

It was moved by Mr. Randall, seconded by Mr. Wissler, that Thomas W. Saunders and Alex. Mackenzie be auditors for the year.—Carried.

It was moved by Mr. Gowdy, seconded by Mr. Murton, that a vote of thanks be given to the directors of the old Board, manager and staff of officers, as well as the agents, for their efficient services during the year.—Passed.

James Goldie, Esq., president, acknowledged the compliment.

It was moved by Mr. Sleeman, seconded by Mr. Hobson, that a vote of thanks be tendered to the scrutineers for their services, which was duly acknowledged by Mr. Preston.

How to Cure Skin Diseases.

Simply apply Swayne's Ointment. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter eczema, itch all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., saving the skin clear white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment. 84-ol

Of Interest to Artists.

Mr. D. A. Shaw has moved to his new studio, corner of Hunter and George streets, where he will be prepared to meet with pupils who may desire instruction in any branches of painting, drawing, ect. Mr. Shaw will make a specialty of teaching china and pottery painting. Having studied in Chicago and New York all the latest methods of decorating china, he is in a position to impart the latest ideas in the art. His rooms will be open to the public on and after Thursday, 21st inst., at 8 o'clock—main entrance first door south of Hunter on George; private or ladies' entrance, first door west of George on Hunter. Mr. Shaw has purchased a kiln for firing china, so that the great risk and expense of sending it to the city to be fired will be done away with. tf19

The Weather.

Probs: Westerly winds; fine and moderately cold.

Crowded Out.

A rush of important advertising matter at the last hour of going to press, crowded out "the bachelors" this week and also "Peterborough 30 years hence." This, with a press of political matter has taken the place of many of our special features this week. Next week, we do not anticipate a similar condition of things and will endeavor to make the next issue of THE SATURDAY TIMES replete with special features, including "Our Eligible Bachelors," which has taken so well with the public.

Market Reports.

PETERBOROUGH.

The market has been exceedingly quiet for the past three weeks, the result, no doubt, of the recent heavy storms. With the favorable change of weather, however, the market has steadily improved, and we may expect a large attendance to-day, both in the market building and on the square. Wednesday's market was fairly well attended. Prices range the same as last week, excepting oats, which have advanced to 33c per bushel, and are still advancing; hay $8 to $9 a ton; dressed hogs $4.75 to $5.25. Wood is more plentiful at former prices.

FARMERS' MARKET.

Feb. 22—The receipts of grain on the local street market to-day were small, being one load of barley, which sold at 48c. The receipts of hay and straw were small and the market was steady, 25 loads selling at $11 to $13 for timothy and $8 to $9 50 for clover, an 4 loads of straw at $8. The offering of dressed hogs were not large, the demand was rather slow and the market was steady at $5 25 to $5 50, the latter for single hogs.

Disaster to a French Expedition.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The Quotidien Illustre prints a report, with reservations, that Col. Monteil's expedition has been surprised and attacked by natives at Grand Bassam, on the African gold coast, and 300 of them killed. The remaining half of the force, the report says, were driven from their line of march, and their retreat is said to be cut off. The authorities have no news confirming this report.

Envy, Hatred and Malice.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Eight dogs were poisoned with strychnine in the dog show this morning. There has been more or less jealousy among the exhibitors of pet or toy dogs since the show began.

The Rugby Minstrels.

The program of the performance to be given in the opera house by the Rugby Amateur Minstrels on Monday night have been printed, and will be distributed today. The bill-of-fare is a good one, and the rendering of it will occupy three hours' time. Judging from the attractions set forth and embodied in the three parts of the program, there won't be one dragging moment, but a continuous round of mirth and laughter from the raise of the curtain to the end. It will be a carnival of fun without a doubt. The eight end men are known as fun makers. They have got a supply of jokes guaranteed to kill at microscopic range. The singing will be a feature well worth hearing. The comic songs are warranted to be fresh. There will be local hits made that will take the roof clean off the opera house and the audience is warned to bring umbrellas in case it should rain. The farces are side-splitters. The specialties will be first-class in every particular. Harry Neil's stump speech is said to be the most laughable thing out. He is going to take the field for McCarthy after the performance. There are dozens of other good things, and the fun will be fast and furious. The forty five members are a fast aggregation. They will be in Peterborough at 7.30 and in "Cork" 15 minutes later; the performance will start sharp at 8. The opera house will be jammed, and those who don't get their seats today may have to stand.

A Persian Town with Thousands of Its People Swallowed Up.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A despatch from Odessa to the Standard says the town of Koutchat, near Astrabad, Persia, has been swallowed by an earthquake and several thousand persons have perished.

This seems to be another version of the report conveyed in a Teheran despatch to the Times on Jan. 26th, of the destruction of the town of Kuchan, whereby about 2,000 persons were killed.

Our Law Makers in Session—A Patron Deputation Waits Upon Sir Oliver—It Will be a Very Busy Session—Opening Ceremonies.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—The Legislative halls of the Province were all life and bustle this forenoon. Scores of members were there shaking hands and swearing in the members.

Lieut.-Col. Chas. Clarke, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, and his able lieutenant, Mr. A. H. Sydere, assisted in the latter operation. The swearing was quite promiscuous, and Liberals, Conservatives and Patrons all took turns at it.

It was an easy matter to distinguish the new members from the old. Col. Clarke stood with a Bible resembling a half-grown volume of Webster's unabridged dictionary.

HOW THEY KISSED THE BOOK.

When an old stager who had been there before came along he viewed it on both sides, examined the edges, changed it from one hand to the other, and barely touched the near corner with his lips.

When a rising young statesman took a turn he seized the "book" with a firm grasp of his strong right arm and gave it a smack that made Sergeant-at-Arms Glackmeyer doubtful as to whether he was in the halls of state or a boiler-plate factory.

THE PATRONS ALL TOGETHER

Patron leader Haycock was on deck early with a number of his friends. He and his followers will all sit together.

"There was no friction over the seating arrangements," he said. "When we found they had separated us up we asked to be put together and our request was promptly granted. There was no trouble over it."

However, one Patron at least will be safely installed among the Liberals. Macpherson will have Rayside's old seat. The explanation of this is that he wrote for his predecessor's seat some time ago and it was allotted to him. His allegiance to the cause of agriculture, however, remains unchanged so far.

Regarding the seating arrangements evil-minded persons have been mean enough to insinuate that the Government intended to hive four or five Patrons in among the faithful so that the moral influences surrounding them might be used successfully when absolutely necessary. Of course every one who knows the Ontario Cabinet will not believe this.

PATRONS WAIT ON SIR OLIVER.

The Patron members in town have not been long in getting their heads together. After a consultation among themselves, they sent a deputation, consisting of Messrs. Haycock, Caven, McNichol, Macpherson and Gamy, to interview Sir Oliver and his Ministers. The interview took place this morning, but as to what it was all about all parties were as dumb as a Dominion politician on the Manitoba School question.

It is hinted, however, that they talked over some reforms they wanted pressed through, and also impressed incidentally on the Government that the Patron members were a party and intended to be regarded as such.

They will hold a caucus shortly to appoint a "whip" but so far have no one in view.

LIBERALS LOOK HAPPY.

The Liberal members appeared in better spirits than their opponents.

Hon. Wm. Harty, of Kingston, was the only Minister to come in and swear along with the common rank and file. He didn't look worried either over the threatened protest against his peace and welfare and also his position as member for Kingston.

While he carefully adjusted a pair of gold eyeglasses preparatory to inscribing his autograph on the roll and also on the declarations, Mr. Dana came along and made the various "X marks" as required by the statute.

"Say, Dana, can you subscribe to that declaration after reading it?" queried the Commissioner.

"That won't trouble you!" retorted Mr. Dana, "for I don't believe you've even read yours."

Mr. Harty declared he had duly affixed his name and seal, and bolted down the room to welcome the latest Patron arrival.

"SALVATION TOM."

"Here comes Salvation Tom," somebody remarked as the member from London arrived.

The oldest inhabitant in the Forest City cannot remember when the Liberals ever before sent more than a transient member to any kind of a Parliament. Therefore when Mr. Hobbs was ready to leave for Toronto the crowd escorted him to the station and started him for Toronto in a manner which made the Grand Trunk's through Pullman passengers wonder if the Industrial Fair Association of Toronto was holding an adjourned meeting up there on the railway platform.

HOW HE GOT THE NAME.

The appellation "Salvation Tom" was not applied to him here because he is a devout follower of and worker for General Booth. Although an admirer of that great leader he has never actively entered the army's ranks. But when he ran in London Sir Oliver was in a minority. Mr. Hobbs' victory changed a minority of one into a majority of one. Hence he was regarded as the party's saviour.

THE NEW SPEAKER.

Speaker-elect Balfour stood around, smiled and shook hands. He is not looking in the best of health, but his spirits seem good.

"Dominion politics are all that the people of Essex are worried about now and as usual the most of them are good Grits, and will do their duty."

Along came Bob Ferguson. He had just escaped from the clutches of "Doc" Willoughby, who had been talking 400 words a minute into him for over half an hour. Mr. Ferguson lives in and represents one of the Kents for Provincial purposes, but when the Dominion elections come round he finds himself in Bothwell, the territory of Hon. David Mills.

SAYS MILLS IS SAFE.

"Mills is all right," he said. "He'll have a bigger majority than ever this time. So far, there are three in the field—Mills, Liberal; Sharpe, Conservative, and McCoy, Patron. McCoy will probably retire, and Sharpe will wish he had, too, before Mills gets through with him."

NOT HALF OF THEM BACK.

Not half of the old members have come back. Consequently many strange faces appeared on the scene. There are a good many members well up in years in the House this time. This is especially true of the Patron representatives.

"But, on the average," said that old legislative veteran, Col. Clarke, "they are the youngest lot of men I have ever seen here."

NO TROUBLE AHEAD.

It is not likely there will be any serious fighting at the outset.

"I know of nothing out of the way," said Leader Mirter. "This opening will probably be similar to those of previous years."

While Mr. Marter may criticise parts of the Queen's speech he does not agree with [illegible] will not feel really at home until he gets a brand new copy of the public accounts.

"I want to see those accounts myself," said Dr. Ryerson, "but as they will not be ready for two or three weeks we'll have to amuse ourselves over something else."

RYERSON LOOKED CHEERFUL.

The doctor was one of the few Opposition members who looked really cheerful over the commencement of the fray.

J. W. St. John looked his best and saluted everyone he met in a way that would have made the Premier himself envious had he been around.

"Big" Tom Crawford and O. A. Howland both took the oath together.

Mr. Whitney, of Dundas, looked business like. His opponents expect him to liven up things on the "speech" by a vigorous attack. However, that will not take place until tomorrow or Monday.

ALL TAKE THE OATH.

By noon two-thirds of the members had been duly sworn in and by 2.30 practically all of them had taken the oath of office.

W. Reid, M.P.P. for West Durham will be the only absent member it is expected. His opponents are endeavoring to prove that he is a bad man, who bought drinks and paid some of his old debts just before the election. It looks, however, as if he would be on deck all right next week. The judges are so pleased at seeing a man who paid his debts that so far they have unanimously dismissed charges of corruption against him.

Donald McNish, of Elgin, who is the seconder of the "address," is a typical Scotchman, such as Sir Walter Scott has described in his novel. He is bound to be a conspicuous figure in the House.

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor formally opened the Legislature at 3 o'clock. Brave men and fair women trampled on each other's corns to get a glance of the proceedings. They were purely formal, but more or less imposing. Lots of feathers, but no fuss, was the order of the day. A detachment of Dragoons escorted the Queen's representatives to the main entrance, where a detachment of infantry received them. There was no booming of cannon as of years gone by.

Entering the chamber the Lieutenant-Governor found no Speaker in the chair. He called the attention of the House to the fact and then left the hall, while Mr. Balfour was duly installed. Returning he delivered the following

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:—

In opening this, the first session of the eight Parliament of the Province, I am glad to welcome you as the representatives of the people assembled for the dispatch of business.

While the past year was unfavorable to the agricultural in some respects, the prices of many products, especially grain and stock, remaining unusually low, it is very gratifying to know that increased interest has been taken in improved methods of farming and in the reports and publications of the Department of Agriculture. Various agricultural associations and organizations have been making increased demands for instructors. The special dairy work in connection with the Agricultural College at Guelph has been prosecuted with very satisfactory results, and I am pleased to learn that last year proved to be the most successful year in the history of the College.

From time to time public attention has been directed to our northern districts as suitable for settlement by an agricultural population. At the present time considerable interest is being manifested in this direction, and it is proposed to establish, with your approval, at a moderate expense a pioneer diary farm to attract further attention to these new districts and also to prove their adaptability to agriculture.

RAINY LAKE GOLD FIELD.

During the past year the Rainy Lake region has come into notice as a gold field. Many explorers have been attracted to it, a number of promising locations have been taken up and partially developed, and it is expected that several mills for treating ore will be in operation this year. The prospect of gold mining in this district will no doubt promote settlement of the rich agricultural lands in the Rainy River valley.

A bill will be laid before you containing some supplementary provisions which the experience of the last general election has indicated to be desirable in the election laws. The Registration of Voters' Act of last session with respect to cities having worked satisfactorily you will be asked to consider the propriety of extending its operations to towns.

Your attention will be invited to a measure designed to lessen the number of appeals in the courts of the Province and otherwise to simplify the proceedings of the High and Superior Courts; a measure to provide, in matters of Provincial jurisdiction, that where jurors are not unanimous, ten jurors may give a verdict, and some other measures of law reform.

You will further be asked to consider bills for extending the benefit of the Factory Act and the Children's Protection Act; for revising and consolidating the Acts relating to Mechanics' Institutes and Free Libraries.

WILL APPEAL TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

The Supreme Court of Canada having held that the province has no power to pass a prohibitory liquor law, my Government is taking the necessary proceedings for an appeal to her Majesty's Privy Council upon that question, and the appeal is expected to be heard and disposed of before the end of the present year.

In accordance with the promise made to the House last session, I appointed a commission to collect and report the facts bearing on the views which have been expressed with respect to the mode of remunerating and appointing certain provincial officials now paid by fees and with respect to the extent of the remuneration they should receive, including in regard to the said matters respectively the practice and experience of other countries. The commissions have pursued their task with diligence and have made full enquiry into the matters referred to them. The report is about completed and will soon be placed in your hands for consideration, with a view to such legislation as may appear to be proper.

AS TO GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

The question of the maintenance of Government House at the expense of the Province will no doubt receive your earnest attention; and I trust that the policy which may be adopted will be such as may prove to be generally satisfactory.

Since the last session the main building of the Brockville Asylum has been completed, and patients were admitted before the end of the year, relieving thereby the crowded condition of some of the other institutions.

I am pleased to be able to inform you that considerable progress has been made during the past year by the arbitrators to whom were submitted all questions relating to the unsettled accounts between the Dominion and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, and between the two Provinces, and that all the parties interested have shown their sincere desire to have the differences between them settled speedily and amicably.

The Public Accounts for the year just closed will be placed in your hands at a very early day. You will be glad to know that the total expenditures of the Province were kept well within the appropriations, and that the actual receipts were considerably in excess of the estimate.

The estimates for the current year will, without delay, be submitted for your approval. They will be found to have been prepared with a due regard to economy and the necessities of the public service.

The session will, I trust, be noted for the wisdom and prudence of your deliberations and for measures calculated to promote the best interests of the Province.

THE HYAMS DISCLOSURES

HARRY SAID TO HAVE TWO WIVES LIVING.

A Millionaire to the Rescue—The Liberal Pair for Halifax—Lennox Liberals Working Hand in Hand With the Patrons.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—At the police court yesterday Crown Attorney Curry was not ready to go on in the case of of Dallas T. and Harry P. Hyams, charged with the murder of William C. Wells. Mr. Murdoch, counsel for the defence, was ready to go on, but an adjournment was made until the 27th at the request of the crown.

The court room was crowded with curious spectators, most of whom quickly dispersed as soon as the matter was disposed of. The prisoners maintained a passive demeanor and looked well, their confinement evidently agreeing with them.

It was learned from a private source today that Chapman Hyams, the New Orleans millionaire, brother of the twin prisoners, was either in the city or would be here tomorrow. He could not be found at the hotels. This is the man whom New Orleans despatches stated claimed to be no connection whatever of the accused. This would give credence to the report that $5,000 had been sent here to the prisoners' counsel and that two private American detectives would reach Toronto by the first of March to assist in getting up the case for the defence.

Information has been received from New York which leads the Crown to believe that Harry Hyams is a bigamist, as it is alleged that he was married ten years ago in Brooklyn.

A BRILLIANT BALL.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21.—The Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen were tendered a ball by the citizens of Montreal at the Windsor hotel last night. Nearly 500 leading citizens were present and the event was a brilliant success.

LIBERALS VS. PATRONS.

NAPANEE, Feb. 21.—The annual meeting of the Lennox Reform Association was held today in the town hall and was well attended. Mr. Allison made a good address in which he advised the Liberals of Lennox to stand true and vote for the candidate, be he a Liberal or a Patron. At the close of his address, he said that owing to the action of the Patrons in nominating a candidate he considered it worse than folly for him to attempt to be elected. He said he had concluded to resign. The majority of the party were of the opinion that in view of the generosity of the Patrons in some constituencies in not offering the Liberal candidates any opposition, notably South Oxford, that the Reform party in Lennox could well afford to turn in and assist in electing the Patrons.

LIBERAL PAIR FOR HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, Feb. 21.—At the Liberal convention today James W. Carmichael and John D. McLeod were the party choice for the ensuing elections.

CONSERVATIVES ORGANIZING.

Hon. Mr. Ouimet and Hon. John Haggart are in the city looking after Conservative organization in the Montreal district. They met a number of prominent Conservatives today and talked over local organization.

VICTORIAS DEFEATED.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21.—The Crystal-Shamrock hockey team defeated the Victoria team last night by eight goals to three in the championship series.

STRIKE IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The piece work system, which caused the long strike of the United Garment Workers of America, is now responsible for a strike in the ranks of the K. of L. This morning at 8 o'clock 3,500 members of the Children's Jacket Makers' Union 155, K. of L., went on strike and it is probable that 5,000 or 6,000 affiliated with that order will go out.

SUGAR BOUNTY.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—There is said to be a strong probability that the Senate will pass the bill paying sugar growers of this country the bounty on all sugar grown up to the time the new tariff act went into effect and all that will be produced under the lyons and authorised prior to the McKinley bill, up to the time of the expiration of these lyons and July 1st next. An amendment to this effect will be offered in the senate to the Foundry Civil bill.

HANGED WITH A ROPE.

A HAMILTON HOTEL MAN TAKES HIS OWN LIFE.

His Wife's First Husband Who was Supposed to be Dead Came Upon the Scene, and the Shock Evidently Turned His Brain.

Special to the Times.

HAMILTON, Feb. 18.—Henry Geiger, a German who for many years kept a quiet hotel at King and Queen streets, was found this morning hanging by a rope from the top round of a ladder leading to the loft in his barn. He left a short note in German saying that he was tired of life, and that business and other troubles had led him to determine on suicide.

Recently Geiger lost considerable money by backing a note for a friend. Two months ago he separated from his second wife, whom he had supposed was a widow before he married her, but about a year ago the husband returned after being thought dead for many years.

Geiger was 65 years old and left a grown-up family. No inquest will be held.

MINE DISASTER.

Six Miners Killed and Others More or Less Injured.

Special to the Times.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 19.—By an explosion of mine gas at 10 a.m. at the Bear Ridge colliery of the Reading Coal and Iron Company, at Mahony Plain, six miners were killed and five wounded. Peter Greenback, T. C. Claire, Joseph Gilbs, Crescent Hill; Thomas Durkin, Girardville; Benj. Reaber, Mahoney Plain; Peter Kline and A. Meyers, Ashland, were among the victims. The first five men were probably instantly killed, and it was some time before their bodies were recovered from the workings, but Meyers was taken out alive and died while being carried to the hospital. The injured are: D. Davis, Girardville; Wm. Minnich and Wm. Goff, Ashland; John Lemay and John Davis. It is feared that the first four of those injured are fatally burned, but Davis was only slightly hurt. The origin of the explosion is not known. The explosion set fire to the timbers of what is called the "monkey," cutting off the escape of the five men killed in the mine. The six men who were taken out alive were nearest the gangway and escaped the suffocating fumes of gas and the avalanche of coal and timber which followed the explosion. A fire broke out in the gangway, but the work of rescuing the imprisoned men or recovering their bodies if dead was at once proceeded with. A line of hose was run into the gangway, and between two and three o'clock the bodies of the five men were recovered. The fire in the mine is still raging fiercely.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

Norwood Ice Races.

The postponed ice races at Norwood will come off next week on Tuesday and Wednesday. The purses embody substantial prizes and the races will doubtless be well filled.

Mr. Stratton Chairman.

The selection of Mr. W. D. Balfour for the Speakership of the Ontario Legislature will leave the chairmanship of the Printing Committee open. Mr. J. R. Stratton, M. P. P., will be appointed.

County S. S. Convention.

The Peterborough County Sabbath School Convention, will be held on Feb. 28th and March 1st at Havelock. All interested in Sabbath school work efficient Sabbath school workers have been secured to introduce the subjects. An interesting time is anticipated.

Wedding Bells.

The marriage of Miss Kate Nelson, of Otonabee, and Mr. Cephas Edwards, head master of the Keene School took place Wednesday morning in the presence of a few friends and relatives of the contracting parties. For some time the bride was a student at the Collegiate Institute, and her many friends will join with THE TIMES in extending hearty congratulations.

A Conversazione.

A conversazione was held Wednesday at St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, which was largely attended. A splendid program was rendered. Mrs. Barlee, of Lakefield, gave an excellent solo, which was adapted to her rare contralto voice, while Mrs. Seward, Mrs. Weir and Miss Long also sang in their usual excellent manner. Refreshments were served and all seemed to appreciate the spread placed before them. An enjoyable time was spent and all who were present thoroughly appreciated the efforts of the promoters of the event.

An Acknowledgment.

Mr. John Steel desires to express his sincere thanks and gratitude to the members of the Fire Brigade Band and those who so kindldy took part in the programme of the complimentary concert given to him on Friday evening last, as well as to the public generally, for their very liberal support. He wishes to tender his especial thanks to the members of the committee who had management of the concert, and acknowledges the receipts, which were most thankfully received.

Justice for Hooper.

Circulars are being distributed throughout the province asking for "justice" for John R. Hooper, the woman murderer. The circulars are addressed "To the justice loving people and the press of Canada," and bear a black headline, "An appeal for British justice," a long review of the case is given. It winds up thus: "Every word of yours can help right a wrong and soften the pathway of the aged father and mother of J. R. Hooper, now fast approaching life's weary journey, their faltering foot steps cruelly hastened by a wrong."

Funeral of the Late Wm. O'Brien.

A large cortege of sympathizers followed the remains of the late Wm. O'Brien Wednesday to the Cathedral, where the services were conducted by Rev. Archdeacon Casey, Revs. Fathers Collins and O'Brien officiating as deacon and subdeacon respectively. The music furnished for the occasion by the choir was of a special nature. The pallbearers were: Messrs. G. Henry, T. Mahoney, F. Sullivan, B. Dolan, T. Dineen, T. Henry, all schoolmates of the deceased. Rev. Father Collins performed the services at the grave. The pupils of the convent and the Murray street school in a body went to church to pay the last tribute to their departed schoolmate.

A Happy Gathering.

Mr. T. Blois, who for a number of years has been in the employ of the G.T.R. here, has been transferred to Peterborough which necessitates the removal of himself and family to that place. During their residence among the people of Port Hope they have made many friends by their agreeable and social character. It was always a pleasure to meet Mr. and Mrs. Blois. Between fifty and sixty personal friends made an unceremonious call at their residence last Tuesday night, and after order had been secured, Mr. F. Wood, Principal of our Public School, read an address and presented them with a handsome cardinal plush easy chair.—Port Hope Guide.

Albert Weighill Committed.

In the manslaughter charge arising out of the recent G.T.R. accident at Agincourt, which was heard before Magistrates Wingfield and J. C. Clark (Unionville) yesterday afternoon, Albert Weighill, station agent at Unionville, was committed for trial at the May Assizes, bail being granted, himself in $4,000 and two sureties of $2,000 each, as before. Evidence was given, all of which has already appeared in THE TIMES, by Richard Boundy, conductor of the express; Rob. J. Stripe, train despatcher, Lindsay, who swore that the block system has been in operation on the G.T.R. in reference to snowploughs for eight or ten years; Geo. Mimms, driver; Phillip McCabe, fireman, and James Topley, brakeman. Mr. Robinette is watching the case on behalf of Weighill.

The Bible Society.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in the George street Methodist church last evening. The church was well filled with an audience comprising many prominent citizens and on the platform were the resident ministers, Rev. Dr. Henderson, Toronto, the speaker of the evening, and Sheriff Hall, who presided. Rev. A. MacWilliams submitted the reports of the depository and treasurer and they were adopted. Rev. Dr. Henderson followed with an able address. He referred to the Bible as the protector of the people. It had raised the world to its high state of civilization and was necessary for the enlightment of the nations. Dr. Henderson at the conclusion of his much appreciated remarks, was extended a hearty vote of thanks.

Sons of England Concert.

A crowded house greeted the Marine Minstrels Tuesday, in the Sons of England hall and thoroughly enjoyed the program rendered. The first part took up fully 20 minutes, and the audience was kept in a continuous uproar of laughter by the endmen, Messrs. Reynolds and Butcher, while the songs were well rendered. In the farces Mr. Alf. Reynolds took the comedy parts, and showed himself to be a rising young comedian, and, in fact, he would fare favorably with some of the professionals now on the road. Mr. Hiller sang his songs in his usual good style and taste. In the specialties might be mentioned Mr. Harry LaBelle, who executed his slack-wire act in a truly professional style, as well as his part of "Edwin Booth," in the after-piece—his wardrobe and make-up deserving special mention. Messrs. Reynolds, Butcher, Hiller, Turner, Edwards, Stinson and Miller Bros. made up a good chorus in the first part. The Marine Minstrels will appear in the near future in Springville.

THE McCARTHY MEETING.

A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING IN THE OPERA HOUSE.

FOUR ABLE SPEECHES.

Mr. McCarthy's Masterly Exposition of the Manitoba School Question—He Counsels no Interference—Col. O'Brien Attacks the N. P.—A Challenge by Mayor Kendry—The Sarcastic Mr. Hunter.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy, Col. O'Brien and Messrs. Hunter and Godfrey, arrived from Toronto last evening on the 5.12 G. T. R. The distinguished politician and his colleagues were met at the station by a committee from the McCarthy League and escorted in a cab to the Grand Central hotel. Between 7 and 8 o'clock Mr. McCarthy conferred with his supporters.

The reception tendered D'Alton McCarthy in the Opera House last night in point of attendance equalled that given the cabinet ministers two weeks ago. But at that meeting there was nothing like the enthusiasm evinced as was shown last night. From the time the first speaker took the floor until Mr. McCarthy closed his technically constructed address, the closest interest was paid the speakers and the great enthusiasm manifested.

The opera house was neatly and prettily decorated, there being an absence of mottoes, but an abundance of colored effects. The audience assembled before 8 o'clock filled the seating room and those who came in after that hour were obliged to stand in the aisles. It was nearly 8.15 before Mr. McCarthy appeared on the stage, followed by Col. O'Brien and Mr. Hunter and Mr. Godfrey. These gentlemen were preceded by officers of the McCarthy League.

Mr. William Graham, of Smith, took the chair and made a brief opening address in which he referred to Mr. McCarthy as a bright star arisen to guide the people through a pending crisis. The country was groaning and a deliverer had come. Mr. McCarthy and his co-patroit, Col. O'Brien, he said, were the only two men in the country with "backbones." The chairman's forcible remarks were loudly cheered, and he then introduced Mr. Godfrey, who spent about 30 minutes in reviewing the political situation and particularly the present government's defense of its handling of the country's affairs, and the operations of the tariff. He immediately referred to the visit of the Ministers to Peterborough. Their song here, as elsewhere, was that the country was prosperous; that the cry of depression was imaginary. He thought the remedy they expounded was purely imaginative. The country was suffering from depression, from an iniquitous policy, and in the hands of a party steeped in political crime and corruption. The Ministers said nothing of these things on their visit to Peterborough. They built up an imaginative tale of prosperity. Mr. Haggart spoke of the building of the Trent Valley Canal as one of the greatest enterprises in the country. "I hope it won't turn out as did the Tay canal in his own constituency," said the speaker. "This enterprise exceeded the estimated cost by over $300,000. Mr. Haggart said nothing of this. He didn't inform the citizens of Peterborough that the Tay canal cost $2,000 yearly and the receipts last year were $137. In their tale of prosperity did any of the Ministers mention the Curran bridge scandal and its excessive costs or the Turcotte scandal.

Mr. Godfrey dealt at length with the tariff question, and explained that a policy of protection was inaugurated 16 years ago for the purpose of nourishing infant industries and manufacturies. At the same time other great results, it was expected, would ensue. But the results had proven disastrous. The population increased in less proportion. The tax on goods instead of benefiting the consumer went into the pockets of the manufacturer. For a tax amounting to $3,600,000 pocketed by cotton manufacturers there had been an increase in employees of only 4,500. Manufacturers had been protected for 16 years. Now they could stand alone and compete with the world. A continuance of the N. P. meant the enrichment of the manufacturers to an extent that admitted of a dividend of 20 per cent. while at the same time they had watered their stock exactly 100 per cent. Sugar refineries could do without protection, so could most of the manufacturers, while the citizens were ill able to afford the tax imposed by the N.P.

COL. O'BRIEN.

Col. O'Brien was received with loud cheers. He went more fully into facts and figures regarding the high protective tariff, and his remarks evoked tremendous applause. He said that during the past several months there had been generally evinced a strong feeling of dissatisfaction in political affairs. Recently, he said, the citizens of Peterborough had had the inestimable privilege of hearing the Cabinet Ministers. Any one who had paid close attention to what they said knew that their whole argument was that the country was not as bad as it might be. He thought they might have had a little more to say of a nature to allay the widespread and manifest feeling of unrest. This feeling was not confined to any particular party; in both parties it existed, and the feeling was growing strong that partyism had been carried to such an extent that the will of the electors had been stifled.

He divided the chief questions of the day under two great heads. The first were all those questions that related to tariff; the second were those that related to religion and education. In regard to the latter was the Manitoba School question, which he intended to leave entirely in the hands of Mr. McCarthy, whom no better man in Canada could be found to deal with it.

Then Col. O'Brien branched off on the National Policy, the cause of its inauguration in the Dominion, the results that were expected, the results that had been derived, and why at one time he was a protectionist and was now a free trader. He had supported the N. P. in the belief that it would stop the exodus, increase our population and at least keep it at home—bring us the advantage of increased population in increased home markets, etc. To do this, certain revenues were imposed to help manufacturers, with a view of giving them stability, and to induce capital to the Dominion. The policy was inaugurated and he didn't regret it at the outset, but as time went on it was found that what was only meant to meet the exigencies that existed at that time, was taken to be a permanent thing. Again, it was found that certain results that it was expected would be the outcome of the N.P. were not forthcoming. For a time there was competition—a healthy and prosperous competition, then there became an overflow of competition and small concerns were forced to the wall. Finally there followed a system of combination among manufacturers that frustrated the purposes of the N.P., and such a general system did it become that today there was not a single manufacturing concern not under a combination regulating the output and raising prices of manufactured products as high as the tariff would permit. "In view of this," said Col. O'Brien "is there any inconsistency, if we, who in 1878, were in favor of the N.P. now denounce it?"

He then lead off on the census and by statistics showed that the anticipated results of a tariff policy had not been fulfilled. "Now, let us look at it fairly. We should be as honest in politics as anything else. The last census tells us that during the period of the N.P. the population has increased less than during the previous ten years. Where has our home markets gone to that our farmers are taxed for at the rate of 35 per cent? The census tells us that the home markets have not increased. If that is so how has the farmer benefited? We are told by the duty on pork and beef. But this is a slight advantage only and for this he is submitted to a ten years' tax. Don't think that the farmer has not considered this. He has, and all over this Dominion the farmer has come to the conclusion that his condition is not as satisfactory as it should be. This is clearly evidenced by the attitude of the Patrons of Industry.

How many benefit by protection and how many pay for it? We will take the figures of the census to show this, and they should be correct, and they are kindly compiled for our use by the census department. Of our population 47 per cent. are engaged in agriculture, mining and fisheries. None of these are manufacturing industries. In trade and transportation there are 11 per cent. None of these are manufacturers. In domestic and personal service are 19 per cent. In the professions are 3 per cent. In the non productive class are 19 per cent. This leaves 19 per cent. of the population of the whole Dominion engaged in manufacturing. This 19 per cent. alone is benefited by the N. P., and 81 per cent. are taxed for their benefit. A certain percentage of the manufacturing trade, such as cobblers, (and glancing at the gallery) milliners, etc., are not effected by any policy. Coming down to the fine thing only about 8 per cent. is benefitted by the N.P., and 92 per cent. is taxed for it. No wonder they can build music halls, which the poor, struggling farmer who buys the Massey binder helped to pay for. No wonder the money of sugar refineries can pay for and erect hospitals." (Cheers.)

AN INTERRUPTION.

Then by an apt illustration the speaker went to show that the difference in the cost of manufactured cloth, here and in England: that is the less cost, did not benefit the consumer but went into the pockets of the manufacturer. "I will take my tweed suit of clothes," said the speaker. "I will take an item in cotton manufacture known as dyed selicia and show comparative prices of this article in the mills in England, Scotland and Canada. In the two former countries the cost is 4½ cents per yard and in Canada 6 cents per yard. The N.P. keeps that foreign product out, and you farmers should get the benefit of the 1½ cents. But the difference goes into the pocket of the manufacturer in every instance and in amount as it corresponds to the amount of duty, which, were it imported, he, the buyer, would pay to the Government. Therefore, by virtue of the combination I mentioned, I pay the tax on my tweed suit into the pocket of the manufacturer."

The speaker held in his hand a list of comparative figures, which he claimed had never been denied, and which were secured from a source that rendered them unanswerable. He made this claim before going into comparative costs.

As he concluded his point, Mayor Kendry, who was an interested member of the audience, arose and said:

"I apologize for interrupting the speaker, but I cannot remain quiet and let go unchallenged a statement that is untrue. The speaker has made statements that are not true. He does not know what he is talking about. I challenge the truth of those figures."

This interruption on the part of the Mayor created an uproar of mingled applause and cries of order. Amid the din the Mayor walked up to the front and up the steps on to the platform. Col. O'Brien turned one way and then the other and made some remark that could not be caught. For about three seconds the Mayor and the speaker faced each other. When the uproar ceased Mayor Kendry continued:

"I am prepared to put up $100 against an equal amount—to go to any charitable institution—that the Colonel has not been telling the truth. The difference (meaning the cost of production) comes out of the consumers' pocket. I want to say that we make goods as cheap here as in England. I have been in England and I say they starve their employees. The difference between the cost of manufacture in this country goes to the employees. (Cheers.)

Col. O'Brien here interposed: "I want to tell you (shaking the paper in his hand at the Mayor) that those figures and my statements based on them, stand on the very firmest foundation. They were prepared by wholesale houses in Toronto, and have never been contradicted, and if they were susceptible to contradiction they would have been before now. This is the first occasion on which any person has come forward to find fault with them."

Mayor Kendry had in the meantime taken his seat in the audience and the speaker continued: "I will stand by them. (Voice; put up the $100.) I am not prepared to put up that amount of money. I am a farmer and there are very few farmers can get that much money with wheat at 50 cents a bushel. (Cheers.) I have made out my case by those figures. Where is our home markets? (Voice: we have them here) yes, by bonusing manufacturers and paying shops to stay here. By bonusing such manufacturing industries as the gentleman who interrupted me represents. I know not who this gentleman is. (Voice: he is mayor of the town) well, I want to say, Mr. Mayor, that this little breeze don't bother me."

After referring to the mal-administration of the Conservative party, he referred again to the tariff. "If the duty is all right, why did the government seek to revise it? If they are honest in their tariff views, why change the tariff. The government is either honest or dishonest, in this respect. The ministers came before the people and said: we will revise the tariff and reduce the duties. And who prevented them? It was just such companies as is represented by the mayor of this town. (Cheers) These companies are responsible to nobody, but powerful enough to come behind the ministers. They are the power behind the throne, and in privacy with the members of the cabinet, they dictated whether duties should be reduced or increased. The country is not governed by the Government, but by the manufacturers. I hope the next election will put an end to this sort of influence. There is a consideration involved in this collusion of Ministers and manufacturers that told heavily in past elections. The spirit of partyism has gone too far, and this with the influence of the combined manufacturing conspirators is dooming the country. To put an end to this my voice and the voices of my colleagues are raised." (Prolonged applause.)

SARCASTIC MR. HUNTER.

Mr. Hunter, the son of a Methodist minister and a lawyer, was the next speaker, and for humorous, dry sarcasm, he has not had his equal on the platform in Peterborough. His remarks, in a slow, deliberate voice, created round after round of cheering. He began by saying that there were a great many doubts and very few certainties in the public mind at the present time. One certainty was that the present party government was dead. "The electorate," he said, "is patiently waiting for Bowell to read the obsequies." The ministers who recently visited Peterborough had arguments that could be embodied in 4 figures—1878. It had been 1878 with them on the public platform throughout the country. He said the Conservatives cast away their last chance when they drummed out McCarthy. It was a matter of history how Sir John Macdonald had saved his own party by rebelling against it. In a like manner had McCarthy and O'Brien hope dto do it, but the Quebec power prevailed, and they refused to be vaccinated. "This was the origin of the McCarthyites," said the speaker. He referred in a flight of eloquence to the death of Sir John Thompson and said it was a great loss to the Conservative party. The Conservatives said that McCarthy had quarrelled with the late premier, and now that he was dead the object of the McCarthyites was gone. He characterized this as a vile slander on Mr. McCarthy. His differences with the Conservative party did not consist of any objections to such men or in the utterances or policy of such men as the late premier, and the Conservatives knew it.

"And now as to the Manitoba school question and the dual language question," continued this man of sarcasm. "They have shoved their language as far down our throats as they can. Every man who sends a dollar bill through the mails has the French language shoved under his nose. We don't ask you farmers to melt your plow shares and forge swords, and wade deep in gore over this French question, but we ask you to send men to parliament who won't crawl on their vest buttons before the French majority. (Cheers.) They said that McCarthy couldn't follow Thompson because he was a Catholic, and a few Orangemen think that he will drop in behind Bowell because he is an Orangeman. But we have no confidence in Bowell."

Comparing Bowell's Cabinet with that of Sir John Macdonald's, he heaped bitter sarcasm upon it. It was like an extension table with a new leaf added every time it was spread. Anybody could get in the Cabinet. Montague had been taken in without a carpet bag, and no doubt Montague was an able man and knew the price of pork. (Cheers.) He characterized the Premier as a man who was bullied by his Ministers. He ended his brilliant remarks with a reference about the general elections, the gates to which were broad and the road very crooked.

MR. D'ALTON McCARTHY.

As Mr. McCarthy stepped forward to speak he was presented with an address by Mr. W. H. G. Armstrong, secretary of the McCarthy League. Mr. McCarthy returned thanks very briefly.

The famous politician and confidant of the late Sir John Macdonald, was greeted with prolonged cheering. His opening remarks, after a brief introduction were as follows:

"I know Peterborough has and is enjoying prosperity on account of her manufactories, denied other towns. You are fortunate in the possession of water powers, and men who are willing to put their capital into industries. And by reason of this, you people are apt to take kindly to tariff protection. But throughout the Dominion this prosperity does not exist and it is the interests and welfare of the whole country that must be looked to.

"I was surprised to hear the indignant protest of your mayor to those figures. I read the same figures in Parliament and the Commons and they have never been challenged. They were prepared for me by two wholesale merchants, who, on account of the tyranny that prevails in the customs department, are not willing to reveal their names. This is not the free country that we think it to be."

At this juncture, Mayor Kendry again arose in the audience and stated why he had challenged those figures. He was willing to make the same offer to Mr. McCarthy, who was wealthy and could put up $100 if Col. O'Brien couldn't. The question would be left to any three gentlemen to decide.

"I will accept that proposition," said Mr. McCarthy, if the mayor will accept the letters to the gentlemen who do not care to have their names revealed, and will not reveal the names—that is, if he thinks this is the way political questions should be settled. I know it is a manufacturer's way."

The mayor was willing to accept the evidence of the letters and remarked that Mr. McCarthy's $100 would come in handy for charitable purposes in Peterborough.

"And elsewhere," retorted Mr. McCarthy. "The people are all needy under the N.P."

Before touching on the Manitoba school question, Mr. McCarthy spoke of the Ministers humbugging the people in refusing to call a session with 15 parliamentary months of power before them, or to go into dissolution. They daren't face the people; they were afraid to call a session with a deficit bigger than ever and a little further on, he got in another shaft at the mayor. "I believe he is an aspirant," said the speaker, and I advise him to get his house in order.

Then Mr. McCarthy waded right into the Manitoba school question and outlined it from the time of Confederation. His remarks were regarded as specially interesting as since the decision of the Privy Council Mr. McCarthy has not spoken on a public platform. The question was an important one, and the people must pronounce upon it, for, unfortunately, the leaders of both parties were shirking it, and the people would have to take it into their own hands or the next parliament would plunge the country into trouble. It was a question that threatened confederation. It was a question that the Government would be responsible for if it interfered. It was not a question of law, as Sir Hibbert Tupper claimed, nor a question of fact as argued by Sir Wilfred Laurier. The Government could not shelve the responsibility under either these pleas, if it interfered. To tell him that it was a question of law was to insult his common sense. It was a question upon which the people would be divided at the coming elections. The governments action on Tuesday next could be regarded this way. The government by interfering would secure the solid vote of the French province, and only the divided opposition of the Protestant people because the latter were divided on other questions.

"If the government refuses to interfere the trouble is at an end. If it does it will place itself in a position to be called on to grant an order-in-council for remedial legislation. A more dangerous exercise of power cannot be evoked than of educational interference. Between secular and separate schools I prefer the former. But it is a question for the province of Manitoba to decide.

"There can be no mistake in leaving Manitoba alone. If there is an injustice let it be corrected by the people it alone concerns.

The census establishes the fact that the French system of schools is not a wise one. It costs 30 per cent. more to maintain them than public schools. The French province is last on the list in educational advancement of all the provinces and Manitoba is second.

"Let no man go from your constituency unpledged or uncertain upon this matter."

Mr. McCarthy then refuted a statement made by the new Minister of Finance at the Massey Music Hall. The latter had said that Mr. McCarthy slandered Sir John Macdonald by saying that Sir John was a Free-trader, and had adopted protection to gain strength.

"Why," said Mr. McCarthy "if I had said Sir John was a Protectionist I would come nearer slandering him. There are not a dozen men in England who are not free traders. The Tories of England are agitating to move a vote of censure on Lord Rosebery because he placed a duty of 5 per cent. on cotton from India, while we have a duty of 35 per cent. I very possibly said Sir John was a believer in free trade and adopted protection, hoping for those results that did not and have not yet ensued."

The meeting came to an end with loud cheers for the speakers, Canada, and by the singing of the National anthem.

THE CARNIVAL.

An Array of Pretty Costumes—List of Prize Winners.

The second carnival of the season was held last night in the Charlotte street rink under the auspices of the Sons of Canada. The society is to be congratulated that, contrary to Lakefield, their second venture in this direction was a glorious success, both financially and in the matter of costumes, which it is asserted eclipses all previous carnivals in town, and would compare favorably with some of those of our wealthier cities in the Dominion. In fact, on scrutinizing the motley assembly of skaters, one could not help but wonder where on earth our merrymakers managed to secure their numerous antique, grotesque, imaginative and humorous costumes, which vividly called to mind events connected with times past and present and vividly portrayed characters historical, national imaginative and absurd. Mother Hubbard was present, but although we searched critically for the proverbial dog, he was not forthcoming until the most exciting of all races—the dog race—when several appeared upon the scene in contest for the promised bone or I should say, sleigh. Little Red Riding Hood with her basket was likewise another proverbial character, and although we searched industriously for the wolf, the nearest approach we could find to his insatiable majesty was a true to life tiger who true to the avaricious instincts of the character portrayed, has gobbled up all the prizes for comic costuming during this year of our Lord 1895. The morning star shone with all the brilliancy of that glorious planet, and we noticed in the merry whirl around the rink the frequency of eclipses resulting from the Darkey Dudes crossing the plane of orbit of the aforesaid celestral character. Topsy also enjoyed her share of attention, and although Uncle Tom and Aunt Phillius are probably playing to crowded houses away down South, she had a full quota of gentlemen of color to champion her cause, and undoubtedly as equally a skilful peculator in the ferocious pirate, whose very impersonation caused us to instinctively guard our purse, which, on investigation, we discovered had been left at home. Kings and peasants, soldiers and sailors, courtiers and princesses, cowboys and itinerant peddlers were all faithfully represented, and a numerous and varied assembly of resurrected characters that deserve a lengthy description, but which space with not permit of. The Fire Brigade Band furnished the music for the occasion, in their usual excellent and satisfactory manner. The Rink was tastefully decorated with abundant bunting, and at the extreme end of the building was erected a canopied stand for the accommodation of the judges, in which capacity Dr. and Miss Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Elliott and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Ramford officiated to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The committee of management are to be congratulated upon the smoothness with which everything passed off, which will undoubtedly induce a repetition of as large a patronage on future occasions which have characterized the Sons of Canada carnivals on this occasion and in the past.

We append below a list of costumes, events and prize winners:

IS STONE STORM STAYED?

HE DID NOT SHOW UP AT THE COUNCIL MEETING LAST NIGHT.

The Other Members of the Committee on Appointments Refuse to Father the Committee's Report and the Matter Still Hangs Fire—A Stormy Session.

A special meeting of the Council, which was called by the Mayor upon the requisition of a majority of the Council, for the purpose of dealing with the report of the Committee on Appointments, was held in the Council Chamber last night.

The report of this Committee was as follows:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Appointments considered the last four clauses of our report of Feb. 4th, in Committee of the Whole Council and beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

That the following offices be declared vacant on March 1st, 1895:—Police force, Medical Health Officer, Town Solicitor, Street and Bridge Inspector and Charity and Relief officer.

But Chairman Stone was not present at the meeting last night, and after all other business had been transacted and adjournment was in order, Councillor Mills pertinently asked why the meeting had been called. The Mayor produced the requisition. Clerk Armstrong then informed the Council that he had received a telegram from Councillor Stone, from Hastings, asking him to hand the report of the Committee to a member, and he had done so. Upon motion, the report was read by the Clerk, and after a heated discussion, and several efforts to throw it out altogether, no action was taken at all, one way or the other. The question of dismissing civic officials, therefore, still stands in abeyance. The discussion that this matter provoked is given further down in this report.

There were present at the meeting, Mayor Kendry in the chair, and Councillors Sproule, Best, Denne, Mills, Phelan, Dawson, Clinkscale, Sawers, Mason, Brady and Cahill. Councillor Stone was absent in Hastings.

After the reading of the minutes the following communications were taken up:—

COMMUNICATIONS.

From J. Hampden Burnham, enclosing letter from Dr. Barnardo, in reply to letter of the Children's Aid Society, offering the use of the Barnardo Home for the shelter of children rescued by the society, the arrangement to last for a year. Referred to the Charity Committee.

From the Ratepayers' Association, inclosing a resolution passed by that association, asking the Council to pass a bylaw providing for the exemption from taxation of all machinery and plant used for manufacturing purposes. Referred to a Committee of the Whole Council.

From Merryweather & Sons, giving list of their makes of steam fire engines. Referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

From Clerk of County Council, enclosing report of the Committee to consider market bylaw. Received.

From the Elyria Stone Company, calling attention to the paving they manufacture. Referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

From D. W. Dumble as follows: Re Frank Fairen. When the complaint was laid against Fairen for not taking out license for his tables, I imposed a fine of $40 and costs, the license being $40. It was my intention to make him pay into the town treasury the same sum he would have had to pay for his license. I did not think the Council would, in case he took out his license, exact both the fee and the fine.—Received.

From B. J. McQuade, applying for position on police force. — Committee on Appointments.

LICENSE COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—We recommend that David Evans be given a refund of $5 on his butcher's license on his giving back the license.

In reference to the complaint of carters, it is the opinion of this Committee that the licensed carters should be protected against infringements on their rights by persons who do not conform to the by-law, and we recommend that the police be instructed to take proceedings against persons so infringing when complained of.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GEORGE SPROULE,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

MARKET COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Market Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. We recommend that your Committee be authorized to sell the market tolls for the year commencing April 1st, by auction, and to take such action as may be necessary to carry out and complete the sale.

2. Your Committee, recognizing that if any changes were to be made in the tolls and weighing charges, they should be made at once, considered the matter of the tolls and charges with reference to the recommendations received from the County Council. We carefully considered the matter, and, after comparing the charges with those of a number of other towns and cities, we found that the charges on the Peterborough market are, on the average, as low, if not lower, than on other markets, and are fair and reasonable, and we recommend that no change be made.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

HENRY DENNE,
Chairman.

Councillor Cahill didn't wish to oppose the report, but he wanted to set himself right with the Joint Committee of the Town and County Councils which had been appointed to discuss market tolls. He thought the tolls for the weighing of hay and straw was a little excessive. He had upheld this at the Committee, and he wanted to favor a reduction in these two particulars in Council.

The report was adopted in its entirety.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Fire, Water and Light Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. Your Committee enquired into the necessity for purchasing sleighs for the fire department, and came to the conclusion that sleighs for drawing the hose should be purchased, and, as the season was advancing, should be ordered at once. Your Committee gave instructions for the purchase of the pair of sleighs, and they will be got ready as soon as possible.

2. Your Committee also recommend that the old sleighs be sold, if they can be sold to advantage.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOMAS BRADY,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

PRINTING COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Printing Committee beg leave to report that they have considered the communication of Mr. F. Smily asking for a grant for advertising the Midland district lakes in a Tourists' guide and that they cannot recommend any grant for that purpose.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH MILLS,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

A SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

A special committee of the whole Council approved of the building of a bridge across the Otonabee river near the site of the old Ross's bridge, and recommend that the Council give the township pecuniary aid, and as well, give assistance in pressing upon the Dominion and Provincial governments the desirability of giving aid.

In reference to this Councillor Best stated that if the township could secure precuniary aid from the government, the town should extend some aid, but only on this condition. Councillor Mason wanted to know how this bridge would benefit the town. Councillor Best replied that the more highways there were, the more farmers would come into the town. Councillor Phelan and Sproule endorsed Mr. Best's views, but Councillor Sproule thought the adoption of this report committed the Council. Councillor Best made the statement that the building of the bridge would open a highway for 60 families in South Monaghan who would then do their trading in Peterborough. The report was adopted as read.

CHARITY COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Charity Committee beg leave to report as follows:

As instructed your committee advertised for tenders for wood and received several tenders. The most favorable of these was from the Peter Hamilton Co., who offered wood at the following prices: Dry cedar, $1.50 per cord; dry tamarac, $3.50; per cord; dry hardwood, $3.75 per cord; green tamarac, $3.25 per cord; wood to be taken in such quantities as wanted and these prices to hold good until the close of 1895. Your committee decided to take the wood required from the Hamilton Company at these prices, the wood to be taken in such quantities and at such times as required.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

JOHN SAWERS,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

THE COMMITTEES' REPORT.

It was given out that Mr. Stone was storm struck in Hastings. This was taken with a grain of suspicion. Councillor Mills remarked:

"The chairman has evidently funked."

The clerk read the report, and immediately Councillor Sawers moved that it be taken up clause by clause.

The Mayor thought there was only one clause. Other members objected to any action being taken in the absence of the chairman. Councillors Cahill and Brady were of these.

In amendment Councillor Sproule moved that the report be referred back to the Committee.

Councillor Mills then moved an amendment to the amendment that the report be thrown out entirely. He said it was an unmanly report. It was unjust to dismiss the officials unless some charges could be brought against them. The report aimed purely at the chief of police and the town solicitor.

Councillor Dawson took his former stand. He was willing to discuss the dismissal of officials if reasons of economy for it were put forward.

The latter's remarks were aimed at Councillor Sproule. Mr. Sproule took the floor next.

"I wish to state my stand on this matter," he said. "I want it clearly understood that I have reasons for my attitude on this question and they are reasons of economy. I distinctly deny that I am in the hands of a ring, or am actuated by spite or spleen. I advocate the dismissal of the chief and the force, because I think the department can be maintained at a saving of $1,300. I am fighting this matter on an economical principal and those who say I am not are uttering untruths."

Councillor Sawers also wished to set himself right on this question. He had moved to take up the report clause by clause, so he could show the public and the councillors just where he stood.

Mayor Kendry followed the last speaker. He wanted to make his position on the question plain. "We have just as good officers as there are anywhere. I am here to stand by our officers, just as long as they do their duty, and when they fall in it I will vote against them. If Mr. Sproule or any other man can bring charges against them, I will support him. I don't think one cent can be saved by a change." The Mayor then compared the cost of maintenace of Peterborough's police with that of other towns. He thought none of the officials were overpaid, and he would not vote for a reduction of salary.

At this juncture the Mayor and Councillor Sawers had a breeze. The latter got up and said: "I will put it to you straight, Mr. Mayor. I have heard it talked on the streets that you, among others were supported by the whiskey ring."

The Mayor replied that the people of the town knew full well that he was not the tool of any machine, and he didn't thank the Councillor for bringing street corner gossip to his ears.

After the momentary squall had subsided and the municipal waters had quieted down, Councillor Sproule took the floor to comment on the statements of the Mayor regarding the officials. His first utterances created a storm that waxed hot. The speaker said he was glad to see that the Mayor had taken a stand—a change of front. The Mayor repudiated the statement in an instant. Mr. Sproule re-iterated it and with emphasise. Before the Mayor could interpose, the speaker made some rather emphatic assertions pertaining to his honor, the Mayor. The latter requested the speaker to talk to the point and to the subject under discussion and not refer to him again or he would call him to order. Mr. Sproule maintained that he was talking to the subject, and for a few minutes a war of words ensued, which only subsided when the speaker finished his remarks and took his seat.

The first motion and the two amendments were then voted upon and each was lost.

Mr. Sawers then put through a motion to do away with the office of charity officer. This motion was carried, and after March 1st, the work formerly done by Mr. Pope at $100 per year will be done by Mr. Sawers, gratis.

Councillor Mills then read a by-law which he will introduce at the next meeting of the Council. It provides for the appointment of a board of police commissioners to consist of the Mayor, the Police Magistrate and County Judge.

A deputation consisting of Councillors Phelan, Brady, Cahill and Mills was appointed to go to Ottawa with a deputation from South Monaghan to press for pecuniary aid towards the erection of the proposed bridge.

The Council then adjourned.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

FIRST COUSINS MARRY.

AND THEIR CHILDREN ALL BECOME INSANE.

The McClure Family of Brampton—The Father Thought He Was the Messiah—They Wouldn't Eat Pork—A Strange Case.

Special to The Times.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 23.—Considerable excitement has been occasioned here by the arrest of the McClure family on a charge of lunacy as reported in yesterday's papers.

The family have always been regarded as one of the most respected in the neighborhood, and their past record was such as to lead every neighbor to esteem them highly. It consists of six persons—the mother, three sons and two daughters, and ever since their birth the children have lived at the present homestead on the 2nd concession of Chinquacousy where they have a fine 160 acre farm.

In this neighborhood there are over 500 McClures residing, and the intermarrying that has taken place between cousins is said to be responsible for the present deplorable mental condition of the boys and girls.

THE BEGINNING OF THE LUNACY.

The present troubles began about Christmas, when David J. McClure had a vision in which he learned that he was to be the Messiah of the second coming. His first vision was supplemented by further dreams, and by a peculiar arrangement of scriptural initials he was able to convince his brothers and sisters (who are intensely religious) that he was the Messiah.

His friends at first endeavored to persuade him that he was mistaken, but finally they left him to his own course. At the home daily arguments were held, in which the doctrine of David J. was insidiously instilled in the minds of the whole family, and they became obedient to his most extravagant command.

THE SIN OF EATING PORK.

The first serious manifestation of the hallucination was when in the early part of the year David J. discovered that the family had been guilty of grievous sin in eating pork, and he slaughtered all the pigs on the farm and threw the meat away.

After this another effort was made by friends to bring the young man back to his senses, but he seemed to be too far gone, and the opposition he encountered only made him more active, and he began to preach the end of the world. He followed this up by trying to get a band of disciples to follow him, but failed to secure more than the members of his own family.

THE GIRL HE WAS TO MARRY.

The young lady to whom David was engaged was importuned so greatly that she was compelled to leave home to escape the deluded lover.

Failing in this effort to get the throng to follow him David ordered his family into retreat, and for weeks none of them left the farmhouse, except to attend to the stock and do the chores. During the retreat religious services were held continuously, one of the sisters playing the organ and a brother the violin, while the rest danced and sang in a most ludicrous manne.

HOMICIDAL TENDENCIES DISPLAYED.

On Wednesday David J. was moved to kill a cow, and having so he distributed the parts to the poor of the neighborhood.

On Thursday night the malady took a different course, and David began to hunt for a devil that he declared was in the house. He found it to be in possession of his mother, and to exercise the evil spirit he choked the old woman till he thought she was dead.

The mother escaped to a neighboring farm house, and word was sent to Constable Hurst, of Brampton, who set out to apprehend the family. On arriving at the house he found the three sons and two daughters all in one bed awaiting the end of the earth. The three young men were brought to Brampton and the girls were given in charge of relatives.

THE CHARACTERS OF THE CHILDREN.

The demented youngfolk are the children of first cousins and one of the parents was the child of first cousins and this is the reason assigned for their present condition.

David J., the messiah, is 22. He has had a good High school education and is of a very sensitive temperament.

William Samuel is 20 years of age and is an elder of the Brampton Presbyterian church.

John is a boy of 19, and has been looked upon as the wild one of the family, but his ways have not been wicked in the least as such are generally regarded.

The oldest daughter, Hannah, is a fine-looking young woman, and has been prominent in Christian Endeavor circles.

The youngest daughter is a commonplace, sensible looking girl.

The mother is a hard working Christian lady of 60 years, quiet and unassuming in her ways.

IN COURT NEXT WEDNESDAY.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 23.—The McClures will appear before the Magistrates on Wednesday next. There is no improvement in their condition.

The members of the family throughout the county are arranging their affairs, caring for their stock, etc.

It is expected that the mother and daughters will regain their senses in a short time with proper care.

To Build a Dry-Dock at Midland.

MIDLAND, Ont., Feb. 23.—Midland has taken the first step towards constructing a dry dock large enough to accommodate the greatest vessels on the lakes. At a public meeting last night it was unanimously resolved to empower the Council to employ an engineer to locate a site and estimate the cost of the work, and afterwards to raise money to build or bonus the dock. The dock will be 400 feet long, 16 feet deep, and 80 feet wide. There is no dock on the Georgian Bay suitable for the largest lake vessels of the day, and Midland harbor is the only one in the same waters that permits of entrance of the deep-draughters. The terminus of the Trent Valley canal will be at Midland, and the necessity for a dry dock here is thus strengthened. Messrs. James Burton and James Playfair, both interested extensively in steamboats, spoke strongly in favor of the project. Mayor Horrell, Reeve Ruby, ex Reeve Jeffrey, and Councillor Paul also urged the construction of the dock.

A Sparkler for Pope Leo.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The Pall Mall Gazette says the Pope has received from the President of the Transvaal Republic a diamond weighing 97 carats. The stone was found by an African chief in the mines of Jagersfontein, and is the largest known. It is of a bluish white cast, and practically perfect its only blemish being a tiny spot which is invisible to the naked eye.

A ROMANCE.

A Young Canadian Charged with Obtaining Fraudulent Naturalization Papers to Marry an American Girl—Arrested for Fraud.

Special to the Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 23.—Prospects of marriage induced Albert H. Knowles, a young Canadian, who lived in Niagara Falls, Ont., to cross the border nearly four years ago and take up a residence in Tonawanda, where his sweetheart lived. In his anxiety to become a full-fledged citizen of the United States before marriage, Knowles is said to have illegally obtained his naturalization papers, and yesterday morning he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Fairchild to answer that charge. The charge made by Immigration Inspector De Barry is that Knowles got his naturalization papers after a residence in Tonawanda of not more than a year and seven months, that, in order to obtain them at that time, he swore falsely to a residence in the States of the requisite period of five years, and thus is guilty of fraud. The courtship of Knowles was full of romance, and characterized by great perseverance in face of obstacles. His union with Miss Lottie Moore, of Tonawanda, was opposed by the girl's parents, who objected to the lover because he was a Canadian. After obtaining his citizenship papers, they failed to be reconciled to the marriage, so Knowles eloped with the girl, came to Buffalo, and was married. Before he had been here 24 hours, he was arrested and taken back to Tonawanda, charged by Mrs. Moore with kidnapping her daughter. The little village was agog over the affair. Knowles was discharged, and with his bride returned to Buffalo. They remained here a short time, and then went to Warsaw, where they have lived since, and where Knowles was arrested. When the prisoner was arraigned before Commissioner Fairchild this morning he pleaded not guilty.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 23.—Wm. Walsh, an old bachelor, who has for years resided alone in old house in the southern part of the city and who is reported to be a miser, was called out of bed this morning by five masked men, who seized him, and, at the point of a pistol, attempted to make him divulge the hiding place of his money.

He refused and they set fire to his hair and beard, burning them off, and burned his body with a red hot poker. He still refused to tell and they placed his feet over a fire and roasted them. Upon still refusing, they beat him until he was insensible. They then ransacked the house and escaped.

BIG TORONTO SCANDAL.

SHOE DEALER HOWELL SUED FOR $5,000 FOR CRIM. CON.

The Charge is Brought by the Woman's Husband Who Says Only the Long Green Will Satisfy His Outraged Honor.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—During the hearing of the crim. con. case of Curreanvs. Howell in the assizes, the court room has been crowded with people anxious to hear the unsavory details. When the case was resumed this morning the defendant, Geo. Howell, was cross examined by W. R. Riddell.

Mr. Howell said he first saw Mrs. Currean in December, 1893, when he trusted her for goods. She did not pay him, called him a "hulk" when he threatened to garnishee for the bill, and said she would be even. He paid no attention to her.

TOLD A PITEOUS STORY.

On May 17 her daughter bought a pair of boots and paid $1. He sent a note to Mrs. Currean asking for the balance. She came the next day, told a piteous story and aroused his compassion. He gave her further credit and it took a long time to suit her. He denied any misconduct.

Continuing, Howell said that he went to Currean's house and was there accused of criminal intercourse. He demanded to be confronted with Mrs. Currean who came in and asked her husband not to be hard on him, as it was as much her fault as his. He never offered to settle the case for $100. He said that he did not garnishee Currean's wages, as he heard that he was on the dead beat list.

THOUGHT SHE WORE NO STOCKINGS.

Robert A. Fletcher, traveller for Harvey & Van Norman, said that he was in Howell's store on May 18th and saw him waiting upon a woman who, he thought had no stockings on. He looked and saw that she wore light colored hose. He could not positively identify Mrs. Currean as the woman.

THREATENED TO GET EVEN.

Mrs. Howell testified as to a visit by Currean to the store in July when he swore at her for thinking of garnishing his wages he threatened to get even.

John Cochrane, butcher, said that he was introduced to Mrs. Currean at Mat Evans' Hotel and they had a drink together. Some time after Currean called at his place accused him of being "mixed up with his wife," told Mrs. Cochrane that he was a bad man, threatened him and sent him a lawyer's letter.

On another occasion Cochrane said he called at Currean's house, but was put out by a vegetable man, who asked him what he was doing there. He said he went in to see if there was a sale going on.

WENT TO GET MONEY.

Albert Murphy said that he had called with a man named Moore, an ex-private from Stanley barracks, at Mrs. Currean's house. Moore said his object was to get money. Witness stayed in the hall while Moore and Mrs. Currean went into a room and shut the door. He had seen Mrs. Currean drinking in the Canadian hotel on Maud street.

Died on the Road.

OAKVILLE, Feb. 23.—While on the road from this town to Postville, to summon a veterinary, Francis Hinkston was stricken with heart failure, and was found dead about half way to his destination. Deceased was a bachelor, and was descended from the English nobility.

The Pardon Came too Late.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 23.—Baptiste Cornelius died in the county jail from consumption. Cornelius had been sentenced to two months' imprisonment for selling liquor to Indians on his reserve. His pardon arrived just before he died.

FROM THE QEEEN CITY.

A MAN LIVING A HERMIT LIFE IN THE WHIRL OF A CITY.

At the Legislative Assembly—Legislation that is Coming—Two Police Court Cases—Queen City Notes.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—Marriage with some few years of harmony, but none of discord, has been the lot of Mrs. Julia Barbara Clarke. After nearly 13 years of separation, though her husband, Expressman Robert Clarke, has during all that time lived in the city, she today filed a suit against him for alimony in the sum of $7 a week. She is the mother of eight grown-up children and married children, and, being in the evening of her life, she now seeks the aid of the law to recover the above named weekly sum from her husband, who she declares has not been too true to the marriage vows he made in London, Eng., in 1861. Mrs. Clarke says she was a widow then. Mr. Clarke was a butcher. For four years they continued to live in London. They then came to Canada and settled in Galt, where they lived for nearly 12 years, when they moved to this city, where they have since in separation resided. While living in Galt engaged in the fruit and fish business Mr. Clarke, she declares, upset the harmony of the household for the first time. For his health's sake Mr. Clarke tripped off to New Zealand, where he remained for about two years, when he returned to Galt, and subsequently moved to Toronto. For some time they kept a cigar store, and afterwards a boarding house on Bay street.

It was then, as Mrs. Clarke states, it came to pass they could no longer live in the same mansion. Thereupon Mr. Clarke removed such of the household effects as one resolved to live a secluded life might need, to the rear of No. 14 Teraulay street, where he has since, all by himself, resided. He is a pleasant man and when seen as to what defence he cared to state he had to the law suit he now has to face, declared he intended to fight the case, and had employed a lawyer. Mr. Clarke admits he has not supported his wife, and that the reasons for not so doing will be made known at the trial. He declares he did not know his wife was a widow when he married her. He states he does not know now whether her first husband is dead or alive. But Mrs. Clark does, and positively declares he is no more. His death occurred within three years after she married him. For nearly thirteen years Mr. Clark has lived alone in the rear end of Louis Sievert's cigar factory at 14 Teraulay street and is an industrious expressman. Mrs. Clarke resides with one of her three daughters who reside on Wilton ave. Four of her five sons reside in the city. The other lives in Chicago.

LEGISLATION THAT IS COMING.

There was a caucus of the Fourth Party in the Legislature this morning. Peter McCallum presided and A. T. Gurd, the rank and file, was present. It was decided to do nothing in the way of introducing legislation until the bigger divisions have been heard from.

It is settled that the gentlemen of the Government ranks will meet in caucus on Tuesday morning. Hon. G. W. Ross has prepared his defense in the case of the University resolution which Whitney will move. Mr. Ross will take the ground that action of the President has been justified in every instance. As to the dismissal of Professor Dale, Mr. Ross will say that it was impossible to retain that gentleman on the professoriate after his public denunciation of the head of the University and college.

Leader Marter spent the morning in his room at the buildings, where, with First Lieutenant Whitney, the plan of campaign will be gone over. It is almost settled that the Opposition will bring forward a motion calling for a radical change in the present method of securing colonists.

A FEW POLICE NOTES.

Edward Stevens is thought to be the man who robbed W. F. Hawley of his watch and chain on Monday evening last, and was taken into custody last night by Detective Harrison. This morning the prisoner pleaded not guilty, and was remanded until the 26th. It is said Stevens has recently been released from the Central Prison. After the court was over Mr. Hawley positively identified the prisoner as the man who robbed him.

Two young men named Thomas Leathers and Terry Sheridan pleaded guilty to stealing a quantity of scrap iron belonging to one J. Milne from the yard of the Electric Light Company. The stuff was not worth much, and as neither of the men had been up before they were both let go on suspended sentence.

Grand Trunk will Settle.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—It is understood that the Grand Trunk railway has signified its willingness to recognize and settle for the claim of Mrs. Monahan, whose husband, Mr. J. S. Monahan, was fatally injured in the collision at Weston. Mr. B. B. Osler, Q. C., and Mr. W. J. Wallace are acting for Mrs. Monahan, and in response to a legal letter from them the Grand Trunk authorities have signified their intention to settle. The amount of the claim will be fixed by an actuary, calculating on the actuarial basis of the expectancy of life of the deceased. A settlement will be arrived at without a suit. Coroner Johnson made an examination of the body of Mr. Monahan, and filed a declaration with the Attorney-General, which takes the place under the new law of a double inquest, the evidence in the inquest on Mr. Joseph doing service in both cases. There is no person legally entitled to sue in the case of Mr. Joseph, under the Railway Act, as he left neither father, mother, widow nor children to claim damages.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 25, 1895.

Good morning!

Chasing with the hounds and running with the hares is a favorite pastime for a certain astute Councillor. These "slippery" people are seldom to be trusted even by their friends. They may make successful politicians for a time, but their extra cuteness is sure, sooner or later, to bring about their downfall. We have no use for people who talk one way and vote another.

Mayor Kendry at the Council meeting on Friday night did what has probably seldom or never been done before. He voted with the Council, although its presiding officer, in order to defeat the motion to adopt the report of the Committee on Appointments. He may imagine that his course is the popular one, but we will venture to prophesy that it will come against him when he leasts expects it. People rre in earnest in their efforts for greater economy, and Mr. Kendry in defeating the proposed reduction of municipal officers, has permanently antagonized a large section of his friends.

The absence of Councillor Stone from the Council meeting on Friday night was to be deplored. The changes which it was proposed to make in the direction of economy, was negatived by the extraordinary action of the Mayor who voted and made the motion to adopt the report a tie. Had Mr. Stone, who is chairman of the Committee on Appointments, been present, he would have voted with the majority, and thus secure a cheaper and at the same time more efficient administration of affairs. However, the whole matter will come up again at the next meeting of the Council, when a merry time may be looked for. The ratepayers expect a reduction in salaries and other expenses, and they intend to succeed if it takes all year.

The black republic of San Domingo is in danger of being bombarded and wiped off the face of the earth by French cruisers. There is a bank in San Domingo which is owned by French Capitalists. About a year ago the President of the country had need of money. So he took a file of soldiers, went down to the bank, opened its vaults and took therefrom $62,000. The French Government took up the grievance of its subjects and demanded that President Heureux return the money. He replied that he could not for the excellent reason that he had spent it. That is why French cruisers are menacing the capital city of the republic. President Heureux is likely to ask himself what is the use of being the head of an independent nation if one cannot rob a bank without some big foreign power making a disturbance over it.

To show the straits to which the friends of the present ring are put to, some one—presumably Town Solicitor Edwards—has prepared a by-law which Mr. Mills proposes to introduce at the next meeting of the Council, placing the police force in the hads of commissioners. This young man is apparently fearful lest the people who pay the police constables, should have any control over them. He pretends to be actuated by motives solely for the public good, but if the truth was known his love for the force is due to another and more potent cause. Men who enter the Council are sworn to do their duty without regard to personal or other considerations, and Mr. Mills, when he undertakes to be the willing tool of an occupation office-holders, probably forgets that he is violating a solemn obligation. His by-law should, and no doubt will, be voted down.

COUNCILLOR MILLS.

Editor Morning Times.

SIR,—I was suprised at the Council meeting on Friday night to find Councillor Mills on the side of high salaries and a supernumery supply of town officials. I was one of those who voted for this Councillor, and he gave me to understand that he favored greater economy in the conduct of the affairs of the town.

Mr. Mills says he don't belong to the whiskey ring, neither do I. I would be sorry to think that those who are working hard for a reduction of expenses should be so characterized, even although some of them are in the hotel business. It is this cry of whisky ring that has defeated this movement of retrenchment and economy right along. It is the only excuse that Councillor Mills put forward Friday night for his chamelion-like change. Without one good excuse or reason to back them, the whole opposing force in the Council including the Mayor, are fighting this movement with the cry of whisky ring. It is an insult to the Councillors whose actions are actuated by pure motives of economy. Councillor Mills is young in municipal affairs or he would not have been deceived by this cry, nor taken it up himself. In this matter he has broken faith with the electors of his ward, and I speak with knowledge, when I say, they won't soon forget it.

ECONOMY.

Peterborough, Feb. 25, 1895.

THE McCARTHY MEETING.

Editor Morning Times.

DEAR SIR,—At the McCarthy meeting the other evening, the unseemly interruptions which Mr. Kendry made while Col. O'Brien was speaking, is not likely to do the Conservative party any good. Mr. Kendry may imagine that he has carte blanche to do as he likes in Peterborough but he will find that he will hardly be permitted to ride rough-shod at his own sweet will over everybody who happens to differ from him. I venture to say that a few more exhibitions such as was witnessed at the Opera House, and the Conservative party will be whipped before the election is on. The Conservative party here may well exclaim: "Save us from our friends."

Mr. F. McCracken, of Brussels, was in the village on Sunday renewing old acquaintances.

Mr. H. J. Kearney is visiting friends in Peterboro.

Prof. Scrimger, of Lakefield, is giving lessons on the violin to quite a number of our young ladies.

THE FORSAKEN FARM HOUSE.

Against the wooded hills it stands,
Ghost of a dead home, staring through
Its broken lights on wasted lands
Where old time harvests grew.

Unploughed, unsown, by scythe unshorn
The poor, forsaken farm fields lie,
Once rich and ripe with golden corn,
And pale green breadths of rye.

Of healthful herb and flower bereft,
The garden plot no housewife keeps;
Through weeds and tangles only left,
The snake, its tenant, creeps.

A lilac spray, once blossom-clad,
Sways bare before the empty rooms;
Beside a roofless porch a sad
Pathetic red rose blooms.

His [illegible] is mould and dust and drouth,
On floor and hearth the squirrel leaves,
And in the fireless chimney's mouth
His web the spider weaves.

The leaning barn about to fall
Resounds no more on husking eves;
No cattle low in yard or stall,
No thresher beats his sheaves.

So sad, so drear! It seems almost
Some haunting presence makes its sign;
That down yon shadowy lane some ghost
Might drive his spectral kine.

Common Sense Separates Chaff from Wheat

THIS SHOULD ALSO BE APPLIED BY THE SICK WHEN USING MEDICINES

Druggins the system while waiting for symptoms to develope is an abomination and causes much trouble.

Not all is Gold that Glitters
Neither are all Diseases caused by Microbes

Experience has proven that microbes are the causative factors in producing all zymotic or contagious diseases, and also give rise to many minor ailments of the system not contagious; but to claim that ALL DISEASES are caused by them is not only a fallacious idea, because the contrary can be proven, but should be a warning to the public to beware of such who advertise their crude wares to cure upon the strength of such misstatements. Only ignoramuses or humbugs will assert that such is probable. Not a single physician of any school anywhere would endorse such a ridiculous statement. Ask any medical man whether sunstroke, seasickness, delirium tremens, hernia protapsus uteri, shaking palsy, sickness from smoking or chewing, writers' cramps, corns and many others too numerous to mention here are caused from or manifestations of microbes. No doubt that germs do play a role assigned to them by the Creator AFTER SUCH DISEASES have got started need exist; but they are not the cause. The sick owe it to themselves to just quietly read "Modern Progress of Medical Science," and if not able to do so those who have charge of them should do this and it will surely enable them to see how simple it is after all to understand the human system, with its wonderful but natural functions of life and death, health and disease, when the common sense with which an all-wise Creator has endowed all is fully exercised in seeking light.

Humanitarians, philanthropists, scientists and all whose paths midst life's uncertainties, are, fortunately for the common welfare of mankind, so placed, as to glean the kernels of truth from the nutshells of mystery surrounding our existence, at once place their discoveries before their lesser fortunate brothers, without price or hope of reward, but for the sake of doing well, and for the spreading of which great truths, that grandest of all modern discoveries exists, "the printing press." No living being of the present age should be without a knowledge of physiology and hygiene, pertaining to human existence, and where not able to have access to public libraries, or to purchase costly works, should subscribe for some good newspaper known to chronicle in detail any new discoveries from time to time upon the science of life. Best of all, however, send for a treatise of "Modern Progress of Medical Science," free to all who will mail their address to me. This treatise is a brief but concise description of modern discoveries, embracing the "importance of the microbe theory to the human race: Tyndall's first great discovery; the power of dogmatism; effects of bad air: Darwin's natural selection; how man grows hard with age; mineral waters and their fallacies; oxygen and oxgenator their definitious; and many minor, but equally important and interesting subjects. "Heaps of knowledge load our shelves; men know all things but themselves."

The author of this treatise is also the well known manufacturer of "Oxygenator," the greatest natural remedy ever produced. Many years have been spent by him in not only keeping up with all the latest discoveries emanating from the leading scientists of this modern age, but also much time and money in finally bringing to perfection from crude remedies the most perfect blood purifier ever known. "Oxygenator" is an oxydizing fluid; water chemically prepared, purified and surcharged with gaseous elements of an ozonous nature, which, when used as a medicine, at once acts upon the blood in a similar manner to cleanse it of its impurities or waste products as does the oxygen from the air when inhaled through the lungs. Disease germs, as well as impaired or weakened cells or tissues, are at once oxydized and rendered harmless by the way of the blood, which takes up the "Oxygenator" where so used and carries it to the seat of disease. It revitalizes all weakened cells and tissues by rendering inert those impurities or disease germs, whichever the cause may be, instead of destroying both the disease and diseased tissues also, as happens to be the fact in using certain crude remedies.

This remedy is only to be had from the manufacturer or his duly authorized agents, in order to guard the public against impositions.

IS IT TO BE A SESSION?

THE ELECTION NOT TO TAKE PLACE FOR SOME MONTHS.

So Said Hon. W. B. Ives in Collingwood—A Young Man Whirled to Death—Toronto Mayoralty Protest—Hamilton Strikers.

Special to the Times.

COLLINGWOOD, Feb. 22.—Hon. N. Clarke Wallace and Hon. W. B. Ives addressed two meetings in the Opera House here today—one in the afternoon and the other this evening. Mr. Ives surprised the audience by announcing that a general election would not take place for some months and when it does come off the people will not need the overcoats. The addresses at both meetings were devoted to National Policy. As this is D'Alton McCarthy's riding there was considerable feeling expressed among the audience at the afternoon meeting by interrupting the speakers whenever Mr. McCarthy's name was mentioned. The Ministers will speak at Aurora tonight.

THE STUDENTS EPISODE.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—The lectures were not much better attended today in Toronto University than they were at any day during the week. This is partly due to the arrangements which are being made for the conversation tomorrow night and partly due to the determination of a number of the students to still remain away from the lectures.

A PATRON REFUSES TO STAND.

WALKERTON, Feb. 22.—Mr. Jas. Tolton, who was nominated last week as the Patron candidate for the Commons in East Bruce, has definitely declined the nomination.

THE HORSE MARKET.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 22.—Good prices have of late been paid for horses here, good rangy drivers and coachers. Walter Fanning states that a team which he bought from Asa Mott, of Thurlow, for J. W. Canniff, a dealer at Montreal, sold for $550 there, and a team which he purchased from J. W. Ross, of Thurlow, for a dealer at St. Albans, Vt., brought $1,000 there.

THE DEAD ACTRESS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The funeral services over the remains of Margaret W. Drysdale, the actress, whose stage name was Madge York, and who was murdered in Philadelphia, took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the church of the Eternal Hope on 81st street. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. E. C. Bolles, pastor of the church, and a quartette furnished the music. Many theatrical people attended the funeral.

COOLING DOWN STRIKERS.

HAMILTON, Feb. 21.—About 50 laborers were at work on section 20 of the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway today, and a couple of hundred strikers looked on and jeered the workers. A squad of constables under the head of ex-Chief McKinnon kept the strikers from doing violence. There is likely to be serious trouble if the laborers are not paid soon, as they are in debt and without funds and are getting very unruly. Lawyer Teetzel says the laborers will be paid shortly and the men will resume work, but up till this evening no money was forthcoming, and the men threaten to tear up the track unless paid very.

THE MINISTER OF RAILWAYS.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.—Hon. John Haggart, Minister of Railways, who has been here for some days conferring with local Conservatives, left for the Capital this evening.

VICE-REGAL PARTY.

HORSE SHOW.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—The date for the opening of the Canadian horse show has been changed to Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 18, 19 and 20. The show will in all probability be held in the new Armory building on University avenue.

MAYORALTY PROTEST.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Before the Master-in-Chambers this morning the new quo warranto proceedings were taken by Wm. Britnell, Somerhill avenue, against the election of Mayor Kennedy. An application for a trial was made and granted and the proceedings will be pressed at once. Mr. Britnell alleges many acts of corruption in connection with the election.

War on the Isthmus.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The Herald's special from Panama says: A war bulletin, just issued by the Government, gives news of the repulse of a detachment of invaders near Habahia. The Government forces, which were commanded by Dr. Ponson, took 250 prisoners and a large supply of arms of the latest manufacture.

PANAMA, Feb. 22.—The Star and Herald says: "The invaders from Venezuela were defeated at Santa Rosa and 250 prisoners, with all their amunition and new rifles, were captured. Five thousand Government troops are marching on Santander."

Colonial Copyright Correspondence.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Sir John Lubbock has announced his intention of asking the Government to publish the correspondence respecting the matter of colonial copyright.

To the Far East.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A despatch to the Globe says the Russian Mediterranean squadron has been ordered to the far east.

Beauty, Hatred and Malice.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Eight dogs were poisoned with strychnine in the dog show this morning. There has been more or less jealousy among the exhibitors of pet or toy dogs since the show began.

EXPENSES OF A DINING CAR.

Costly Service Maintained For the Convenience of Travelers.

A modern dining car of the most approved pattern costs $15,000 to build. Next come the kitchen utensils, the table furniture, the silverware and linen, averaging about $3,000 worth to a car. Each car must have a steward, who usually gets $100 a month, and a head cook, who values himself at $75 a month. There must also be one or two assistant cooks and three or four waiters. Three hundred dollars a month is the very smallest outlay for wages, while the cost of raw food material, breaking of dishes and the board of employees is about $3,000 per month additional. An average five days' run costs very nearly $600 for food and service, so that it would take 40 persons at every meal on the run to pay the daily expenses without allowing anything for interest on the investment or for wear and tear on the furnishings. The kitchen of a dining car contains every convenience except room. There is a range capable of doing all the boiling, broiling, baking and stewing for hundreds of people, yet occupying comparatively no space at all. There is a board for the carver, a bin and table for the baker and a sink for the dishwasher, with shelves and imperishable supplies, all in an area of 5 by 12 feet at most. Every inch of space is carefully utilized. Under the car is the cellar or refrigerator, where ice, beef, mutton, poultry, milk, butter and other perishable supplies are kept.

The steward, who is in charge of all this, must be a good guesser. To be sure, the dining car is run on the principle that no money will be made anyway; that one road must run it because a competing road does; that the traveler must therefore have the best in the market for a fair price, and that it is better to throw away unused and spoiled material at the end of a trip than to run out of some necessary on the way. Yet I imagine that the steward who has the lowest average of wasted food stands highest in his employer's regard. The first thing he has to do is to make out the bills of fare for the trip. These must be approved by the head of the commissary department. The chef buys the necessary supplies, but the steward has to turn in an inventory of them at the starting point, and also a statement of what has been used en route and what is left at the end of the run. There is no method of estimating the exact number of meals that will need to be served during the run, particularly if it be a short one. Suppose it is to be made from Washington to New York. Individual methods of economy are very different. While some prefer to pay $1.25 for the extra comfort of a seat in a parlor car, there are others who think the common coach good enough and prefer to spend their dollar in the dining car. Again, there are some who frequent both parlor and diner, and others who care for neither. For a longer journey every berth in the sleeper may be occupied, and yet the dining car may be practically tenantless, or the sleeper may be nearly empty and the diner full of people from the day coach, or it may be crowded with the occupants of both. As the steward goes through the train on a tour of inspection or in giving his first call for a meal he must note the number of lunchboxes and guess from the faces and dress of the passengers how many orders he will have. But even his best judgment will be far out of the way, for the lunchbox may be for the next day's light repast, or some of the best dressed passengers may not have decided whether to patronize the dining car or not.—Kate Field's Washington.

How a Fish Breathes.

The gills of a fish are situated at the back part of the sides of the head and consist of a number of vascular membranes, which are generally arranged in double, fringelike rows, attached to the parts by the base only. In some cases these membranes are feather shaped, in others mere folds attached to the sides of the gill cavities. The fish is a cold blooded animal—that is to say, its temperature is seldom more than a degree or two higher than the water in which it lives. This being true, the creature needs but a very small amount of oxygen to keep the blood at a temperature sufficiently high to sustain life. This oxygen is supplied to the blood of the fish by respiring large quantities of water, or rather drinking large quantities of water, and respiring the air separated from it by the gills. This explains why a fish cannot live in a tank of water which has been sifted through the gills time and time again any better than a human being or other animal can in air that has been deprived of all its oxygen by being taken into lungs and expelled without being aerated. Fish that die in the stale water of aquariums may be properly said to drown, because they perish for want of air, the same thing which occasions death by drowning in man and other lung breathing animals.—St. Louis Republic.

The Order of the Garter.

An evening journal, in a dissertation on the Order of the Garter, states that it consists of 25 ordinary knights and 25 extra knights, which is quite wrong. There is no fixed number of extra knights, who are all royal personages, and there were only six of them when the queen's reign commenced, whereas there are now 22. During the last two financial years £1,830 has been paid by the public to the dean and chapter of Windsor and to the Garter officers in respect of fees and expenses in connection with the creation of three extra knights. In all other countries such payments are made by the new knights themselves, but here the taxpayers find the money, and last year the lord chamberlain received £2,800 to provide and repair insignia of the various orders of knighthood.—London Truth.

Last Letter of Emin Pasha.

Sir William Flower has communicated to the Zoological society some posthumous tidings of Emin Pasha. This was a letter concerning some zoological specimens which never arrived in England at all, having been lost at the time of Emin's murder. The letter and the journal—principally relating to observations upon birds—which accompanied it were written in a fine and minute hand, like copper plate engraving. The letter had the additional and melancholy interest of being perhaps the last that Emin Pasha wrote. He was in constant correspondence with the president of the Zoological society about matters of zoological interest and always wrote in English, of which apparently he knew nothing until he went to Africa.—New York Times.

Grandma's Preference.

Little Johnny—Grandma says she likes cold weather, but I don't see why. She can't go chestnutting, and she can't skate, and she can't slide down hill.

Little Ethel—I guess she likes cold weather 'cause w'en she breathes on her spectacles they gets wet enough to wipe.—Good News.

TALK UNITED STATES

THE AMERICAN LANGUAGE COMPARED WITH THE ENGLISH.

A London Publication Calls Attention to the Difference In the Names Applied to Ordinary Articles—With Some Exceptions We "Speak United States."

"I am free, white, 21, and I speak United States," is the modern declaration of independence of every native adult American citizen.

The traveled American—everything by turns and nothing long—who aims at cosmopolitanism and invariably misses the target altogether, and the naturalized creature of indefinite origin, may not proclaim for "United States," but they adopt it all the same, in deference to the subtle power politicians call the vis major.

The American language used to be English, of course—English pure and simple, if English ever was either pure or simple—but it has prospered on its own account, like other things American, and now the English language is being Americanized, like the English nobility, and its vivacity is considerably benefited by the process.

That English is still the basis of "United States" the most thoroughbred American will not deny—the thoroughgoing American never denies facts, the game not being worth the candle, and he never plays games in the dark. The language is the same, with a difference, and in that lies the root of the matter and this article, for though London and New York speak a common, very common, Anglo-Saxon, if we forget for the moment the veneer of French, Latin, Greek and other languages with which it has been polished, yet the meaning of many words, from which language derives its significance, is considerably modified and altered in their passage across the Atlantic, and they become nearly if not quite as unintelligible as the cockney would find the dialect of a Northumberland village.

Thus, if a Londoner is fortunate enough to cross the Atlantic and be introduced to a sky which has not been discolored by smoke, a sun which has not been dimmed by fog and an atmosphere which the powers have not forgotten to dry and is as stimulating as champagne, but is unfortunate enough to have to buy a frock coat—a most expensive article—or to order one—as a rule, quite a different matter—he must call it "a Prince Albert."

Prince Albert coat it is in republican America, whatever it may be in monarchical England, where "Albert the Good" is occasionally remembered when the anniversary of his death comes round.

If he wants a billycock hat, he will never get it if he asks for it by that name. He must request the shopman to bring him a derby.

Should the coverings of his feet be worn out and he orders a new pair of boots, he will be given Wellingtons, which are "boots" in the American language. If he wants English boots, he must ask for "shoes," while if he likes to show pretty socks and wears Oxford shoes he must call for "ties," or "low cuts," and "slippers" if he needs pumps.

He will find, too, that he does not buy articles in a shop, but at a "store," and he will be sent to its different departments by a "floorwalker," not a shopwalker.

If he would travel in the city, and he desires to use the most derided of New York's public conveyances, which luckily for those whose time is valuable ply only up and down aristocratic Fifth avenue, he must forget that such an abomination as an omnibus ever existed and hail a "stage," while if he wishes to go by or talk about what he would at home call a tram he must be careful to say "surface car" or "street car," for trams have no existence in the American vocabulary. If, further, he would, when in Rome, do what Rome does, let him forswear the use of railway until he returns home and train himself to say "railroad," and let him never forget that he walks on the "sidewalk," not on the pavement.

Should he unfortunately happen to get ill, let him boldly declare that he "feels sick," entirely heedless of what he would be understood to mean home, or it will be taken that he is nauseated, for the words sick and ill mean just the reverse of what they signify in London, and if his doctor gives him a prescription let him not ask to be directed to a chemist, or he will be sent off to a manufacturer of chemicals, if any one knows the address of such a firm, but let him seek for a "pharmacy" or "drug store."

Instead of a draper's shop he will find a "dry goods store," and if he desires to go to one of the upper floors he will take the "elevator," though, as is so frequently the case, the reverse is the truth, for he will certainly not discover a lift, while, if his wife has requested him to buy her some hairpins, hooks and eyes, cottons or other small articles, he will find them at the "notion counter."

As, being a stranger, he will not have his own carriage, he will, if he wants a drive, "ride" in a "wagon," which is not a cart for carrying packages, but a very comfortable, light, open vehicle, or else in a "buggy," an equally light conveyance with a hood, but open at the sides. If he prefers a single horse brougham, he will do well to call it a "coupe," and if he asks for a "carriage" he will get a Victoria with a pair of horses.

In the evening he will naturally go to the theater, but he must be careful to ask for "orchestra seats" if he wants stalls, while if his tastes are not for drama proper, and he prefers a music hall entertainment, he should invite his friend to go to a "variety show."

If a play is advertised as a "farce comedy," and he imagines he will see a farcical comedy, he will be doomed to disappointment, for a farce comedy is only an alleged play in which the characters are taken by variety show "artists" who introduce their "specialties"—song and dance—in season and out of season. In other words, it is cousin german to a music hall entertainment without the diversity in the programme.

In its pronunciation United States is a law unto itself, and if the aforesaid Londoner gets "busted" or wants employment as a clerk let him not call himself a "clark," for people will open their eyes at his peculiar occupation, and let him also remember that he wears a derby hat, not a darby.

Above all, let him avoid as he would a plague the nasal twang which passes current for the American accent on the London stage unless he hankers after being mistaken for a denizen of the "wild and woolly west," or as hailing from Oshkosh or Kalamazoo, both of which places, in spite of a popular belief to the contrary, will be found on the map of the country over which the stars and stripes float and the baldheaded eagle screams.—London Saturday Review.

WHOLE FAMILY INSANE.

THREE BROTHERS AND TWO SISTERS COMMIT A MURDEROUS ATTACK ON THEIR MOTHER.

A Strange Family This—A Sensation Which is Arousing Brampton and Vicinity—Two of Them Now in Brampton Jail.

Special to The Times.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 22.—Considerable excitement was caused here by the arrest of D. J. McLure, a highly respected farmer who lives about three miles from Brampton, and his two brothers. They were brought to Brampton and lodged in jail charged with a murderous attack upon their mother.

ACTED STRANGELY.

The family has been acting strangely for some time, and only recently they killed all their hogs and threw them away, believing the end of the world was near. They also believed that food would not be required long. It is thought to be a religious craze.

The immediate cause of the arrest was the attack upon their mother, who rushed out and made her way to a neighbor's, where help was obtained.

ALL WERE IN BED.

Proceeding to the homestead the three brothers and two sisters were found in bed all naked.

Constable Hurst brought the young men to jail, and the young women will be sent to Toronto asylum.

Close intermarrying of cousins may have something to do with this lamentable state of affairs.

H. Schooley, of Brampton, says that he knows the family well and that he knew for a fact that one of the boys and one of the girls are perfectly sane. The family, he says, is one of the most respectable in the neighborhood.

INFLUENZA IN ENGLAND.

Great Men Attacked by the Epidemic, Which is of the Mild Variety.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—A mild type of influenza has spread over England. Many of the candidates for the County Council, in the election which takes place March 2, have been stricken with the malady, and are compelled to abandon their campaign and remain in bed. The public offices have become short of hands, and the service is consequently crippled. Messrs. Irving and Toole are still kept away from their theatres by influenza, and Lord Rosebery is reported to have passed a restless night, though his influenza is somewhat abated this morning. Mr. Balfour is also a victim, and has been obliged to postpone his engagements.

Progress of the Voters' Lists.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—Another large batch of voters' lists were received at the Government printing bureau today, among them being those for Victoria and Vancouver, B.C. Only about 40 other lists remain to come in now.

WAS LEFT A FORTUNE.

THE GOOD FORTUNE OF A DRUGGIST IN NAPANEE.

An Old Lady, 110 Years Old, Remembered a Kindness He Had Done and Left Him Thousands of Dollars.

Special to the Times.

NAPANEE, Feb. 23.—This town is excited over a story to the effect that J. J. Perry, druggist, has fallen heir to a large amount of money, variously estimated at from thousands to millions of dollars, according to the temperament of the individual telling the story.

If there is anything in it, it goes to prove that civility is a cheap and paying thing. To a reporter Mr. Perry told the following story:—

MET HER SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO.

Seventeen years ago he met Mrs. Orr, of the Home of Industry, Kingston, and was so civil to the old lady that she took a fancy to him. Everyone thought she was poor, Mr. Perry himself among the number. He met her several times after and was always kind to her. For the last ten years he had not seen her, and had almost forgotten all about her when the other day he received a telegram from Kingston that Mrs. Orr, who is 110 years of age, was ill and could not possibly last long, and that she wished to see him on important business before she died.

Mr. Perry went down to Kingston and interviewed the old lady, when she made a revelation to him that startled him. She said she was worth thousands of dollars, as there were none of her kin living she intended to leave it all to him with the exception of $100, which she intended leaving to one of the ladies in the home.

THE WILL DRAWN UP.

Acting on her instructions Mr. Perry secured a lawyer from Napanee and the will was in due form drawn up and the papers, purporting to be the cheques on the Bank of England, in which the money was deposited, handed over to the lawyer. The money was left to Mrs. Orr by her husband, who died a number of years ago.

On account of Mrs. Orr's extreme age some are inclined to take the story with a pinch of salt. Mr. Perry professes to be confident that he will secure the money, and a legal firm here are at present working on the case.

It may be added that Mrs. Orr is not dead yet.

Nervous Diseases

Thousands of people suffer from a variety of Nervous Diseases, such as Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Lost Manhood, etc., that the old modes of treatment fail to cure. There is a loss of nerve force or power that cannot be restored by any medical treatment, and any doctor who would try to accomplish this by any kind of drugs is pursuing a dangerous practice. Properly treated, these diseases can be

Positively Cured

Electricity, as applied by the Owen Electric Belt and Suspensory, will most assuredly do so. It is the only known power that will supply what is lacking, namely nerve force or power, impart tone and vigor to the organs and arouse to healthy action the whole nervous system. It will most assuredly cure,

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

The Weather.

Probabilities—Moderate winds, fair, stationary or a little higher temperature.

Death of Mrs. Thompson.

Mrs. Prudentia Thompson, of London street, and widow of the late William Thompson, died yesterday morning at the advanced age of 85 years. The funeral will take place this afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

The Business World.

Greff & Hymmen, dry goods, Berlin, have compromised at 66 2-3 cents on the dollar. Robert M. Ford, of Ford Bros., leather, Kingston, is dead. W. Dunbar, grocer, Leamington, has assigned to John C. Day, sheriff. James F. McGarvey, liquors, St. Mary's, has assigned to John Rennie.

Cobourg Rejoicing.

Cobourg is rejoicing over the certainty of her big industry resuming operation. At a mass meeting of ratepayers held last week it was decided to sell the foundry, which came into the town's possession through the failure of the Mowat Company, to Mr. Wm. Brown, who will enlarge, improve and operate it, affording work to a large number.

The G.T.R. Comes Down.

In this issue the Grand Trunk Railway advertises a $1 return rate to Toronto. Immediately after the Canadian Pacific issued hand bills announcing a $1 rate, Mr. J. P. Hurley had bills out reducing the $2 rate to a similar figure. The Grand Trunk will run a special from Toronto on Tuesday night to enable those who so desire to return to Peterhorough that night.

Dominion Grange Officers.

The Dominion Grange have elected the following officers: Worthy Master, Mr. Dawson Kennedy, Peterborough; Worthy Secretary Mr. R. Wilkie, Blenheim; Worthy Overseer, Mr. George E. Fisher, Freeman; Worthy Treasurer, Mr. P. Hepinstal, Fordwich; Worthy Lecturer, Mr. W. F. W. Fisher, Wellington; Worthy Chaplain, Mr. J. M. Syme, Dalton; Worthy Steward, Mr. Peter McDuffie, Omagh; Gatekeeper, Lyman Henry, Sombra; Executive Committee, Mr. Henry Glendenning, Manilla; Mr. J. Robinson, Middlemarch; J. Fallis, Newbridge; and R. J. Mowbray, Kinsale. London was fixed upon as the place of the next annual meeting.

The C.P.R. Cheap Rate.

In another column appears an advertisement of the Canadian Pacific Railway, announcing a remarkably cheap excursion to Toronto, the round trip fare being $1. The Canadian Pacific wants the public to understand that it can carry people as cheap as any other road, and in this case especial care will be taken of those who take in the excursion and every courtesy will be extended them. The C.P.R. is never behind when it comes to competition, and in this instance have fixed a rate that will enable a large number to visit the Queen City who otherwise would not have considered the matter at all. It is safe to say that hundreds will take advantage of this generous offer.

New License Commissioners.

The following have been appointed License Commissioners: East Middlesex—John Kennedy, Ilderton; Alfred Bailey, Thorndale; Jas. McDougall, Pond Mills. Frontenac—Thomas Clyde, Cataraqui; Peter McCallum, Brewer's Mills; Alexander McConnell, Yarker. West York—Geo. George W. Clendenan, Toronto Junction; Frank Smith, Edgley; John Duggan, Weston. Prince Edward—Matthew Benson, Picton; James Clapp, Picton; Robert Kelly, Cherry Valley. Monck—Charles Wheatman, Marshville; Walter Melick, Canboro; Nicholas Lockie, Dunnville. South Perth—Joseph McIntyre, Mitchell; James Nagle, St. Mary's; Benjamin Franklin Kastner, Sebringville. Dufferin—George Dodds, Primrose; Marshall Green, Orangeville; Robert Irvin, Orangeville.

Mr. Garvin at Collingwood.

The Mail and Empire gives the following report of a speech delivered by J. W. Garvin at Collingwood: "Mr. J. W. Garvin, of Peterborough, was then called upon, and he pointed out how Canada could not compete with a great country possessing the capital of the United States, which had enjoyed protection for nearly 100 years. A striking instance of the benefit of protection was given in the case of a lock factory that began business in Peterborough a few years ago, and which was met by a uniform reduction by every lock factory in the United States of 20 per cent. in the wholesale price of locks, but which, fortunately, by reason of the duty, was enabled to develop and prosper. (Applause.) Already they had evidence of the value of the pork factory in their midst, for only the other day a young farmer told him that he had received $7 more there for his load of hogs than he could get at Stayner. (Applause.) Eloquently the speaker concluded by contrasting the present condition of Canada with that of 30 years ago, when railroads or other public works were inaugurated."

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

Peterborough will be well represented in the Queen City tomorrow.

The Liberal Convention of East Durham will be held in Millbrook on March 5th.

The street cars made the rounds yesterday to break the ice in the grooves of the rails.

The young bachelors will hold a ball tonight in the Foresters' Hall on Hunter street.

The new superintendent of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Street Railway Co. is Mr. A. B. Lambe, of Toronto.

The True Blue Band have received their piccolos and will go into practice at once. Mr. Miller will be their instructor.

Rev. W. R. Young conducted services in memoriam of the late Rev. E. Dewart Lewis in the George street Methodist church last night.

Sap pails are being displayed and sold, reminding us that in a short time the maple will give forth its liquid sweetness, and the farmer will realize some ready cash from his sap harvest.

Laugh and the world laughs with you:
Yell, and the world yells, too
But you'll most always find,
If your rent is behind,
You will have all the groaning to do.

Ash Wednesday this year will come on Feb. 27; St. David's day (the national festival of the Welsh), Friday March 1; St. Patrick's day, Sunday, March 17; Good Friday, April 12; St. George's day, Tuesday, April 23; Whit Sunday, June 2; the Queen's Birthday, Friday, May 24; Dominion day, Monday, July 1; Labour day, Monday, Sept. 4; St. Andrew's day, Saturday, Nov. 30; Advent Sunday, Dec. 1, and Christmas, Dec. 25.

As to the possibility of a fall show being held in Hastings the coming season has ceased to be a question of doubt. The grounds have been secured, the track nearly completely, the company incorporated, directors chosen and officers appointed. With the opening of spring all will be completed, the grounds fenced and buildings erected. The staff means business, and everybody can count on, for the future, coming to Hastings' fall show. Hastings is centrally located, with railway facilities, and should attract a large number of exhibitors and visitors.—Star.

Master Thomas Givens, son of William Givens, had the misfortune to lose two fingers from his right hand, on Wednesday. A straw cutter was in the yard, and Mr. Givens had removed the crank to prevent its being turned, but Master Thomas put his right hand through the wheel to steady himself while he managed to turn the wheel with the other. The end of his mit and two fingers were left on the box. Straw cutter accidents are so frequent, that it is a wonder they are not a sufficient warning to have the machines chained when not in use.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Gossip of People You Know and Those You Don't Know.

Mr. Charles Maund, of Kingston, is at the Grand Central.

Mr. Wm. Lech has gone to New York on business.

Mr. W. J. Young, of Young's Point, was circulating among his many friends on Saturday.

Mr. T. G. Gillespie and wife, of Campbellford, are stopping at the Snowden House.

Mr. W. A. Buchanan, of the Review, is suffering from a severe attack of tonsilitis.

Mr. Hartley Dewart, of Toronto, County Crown Attorney for York, is at the Grand Central.

Mr. F. Burritt, of Toronto, is in town and will be one of the endmen at the Rugby Minstrels performance.

A WAR OF RATES.

The Two Railway Companies Cutting Rates to Toronto.

The Grand Trunk railway last week advertised a special rate to Toronto, in connection with the visit of the Peterborough Hockey team, to leave Peterborough at 3.30 tomorrow afternoon. The return trip fare was put at $2.

In making this special rate at this time, it appears that some agreement between the railway and the C. P. R. was violated. However this may be, on Saturday the C. P. R. advertised an excursion rate to Toronto and return for $1, the tickets good to return for six days. This low rate created a kind of mild excitement in town on Saturday afternoon, and on Saturday night when the G. T. R. reduced their rate to $1, the citizens began to realize that a war of rates was in progress. It was rumored yesterday that a still further reduction would be made by both roads, but this is hardly probable.

"CHRISTIAN WORKER" WRITES.

Editor of the Times.

DEAR SIR:—While this letter is written on Sunday, a thought has occurred to me that your paper must necessarily be published on Monday early to meet your numerous subscribers and as the vacancy of the different town offices was declared a tie by the mayor stepping down from his exalted pedestal to show his authority which is perhaps unprecedented, by any past occupant. Kindly permit me to submit a few quotations from that "Book of Books."

Judas instituted the Sacramental Supper Matt. XXVI., 25 29.
Mark XIV., 23 25.
Luke XXII., 19 and 20.

Chairman Stone as your valuable paper states was "Storm Stayed," while the chief might have given the "Widows' two mites." The citizens are under the impression that Judas filled with remorse Matt. XXVII., 3-10 may read the good true and beautiful book as the Bobcaygeon Independent might put it and refer to the death of Ananias and Sapphira; Acts I-II.

As Mr. Stone is one of our prominent church workers he will hereby take notice.

"THE RACE MEET."

Editor of the Times.

SIR,—Much adverse criticism, as the Examiner of Feb. 22nd inst. puts it, over the hand of an anonymous correspondent, calling himself "Fair Play" was exhibited by the onlookers at the ice track races held on Thursday last, when "Lulu B.," owned by Robert Hewitt, Esq., was put back from second to third place for running.

The ordinary anonymous correspondent to a newspaper invariably strikes wide of the mark, and as a consequence very little attention is paid to it by the subscriber. Robert Hewitt, Esq., may be a gentleman, he may think he knows something about horse racing, but he is not too old I hope to learn rule 30, sec. 1, as laid down.

"When any horse or horses break from their gait in trotting or pacing, their riders or drivers shall at once pull them to the gait in which they were to go the race and any party failing to comply with this requirement, if he comes out ahead, shall lose the heat; and whether such breaking horse comes out ahead or not, all other horses shall be placed ahead of him in that heat, and the judges shall have discretionary power to distance the offending horse or horses."

"Fair Play" in his letter says it is rumored that Mr. Jos. Daly, one of the judges, left the stand on account of the decision. Now Mr. Editor, as a matter of fact, Mr. Jos. Daly remained on the stand until the heat was finished and is authority for the statement that "Lulu B" broke ten times in the mile and was a party to putting "Lulu B" back to third place.

Dr. Robinson was waiting for Mr. Jos. Daly to drive him to the station, who can also corroborate the foregoing statement. The abuse to the judges, rained with monumental gall by Bob Hewitt, was entirely uncalled for, as his record on the track not only on this but other seasions has given him an unenviable reputation as a first class kicker.

This season at Trenton he was put back for running. At the same place in the 4th and 5th heats of that celebrated race he was put back for foul driving.

Many horsemen are of the opinion that "Lulu B" was educated by his owner to "break." Where you get a breaking horse and a "kicking" owner as was evinced in Port Hope last summer when Mr. Robert Hewitt "fixed" a race whereby he was to get 1st money, and after the field beating him he "kicked" clearly shows without taking up too much of your space that the decision of the judges was a righteous one.

One word in conclusion, Mr. Editor. While I would scorn to make light of the infirmities by birth it was not very becoming of the party who represented the judges' decision on "Lulu B" at the carnival held on Friday evening, and it is to be hoped that his youthful indiscretions may cease. Thanking you for your valuable space I remain,

Yours respectfully,
ANDREW MCNEIL.

A Metal Breadboard
THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread-board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

DEAD BEAT M'CONKEY ROBBED THE HAND THAT FED HIM.

Never Paid any Board, Robbed His Landlady and Then Set Fire to the House to Cover Traces of His Crimes—The Tactics of a Pembroke Youth—Reads Like Fiction.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—On Saturday afternoon a gay young tailor named Thomas McConkey, formerly a resident of the town of Pembroke, was arrested by Detective Duncan on the charge of setting fire to the premises of Mr. William Graham, of 320 Wilton avenue, on Friday night last, between the hours of seven and nine o'clock. The story which has been brought to light by the investigation of Detective Duncan is of a most remarkable character, and this morning McConkey will also be charged with having, on the 5th of December last, set fire to 86 John street, and on New Year's eve to 77 John street.

HE WAS A DEAD BEAT.

Whether or not these charges will be brought home to McConkey remains to be seen, but, in the meantime, it is satisfactorily clear that he belongs to that obnoxious class known as boarding-house deadbeats. In November last he became a lodger at 86 John street, a boarding-house kept by Mrs. Emma Tarling, with Mrs. Emma Head as housekeeper. He did no work, had no visible means of support, did not appear to be looking for any situation, and, naturally enough, drifted behind in his board bill. His landlady gradually became more anxious about the matter, but McConkey held the even tenor of his way and paid her nothing. He talked fluently of expected remittances from Pembroke, but the letter that he longed for never came. One day Mrs. Head lost $20 which she had hidden away in a purse, but although it was a mysterious robbery, she did not suspect McConkey of being concerned in the matter.

THE FIRST FIRE.

Curiously enough, however, he immediately paid her $13 on account of his board bill, and this money, with $4 in bills which she had at the time, was put away in a drawer in her bedroom on the top flat. She went downstairs to attend to her household duties, leaving the star-boarder in his room. Later on, supper being ready, he came down, too. Soon after, a strong smell of something burning pervaded the house, and to the great astonishment and alarm of the people who were there at the time, it was discovered that the upper portion of the premises was in flames. The alarm was given, the fire brigade appeared, and the fire was subdued, but not before considerable damage had been sustained. Remarkable to relate, where the flames seem to have been the hottest was in the very bureau where McConkey had seen Mrs. Head's money placed. It was utterly demolished, but still her suspicions slept, and, though it puzzled her to know what caused the fire, she never dreamed that her boarder had anything to do with it. She thought her $17 had been burned.

HE WANTED IT ALL.

Some silver coins which had been placed with the bills were found by the firemen scattered over the floor. They were given to Mrs. Head, who placed them, with some jewelry, in a little yellow earthen dish not usually used as a jewel box. But that very night some hidden hand stole the money and left the jewelry. These incidents occurred at a time when Mr. Graham and his wife were negotiating for the taking over of the house from Mrs. Head, and it was really Mr. Graham who lost by the fire. There was not a cent of insurance.

SECURED ANOTHER VICTIM.

The day after the fire McConkey flitted, and went to No. 77 John street, a house kept by a Mrs. John Milson. Here he repeated his old dodge. He soon owed several weeks' board, he was always expecting cash from Pembroke, and he never got any. On the evening of December 31st, while he was down stairs, his room was found to be blazing. Again the firemen were summoned, and again great damage ensued. When it was all over McConkey claimed that he had lost $13 in bills and a fifty-cent piece, as well as $80 worth of clothing. He then endeavoured to induce Mrs. Milson to put in a heavy claim against the insurance company. He wanted her to say that the burned clothing was hers, and he thought that if she would give him $30 in cash and forgive him his board bill they would be even. She refused to listen to this scheme. When the firemen had left the house another lodger, named Pickering, suspecting McConkey, proposed that a search be made for the fifty-cent piece. This was done, but not the faintest trace of any coin could be seen.

When McConkey's scheme to defraud the insurance people was rejected, he grew wrathy, and told the lady that he would go to the company and "expose" her by accusing her of fraud. This threat he actually carried out, but it was of no avail.

THE WORST OF ALL.

The negotiations between Mr. Graham and Mrs. Head were not completed, and the former remained living at 320 Wilton avenue. He is a barber, whose place of business was at 13 Adelaide street east, and is now at 20 Queen street east. One Saturday night, eight weeks ago, McConkey appeared at Mr. Graham's house, and managed to get an invitation to stay over night. When the thin edge of the wedge had thus been inserted, he became a lodger, and was treated with great kindness by the family. He never paid a cent, but spoke of his Pembroke friends and postal orders. On Thursday night he went to the little shop of Mr. Sullivan on Wilton avenue and bought a sheet of paper and an envelope. On Friday night he told Mrs. Graham that he had a pass for Moore's musee and that he was going down there. He left the house, and a little later the door opened and shut again, and the bell was rung. Going down, Mrs. Graham found a letter on paper similar to that bought by the prisoner, addressed to herself, marked "Immediately."

A DECOY LETTER.

Opening it, she was surprised to read she was wanted at a friend's house at 10 Park road, and that she was asked particularly to bring her daughters with her. While she was pondering over this, McConkey returned, offering as an excuse that he had forgotten his pass. Mrs. Graham hastily dressed herself, and, taking her two daughters with her, left for Park road. She hid the key on a pin near the door, so that McConkey, if he returned first, could find it there and enter the house. He went with them as far as Church street, where he turned south to call upon Miss Esther Sullivan, of 87 Church, whom, he said, he intended to take to the Musee.

IT WAS ALL A HOAX.

Mrs. Graham hastened to her destination, but only to find that she was the victim of some mysterious hoax. She was not wanted there particularly, and the note was bogus. In considerable agitation she hurried home. Rushing to her door she found the key had been stolen. For nearly a quarter of an hour she tried to get in, and eventually she got through a neighbour's house into her own back yard. To her astonishment the back door, which she had left locked, was now unlocked, and when she entered the dining room was in flames, and the house filled with smoke. The neighbors rushed in, and managed to get the better of the fire, though not a moment too soon. Some one had taken a coal oil can which was kept under the kitchen sink and had poured its contents over the carpet in the dining room. A fire shovel had been used to place a heap of live coals on the oil saturated carpet, and the letter, which Mrs. Graham had left on the table, had been placed in the stove. Its charred remains were still there. Mrs. Graham's agitation was extreme. When her husband returned his mind was made up at once. He barred the house, and kept an eye on McConkey. Next morning he reported the matter to the detectives, a warrant was issued, and in the afternoon Detective Duncan made the arrest.

HE CURLS HIS HAIR.

McConkey is a most peculiar individual. He regularly curles his hair with tongs and uses complexion preparations on his face. He has a brother in the employ of the Stark Company, on Church street.

The prisoner has a mania for presenting purses to friends. He sold one to Mrs. Graham, gave one to her daughter May, one to Mrs. Head, one to Miss Bella Head, and one to Miss Esther Sutton. On Thursday last he removed his clothing from Graham's and no trace of it can be found. He has an uncle in the city. He will be arranged before the Police Magistrate this morning.

AGED 14, A MURDERESS.

A YOUNG NURSE GIRL CHARGED WITH MURDER BY POISON.

Lulu Lacey, a 14-Year-Old Girl of St. Catharines Arrested for the Murder of Her Employer's Child—The Prisoner Remanded.

Special to the Times.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Feb. 25.—Lulu Lacey, a young girl about 14 years of age, is in jail here on the charge of "murder by poison." She was brought in by Constable Clark late on Friday night.

The girl lived with the family of Mr. T. Pierson, of South Grimsby, and she was employed to do light housework and to mind the baby, a child of 18 months. It is charged that Lulu killed the baby.

On Friday Mr. Pierson went to the barn to do the milking, leaving Lulu with the baby.

When she returned she found the child suffering greatly, and very soon it died, with all the symptoms of poison. Suspicion rested upon the hired girl, and she was placed under arrest.

There was in the house a bottle of medicine containing strychnine in sufficient quantity to kill a child. This bottle the baby got, the girl says, and drank the contents. The parents did not believe this and caused the hired girl's arrest.

THE PRISONER REMANDED.

She was taken before Magistrate Forbes and remanded for a week pending a rigid examination into all the circumstances.

A post mortem examination of the body of the dead child will be made. The prisoner maintains a wonderful degree of coolness and unconcern and stoutly denies the charge.

KIDNAPPED THE "FRESHIES."

Seniors Bound Them and Drove Them to a House 15 Miles in the Country.

Special to the Times.

CHAMPAGNE, Ill., Feb. 25.—J. E. Reinhart, Frank T. Wyman, Walter Bann and Young Shammel, the university freshmen who were kidnapped and spirited away on Saturday by a number of the Greek letter fraternity men, have all either been rescued or voluntarily brought back to their friends.

The manner in which they were seized, blindfolded, tied hand and foot, thrown into a carriage, driven 15 miles out in the country, and held captive in an old farm house for several hours, made a highly interesting story.

The freshman social, which the kidnapping was designed to have stopped, was, however, a success.

THREE DAYS FIGHTING.

With African Natives—A Lieutenant and Two Bluejackets Killed.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The report of the fighting between the British naval force and the natives of Brass, Guiana, on the west coast of Africa, just received by the Admiralty, says:—"After three days' fighting, the engagement ended in the capture of the native town by assault. Lieut. Taylor and two seamen were killed, and several others wounded. Many of the war canoes of the natives were sunk."

The Destructive Japs.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 25.—The British war ship Alacrity has arrived here from Wei Hai Wei and reports that the Japanese have destroyed all the land forts at that place, with the exception of those on the island of Liu Kung Tao.

The Khedive will Make no Changes.

CAIRO, Feb. 25.—The Khedive received Lord Cromer, the British Minister Plenipotentiary, in audience today and assured him that he did not intend to make any changes in the Egyptian Ministry.

Caught in the Cog Wheels.

GUELPH, Feb. 25.—Bert Petrie, aged 18, an apprentice at Goldie's mills, had his clothing caught in a cogwheel Saturday. His arm was badly mangled and his side injured.

To Cheat the Street Railway Co.

MONTREAL, Feb. 25.—The Montreal Street Railway has discovered a conspiracy for defrauding it. The conductors were provided with a trough of nickel or German silver which is put into the slot at the top of the box and the five cent pieces slide out into the operator's hand.

Frederick Douglas Buried.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—A great throng viewed the remains of Frederick Douglas in the Metropolitan A.M.E. church, which was beautifully decorated with flowers. The funeral took place this afternoon.

The Cornwall Canal.

CORNWALL, Feb. 25.—The water will be let out of the Cornwall canal about the 16th of March, as a great deal of work has to be done before navigation opens. Among other improvements Pitt street wharf is to be rebuilt and enlarged. The paper mill, roller mills, and Hodge's mill will be closed down while the water is out

ANNA GOULD'S WEDDING.

THE BRIDE TO WEAR A DIAMOND CORONET OF FABULOUS COST.

Arrangements Made for the Ceremony—Miss Gould's Wedding Frock Will be of White Satin Trimmed with Lace and Lilies of the Valley—The Bridesmaids' Dresses.

Special to the Times

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Invitations were sent out yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. George Gould for the marriage of Miss Anna Gould to Count De Castellane. The ceremony will take place on Monday, March 4, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gould, No. 871 Fifth avenue. It will probably be performed by Archbishop Corrigan. There will be present at the service only the relatives and very intimate friends of the couple. A small reception and breakfast will follow. Miss Gould will wear a gown of white satin, with trimmings of rarest point lace. Her bridesmaids will be Misses Kittie Cameron, Helen Gould, Addie Montgomery and Beatrice Richardson.

A CORONET OF FABULOUS COST.

Miss Gould will be crowned with a tiara of brilliants more splendid than that owned by any of the New York society women, who have affected coronets with their evening costumes within the last few seasons. It is to fasten her veil of old lace, which is a gift from the Marquise de Castellane, who will arrive in New York today, bearing with her many handsome and costly presents from the Count's family.

A friend of the Gould family told a reporter yesterday that the tiara has been ordered specially for Miss Anna by Mr. George Gould, and that Tiffany is the maker. It is to cost a fabulous sum, and will be of gold, and set with emeralds, pearls, diamonds and rubies. The gems are set in platinum, the base of the crown only being of gold. It will be one of the gifts from the Gould family, and possibly the most costly which the young couple will receive.

MISS GOULD'S TROUSSEAU.

Miss Gould's trousseau, which is being completed at a fashionable modiste's in this city, contains many exquisite and costly costumes, cloaks and dainty lingerie, but the larger part of the bridal outfit will be purchased in Paris. The wedding frock is of white satin, trimmed simply with lace and bunches of lilies of the valley which flowers will also form the bouquets. The bridesmaids will wear white cloth gowns with large black "picture" hats. They will carry bouquets, and will wear ruby monogram pins, souvenirs from the bride. The little Gould children will be pages, in costumes of velvet and satin.

MUSIC A FEATURE OF THE CEREMONY.

Contrary to expectations, there will be only one wedding ceremony, that by Archbishop Corrigan, immediately preceding the wedding breakfast. The music will be one of the features of the wedding. The young couple will sail for Europe on the Wednesday following the ceremony, spending the intervening days probably at Lake Wood.

TO INVADE FORMOSA.

ANOTHER JAPANESE ARMY ORGANIZED TO CAPTURE THE PLACE.

Li Hung Chang's Powers—Eleven Foreigners Captured at Wei-Hai-Wei—Dynamiter Howie a Prisoner—The Celestials Retreating.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The Central News correspondent in Tokio says: The naval reports from Wei Hai Wei mention 11 foreigners who were captured with the island ports last surrendered by the Chinese. Ten of them swore to take no further part in the present war and were set free. George Howie, the American who came to the east with a scheme to blow up Japanese vessels with submarine infernal machines, has been detained aboard the Japanese flagship pending the decision of his fate. The Japanese made a reservation as to Howie in the articles of capitulation. They are inclined to treat him severely, as he was let go on parole after his arrest aboard the steamer Sydney, yet he lost no time in breaking his word and placing his services at the disposal of the Chinese. The Japanese marines who were killed in the early torpedo fight at Wei Hai Wei were buried with military honors.

ADMIRAL TING.

The Japanese speak highly of Admiral Ting and the orders which he wrote just before his suicide to direct the course of his officers in completing the arrangements for the surrender.

The Central News correspondent in Hai Cheng telegraphs, under date of Feb. 21, that Lieut. Ken-Katsuma then reported that the Chinese force which formerly held Kyanwatsai had retreated to New Chang. The Chinese forces at Lukungtan and Sataistu were about 5,000 strong and had 12 guns. At Kungpointas the Chinese had some 4,000 men. The garrisons of New Chang and Ying Kow seemed to have been decreased.

The Central News correspondent in Pekin says: High officials here express the hope that Li Hung Chang's appointment to be peace envoy will be acceptable to Japan. He will have full power to close the negotiations without referring matters to Pekin. The time and place for the negotiations have not been determined.

TO FORMOSA.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The Times correspondent in Kobe says the Japs are mobilising another force in Heroshima, probably for an expedition to Formosa.

WILL HERBERT RETURN?

He Leaves for England and May Not Come Back to Canada.

Special to The Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—General Herbert left this afternoon on a two-months' leave of absence for England.

It is the general impression that he will not return. During his absence the veteran Adjutant-General, Col. Powell, will be acting Major-General.

Married in Court.

NIAGARA FALLS, Feb. 22.—The case of criminal assault preferred by widow Claflin, of Lewiston, against her cousin, Wilber Sheldon, came up before Judge Robinson last evening, and was suddenly terminated. Sheldon, who was very nervous, got up before the first witness left the stand and startled the villagers by saying: "Clear the court an' I'll marry her." The judge had the room cleared, and married the pretty widow and Michigan bachelor.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 26, 1895.

Good morning!

The "Mills" of the gods grind slowly, but they get there just the same even though the whisky ring may have had to suffer.

Crows are being seen here and there about the country, and the fact is being hailed as the sign of an early spring. We prefer the preliminary robin ourselves and hereby offer a standing reward of one snowball to the person who first discovers one and is willing to swear to it.

Councillor Sproule is a hard hitter. The Mayor may be able to lead such men as Messrs Cahill, Dawson and Mason, but the cannot "handle" Mr. Sproule, who has the courage not only to vote, but to express his convictions. We like a manly, straightforward Councillor, and in this regard the people are fortunate in having such representatives as Messrs. Sproule, Denne, Best, Sawers, Phalen, Clinkscale and Stone.

The Maharajah of Mysore, who has just died of diphtheria at 30, was the most progressive of the Indian native princes. Under his rule Mysore was fully abreast of British India in the administration of justice, the protection of property, and in public works, while in in some things, like the education of women and the development of the natural resources of the country it was far ahead of it. The Maharajah was the first Hindoo Prince to establish a school for girls in India.

The Toronto World is out with a proposal to abolish the Division Courts and protect merchants from dead beats by means of black lists. Why black lists? Do away with the Division Courts and you will very soon do away with your Dead beats are the result not the cause of the credit system. If the merchants found it impossible to collect small debts, through the abolition of the machines for collecting them, they would very soon cease granting small credits. That would suppress the dead beats and everyboby would be money ahead.

It is now probable that there will be a three-cornered fight in West Peterborough at the forthcoming Dominion elections. It is said that Mr. John I. Davidson will be the McCarthyite candidate. The Conservatives will undoubtedly be again led by Mr. Stevenson, the present member, while the Reform standard-bearer will probably be either Mr. Richard Hall or Mr. Peter Hamilton. It is said that Mayor Kendry is seeking nomination, but so long as Mr. Stevenson is in the way he has no show. Our idea is that Mr. Stevenson should get that senatorship and the nomination be tendered Mr. R. M. Dennistoun. Mr. Dennistoun is very popular, is by all odds the ablest man in the party here, and would assuredly be elected.

Mr. Mills stated the other evening that in voting to keep up the present large staff of civic officials, he was on the popular side. He was promptly told that he would find out his mistake when he appealed to the ratepayers for re-election is said that he characterised those who in favor of a reduction of our municipal expenses, as the whisky ring. This may or may not be so; if it is true that Mr. Mills made use of such language, he should be ashamed of himself. It is as false as it is cowardly. This journal has always been in favor of a reduction in the number of our town officials, and has always urged a rigid enforcement of the liquor laws. To say that we belong to the whisky or any other ring, is a contemptible falsehood. We are sure we also speak for hundreds of other ratepayers who are of the opinion that we require a complete re-arrangement of our town officials and their salaries.

NO SESSION.

The Government may not be ready to announce the decision it has reached on the question of an election or a session, but [illegible] who runs may read. The activity regarding the preparation of the lists and the fact that nothing is being done in the direction of arranging for another session, affords the best proof going that the Government means to hold an election at the earliest moment. This has been the wish of Sir Mackenzie Bowell and the other Ontario ministers from the start, but some of the others were in favor of a session, perhaps because there is more money in sessions than in elections.

The election will undoubtedly be held on the new lists. If this were not intended there would be no occasion for the extraordinary haste that is now being shown to get them out of the printers' hands. All other work in the Government Printing Bureau has been stopped while the lists are being set up, and some of the work is even being bone by outside printers. This is making haste with a vengeance. There would be no occasion for all this hurry if it were not the intention to hold the elections as soon as possible. Every nerve is evidently being strained to that end.

The politicians had better be getting to arms all along the line. In some constituencies the nominations have already been made, but in numerous others there is no sign of an awakening In Peterborough both Grits and Tories are fighting shy in the matter of bringing out candidates. Beyond a little street gossip nothing has apparently been done. The issues of the campaign are not being discussed at all, curiosity being confined to a modest speculation or two as to who the likely candidate will be. It is high time to call meetings and get things in shape.

THE TOWN OFFICIALS.

Editor Morning Times.

SIR,--I was very much disappointed to observe the action of Mayor Kendry at the Council meeting on Friday evening last in voting against the adoption of the report of the Committee on Appointments. He is evidently not in favor of economy. He may imagine that he is serving the people, but I will venture to say that if the ratepayers had an opportunity they would shew him he is on the opposite track. All honor to such men as Messrs. Sproule, Denne, Sawers, Best Phelan and Clinkscale, who were not afraid to vote like men, notwithstanding the enormous pressure that was brought to bear to have them change their course.

In No. 2 Ward the people who voted for Mr. Mills expected something better of him. They now know how they have been deceived. Never popular he was carried in by hanging to the skirts of Messrs. Phelan and Denne. He may disclaim having anything to do with the "whisky ring," as he calls those who demand a reduction of municipal expenses, but he was glad enough to get the votes of these same "whisky" men last January. If it is the whisky element that favors a reorganization of the town officials with a view to a better and more economical service, then I for one am proud to be counted one of the number.

I hope Mr. Stone will at once get the committee together again, and be on hand to see that his report is adopted by the Council. The people are overwhelmingly in favor of a reduction in our municipal expenses, and the set back which the friends of reform received at the Council meeting the other night through the action of the Mayor, cannot seem the tide which has now set in.

RATEPAYER.

ANOTHER REPUTATION RUINED.

A hush falls on the crowded rink,
 The skaters all stand still,
Each feels pulsating through his veins
 A momentary thrill.
And how, with interest and pride,
 The small boy's heart dilates.
For now at last he's going to see
 His honored pa on skates.

He's often heard the old man tell
 Of what he used to do
When he was young—the "figure eight,"
 And the "spread eagle," too.
The "grape-vine" and the "outside edge,"
 The "Virginia rail fence."
And he knows what he's going to see
 Is going to be immense.

His pa strikes bravely out at last,
 His heart quite free from fears,
Although he hasn't put on skates
 Before for thirty years.
He strikes so bravely out, in fact,
 He cuts too wide a dash—
One foot goes right—one foot goes left—
 And down he goes—ker-smash!

He doesn't really break the ice—
 It is ten inches thick—
But just the thought of skating now,
 Makes him extremely sick.
He limps ashore—alas, alone!
 The small boy didn't wait.
He'll sneer when pa tells stories now
 Of how he used to skate.

SEEING LONG DISTANCES.

How Far Away Has the Human Eye Detected Another Object on Earth?

The recent claim of the United States signal service to have transmitted heliograph signals over a distance of 183 miles, and of the United States coast survey and geodetic survey to have beaten that many years since between Mount Helena and Mount Shasta, over 190 miles, has started mountain climbers to make all sorts of guesses and assertions about the distances they ought to see and the distances they do see. It would appear that one of the enthusiastic climbers of Mount Hood, in Oregon, made the statement that from the summit he saw the peak of Mount Shasta, 276 miles to the southward. Of course he was doubted, but principally because the curvature of the earth would prevent the intervisibility of the peaks, and so an appeal was made to a young officer of the United States engineering corps, who computed the distance at which these peaks would be intervisible. Mount Hood is given as 11,756 feet above the sea level and Mount Shasta as 14,440, and the distance on the latest charts is 278½ miles. By his computation the "total visible distance" was 277 miles, which gave "one mile to spare" over his assumed distance of 276 miles, upon which The Oregonian and some of the New York papers have assumed the intervisibility of the peaks, and that the mountain climber was right in his declaration of seeing Mount Shasta.

That is all very pretty, Professor Davidson says, if the ocean intervened between the two peaks, when the line of intervisibility would be tangent to the surface of the sea at a point nearer to Mount Hood, but unfortunately the surface between these two peaks is the backbone of the Cascade range of mountains, and the intervisibility is an absolute physical impossibility. We must turn to Alaska if we expect to obtain the longest lines of intervisibility, because the great mountain peaks like Elias and Logan of the St. Elias range immediately dominate a curving coast line. The greatest authenticated distance at which these great master peaks have been visible from sea was by Captain H. E. Nichols of the United States navy when commanding the United States gunboat Pinta. He was close upon Middleton island, off the approaches to Prince William sound, in a well determined position, when he had a view of Mount Elias to the east northeast and Mount Wrangell to the northward. The former was distant 187 statute miles and the latter 213 miles. It may have been possible that Mount Elias was only part of the mass he saw, and Mount Logan, 30 miles to the north by east from Mount Elias and 19,512 feet elevation, was the summit of the visible mass. In this case the distance was 204 miles.

It may be mentioned that the consensus of opinion of men who have been through Alaska and have seen Mount Wrangell is that the highest mountain mass is just under 63 degrees latitude and between 147 and 148 degrees longitude, or 166 miles west northwest from Wrangell. This would put the unnamed Mount Wrangell, Mounts Elias, Fairweather, Cook, Cridon, La Perouse, etc., of the Mount Elias range in one line extending through nearly 600 miles.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Japanese Maidservants.

Now the Chinese or Japanese maidservant is becoming fashionable on account of her picturesque possibilities. If she wears her native dress, she is about as attractive as a $1,500 vase or a rare piece of bric-a-brac. Visitors like to look at her, and consequently the prettier and more graceful the girl the higher wages she can command. Long, narrow eyes, thin, black brows and a clear complexion are the things desired. An oriental girl's hair is always shiny and well arranged, and everything about her is invariably neat. A part of her duties is attendance at the door. This is where the spectacular feature counts. After the ring of the electric bell has died away there is a pattering of slippered feet or the clack of little Japanese wooden stilts, and the door swings back, revealing a small, brilliant figure, with a card tray concealed in the depths of her sleeve or kimono. It is all very fetching.

Another function that the maiden from over the seas is expected to perform is serving 5 o'clock tea. This is peculiarly appropriate and lends an aroma to the beverage. It never seems the same afterward, when a Gretchen, with a face like a platter, or a Hibernian carries the tray. The fad started in New York and has naturally reached its height in San Francisco, where the missions are not able to supply the people who call upon them. The missions, in fact, require references before they will allow their girls to go out. There is too much trouble in rescuing them to have them slip back again, as they are quite likely to do if they are not carefully watched. It will not do to give them the liberties that other serving maids have, for they are like wax in the hands of designing people.—New York Correspondent.

Counterfeit Compliments.

Truth telling people are not so pleasant to spend a quarter of an hour with as flatterers, but they wear better to the end of the 24, writes Mrs. Hamilton Mott in The Ladies' Home Journal. I know a woman who has the art of accidentally saying in conversation the nicest things, things that make you want to put your arm about her or kiss her hand in thanks. You hear her say openly one day that she is fond enough of hearing pretty things not to care whether they are genuine or not, and your folly is not so superlative that you can take much comfort in her favor after that. You come to know the counterfeit, no matter how bright it is.

Tommy's Refreshed Memory.

A number of years ago in the superior court for New London county, Conn., a witness whose first name was Thomas, and who was the son of the plaintiff, testified to a certain important date, and on crossexamination, having testified that he refreshed his memory as to the date by a memorandum made at the time, was asked to produce the paper, which he did. The paper was seized by the cross examiner and read aloud. It was as follows: "Tommy, do not forget. It was July 26." The value of Tommy's testimony was damaged.—Green Bag.

Have the Tables Been Turned?

"I heard one of the waiters say that fossil shells of oysters 6 feet wide had been found in Kansas," remarked the first oyster.

"How we have degenerated!" sighed the other oyster. "By the way, I wonder if they ever served us stuffed with turkeys in those days!"—Cincinnati Tribune.

The lake dwellers of Switzerland, who are believed to be the contemporaries of the Greeks who fought at Troy, had a small grained wheat, apparently much larger than the kind now in use.

SCHOOL TEACHERS BEWARE!

A Profession Not Overpaid That has Many Dangers

BADLY VENTILATED SCHOOLS AND CONTACT WITH DISEASE

Paine's Celery Compound Cleanses the Blood and Keeps up Strength and Vitality.

It Banishes Languor, Despondency and Irritability.

The majority of our public school teachers, male and female, have many dangers to face in a profession that is never overpaid.

Many teachers are suffering to-day from maladies and diseases contracted in crowded and badly ventilated school buildings; the seeds of fatal troubles are taken into the system from imperfect drainage, and contact with children who carry infectious diseases from their homes.

At this moment hundreds of school teachers are invalids, or go about the performance of their duties in a half-dead way. Nervous troubles are prevalent amongst teachers; headache, dyspepsia, languor, irritability and despondency are common troubles, and make life truly miserable.

The school teachers' friend and life-giver, Paine's Celery Compound, has done a wondrous work in the ranks of the afflicted ones. During the year 1894 scores of cases have come before our notice, of sick and suffering ones having been restored to new life, energy and activity through the use of nature's wonderful medicine.

Paine's Celery Compound has been a true blessing to every teacher who used it. The great medicine has done its work promptly and efficaciously. It always begins its operations at the great nerve centres; it cleanses and purifies the blood, and takes all impurities from the system; it strengthens every digestive organ, and builds up the entire system. Every school teacher in the land, male and female, should use Paine's Celery Compound if sound health and perfect bodily strength is desired.

BIG TORONTO SCANDAL.

SHOE DEALER HOWELL SUED FOR $5,000 FOR CRIM. CON.

The Charge is Brought by the Woman's Husband Who Says Only the Long Green Will Satisfy His Outraged Honor.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—During the hearing of the crim. con. case of Curreau vs. Howell in the assizes, the court-room has been crowded with people anxious to hear the unsavory details. When the case was resumed this morning the defendant, Geo. Howell, was cross-examined by W. R. Riddell.

Mr. Howell said he first saw Mrs. Curreau in December, 1893, when he trusted her for goods. She did not pay him, called him a "hulk" when he threatened to garnishee for the bill, and said she would be even. He paid no attention to her.

TOLD A PITEOUS STORY.

On May 17 her daughter bought a pair of boots and paid $1. He sent a note to Mrs. Curreau asking for the balance. She came the next day, told a piteous story and aroused his compassion. He gave her further credit and it took a long time to suit her. He denied any misconduct.

Continuing, Howell said that he went to Curreau's house and was there accused of criminal intercourse. He demanded to be confronted with Mrs. Curreau who came in and asked her husband not to be hard on him, as it was as much her fault as his. He never offered to settle the case for $100. He said that he did not garnishee Curreau's wages, as he heard that he was on the dead beat list.

THOUGHT SHE WORE NO STOCKINGS.

Robert A. Fletcher, traveller for Harvey & Van Norman, said that he was in Howell's store on May 18th and saw him waiting upon a woman who, he thought had no stockings on. He looked and saw that she wore light colored hose. He could not positively identify Mrs. Curreau as the woman.

THREATENED TO GET EVEN.

Mrs. Howell testified as to a visit by Curreau to the store in July when he swore at her for thinking of garnishing his wages he threatened to get even.

John Cochrane, butcher, said that he was introduced to Mrs. Curreau at Mat Evans' Hotel and they had a drink together. Some time after Curreau called at his place accused him of being "mixed up with his wife," told Mrs. Cochrane that he was a bad man, threatened him and sent him a lawyer's letter.

On another occasion Cochrane said he called at Curreau's house, but was put out by a vegetable man, who asked him what he was doing there. He said he went in to see if there was a sale going on.

WENT TO GET MONEY.

Albert Murphy said that he had called with a man named Moore, an ex-private from Stanley barracks, at Mrs. Curreau's house. Moore said his object was to get money. Witness stayed in the hall while Moore and Mrs. Curreau went into a room and shut the door. He had seen Mrs. Curreau drinking in the Canadian hotel on Maud street.

A ROMANCE.

A Young Canadian Charged with Obtaining Fraudulent Naturalization Papers to Marry an American Girl—Arrested for Fraud.

Special to the Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 23.—Prospects of marriage induced Albert H. Knowles, a young Canadian, who lived in Niagara Falls, Ont., to cross the border nearly four years ago and take up a residence in Tonawanda, where his sweetheart lived. In his anxiety to become a full-fledged citizen of the United States before marriage, Knowles is said to have illegally obtained his naturalization papers, and yesterday morning he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Fairchild to answer that charge. The charge made by Immigration Inspector De Barry is that Knowles got his naturalization papers after a residence in Tonawanda of not more than a year and seven months, that, in order to obtain them at that time, he swore falsely to a residence in the States of the requisite period of five years, and thus is guilty of fraud. The courtship of Knowles was full of romance, and characterized by great perseverance in face of obstacles. His union with Miss Lottie Moore, of Tonawanda, was opposed by the girl's parents, who objected to the lover because he was a Canadian. After obtaining his citizenship papers, they failed to be reconciled to the marriage, so Knowles eloped with the girl, came to Buffalo, and was married. Before he had been here 24 hours, he was arrested and taken back to Tonawanda, charged by Mrs. Moore with kidnapping her daughter. The little village was agog over the affair. Knowles was discharged, and with his bride returned to Buffalo. They remained here a short time, and then went to Warsaw, where they have lived since, and where Knowles was arrested. When the prisoner was arraigned before Commissioner Fairchild this morning he pleaded not guilty.

INEFFECTUAL TORTURE.

Robbers Fail to Secure the Booty—An Old Man's Fortitude.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 23.—Wm. Walsh, an old bachelor, who has for years resided alone in old house in the southern part of the city and who is reported to be a miser, was called out of bed this morning by five masked men, who seized him, and, at the point of a pistol, attempted to make him divulge the hiding place of his money.

He refused and they set fire to his hair and beard, burning them off, and burned his body with a red hot poker. He still refused to tell and they placed his feet over a fire and roasted them. Upon still refusing, they beat him until he was insensible. They then ransacked the house and escaped.

To Build a Dry-Dock at Midland.

MIDLAND, Ont., Feb. 23.—Midland has taken the first step towards constructing a dry dock large enough to accommodate the greatest vessels on the lakes. At a public meeting last night it was unanimously resolved to empower the Council to employ an engineer to locate a site and estimate the cost of the work, and afterwards to raise money to build or bonus the dock. The dock will be 400 feet long, 16 feet deep, and 50 feet wide. There is no dock on the Georgian Bay suitable for the largest lake vessels of the day, and Midland harbor is the only one in the same waters that permits of entrance of the deep-draughters. The terminus of the Trent Valley canal will be at Midland, and the necessity for a dry dock here is thus strengthened. Messrs. James Burton and James Playfair, both interested extensively in steamboats, spoke strongly in favor of the project. Mayor Horrell, Reeve Ruby, ex-Reeve Jeffrey, and Councillor Paul also urged the construction of the dock.

A Sparkler for Pope Leo.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The Pall Mall Gazette says the Pope has received from the President of the Transvaal Republic a diamond weighing 971 carats. The stone was found by an African chief in the mines of Jagersfontein, and is the largest known. It is of a bluish white cast, and practically perfect its only blemish being a tiny spot which is invisible to the naked eye.

AND THEIR CHILDREN ALL BECOME INSANE.

The McClure Family of Brampton—The Father Thought He Was the Messiah—They Wouldn't Eat Pork—A Strange Case.

Special to The Times.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 23.—Considerable excitement has been occasioned here by the arrest of the McClure family on a charge of lunacy as reported in yesterday's papers.

The family have always been regarded as one of the most respected in the neighborhood, and their past record was such as to lead every neighbor to esteem them highly. It consists of six persons—the mother, three sons and two daughters, and ever since their birth the children have lived at the present homestead on the 2nd concession of Chinquacousy where they have a fine 160 acre farm.

In this neighborhood there are over 500 McClures residing, and the intermarrying that has taken place between cousins is said to be responsible for the present deplorable mental condition of the boys and girls.

THE BEGINNING OF THE LUNACY.

The present troubles began about Christmas, when David J. McClure had a vision in which he learned that he was to be the Messiah of the second coming. His first vision was supplemented by further dreams, and by a peculiar arrangement of scriptural initials he was able to convince his brothers and sisters (who are intensely religious) that he was the Messiah.

His friends at first endeavored to persuade him that he was mistaken, but finally they left him to his own course. At the home daily arguments were held, in which the doctrine of David J. was insidiously instilled in the minds of the whole family, and they became obedient to his most extravagant command.

THE SIN OF EATING PORK.

The first serious manifestation of the hallucination was when in the early part of the year David J. discovered that the family had been guilty of grievous sin in eating pork, and he slaughtered all the pigs on the farm and threw the meat away.

After this another effort was made by friends to bring the young man back to his senses, but he seemed to be too far gone, and the opposition he encountered only made him more active, and he began to preach the end of the world. He followed this up by trying to get a band of disciples to follow him, but failed to secure more than the members of his own family.

THE GIRL HE WAS TO MARRY.

The young lady to whom David was engaged was importuned so greatly that she was compelled to leave home to escape the deluded lover.

Failing in this effort to get the throng to follow him David ordered his family into retreat, and for weeks none of them left the farmhouse, except to attend to the stock and do the chores. During the retreat religious services were held continuously, one of the sisters playing the organ and a brother the violin, while the rest danced and sang in a most ludicrous manner.

HOMICIDAL TENDENCIES DISPLAYED.

On Wednesday David J. was moved to kill a cow, and having so he distributed the parts to the poor of the neighborhood.

On Thursday night the malady took a different course, and David began to hunt for a devil that he declared was in the house. He found it to be in possession of his mother, and to exercise the evil spirit he choked the old woman till he thought she was dead.

The mother escaped to a neighboring farm house, and word was sent to Constable Hurst, of Brampton, who set out to apprehend the family. On arriving at the house he found the three sons and two daughters all in one bed awaiting the end of the earth. The three young men were brought to Brampton and the girls were given in charge of relatives.

THE CHARACTERS OF THE CHILDREN.

The demented young folk are the children of first cousins and one of the parents was the child of first cousins and this is the reason assigned for their present condition.

David J., the messiah, is 22. He has had a good High school education and is of a very sensitive temperament.

William Samuel is 29 years of age and is an elder of the Brampton Presbyterian church.

John is a boy of 19, and has been looked upon as the wild one of the family, but his ways have not been wicked in the least as such are generally regarded.

The oldest daughter, Hannah, is a fine-looking young woman, and has been prominent in Christian Endeavor circles

The youngest daughter is a commonplace, sensible looking girl.

The mother is a hard working Christian lady of 60 years, quiet and unassuming in her ways.

IN COURT NEXT WEDNESDAY.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 23.—The McClures will appear before the Magistrates on Wednesday next. There is no improvement in their condition.

The members of the family throughout the county are arranging their affairs, caring for their stock, etc.

It is expected that the mother and daughters will regain their senses in a short time with proper care.

Progress of the Voters' Lists.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—Another large batch of voters' lists were received at the Government printing bureau today, among them being those for Victoria and Vancouver, B.C. Only about 40 other lists remain to come in now.

OLD SCOTTISH CURES.

Remedies That Were Recommended in the Days of Auld Lang Syne.

A baldheaded man would hesitate before following Sir John Moncrieff's advice to "make a lee of the burnt ashes of dove's dung and wash the head well," although there is some consolation in learning that the same beneficial results would accrue from using "the ashes of little frogs." The hair, according to this authority, may be changed to a golden tint by using a simple lotion composed of the ashes of the ivy plant. Ladies who sigh for a fair complexion may secure it by such a pleasant method as washing the face with "the distilled water of snails," and the application of "liver of a sheep, fresh and hot," will make the whole face well colored.

Should the nose unfortunately bleed and the familiar remedy of thrusting a bunch of keys down the back of the neck fail of the desired result, then the assured styptic is to put into the nostrils a mixture of the hair of a hare and vinegar. Sir John bears testimony, "I myself know this to be the best of anything known." Blood flowing from a cut may be instantly stanched by simply holding a jasper in the hand or by putting cow's blood into the wound. The reader will be apt to remark that neither of these is a handy remedy for such an emergency. An ointment made of earthworms will cure paralysis if the affected parts be anointed with the compound.

Sleeplessness, so common an ailment in our own time, can be removed, according to Sir John, by applying "living creatures to the head to dissolve the humor," and Sir John narrates that for measles "many keep an ewe or wedder in their chamber or on the bed, because these creatures are easily infected and draw the venom to themselves, by which means some ease may happen to the sick person." In a similar manner, if the trouble be colic, a live duck or frog applied to the part "draws all the evil to itself and dies." Epilepsy may be prevented by wearing a girdle of wolf's skin. Should any one have been so negligent as to omit this necessary precaution, "powder of a man's bones burnt, chiefly of the skull that is found in the earth, cures the epilepsy. The bones of a man cure a man. The bones of a woman cure a woman."

Lethargic individuals should follow the sage Moncrieff's advice: "Burn the whole skin of a hare with the ears and nails. The powder thereof, being given hot, cures the lethargy perfectly." Deafness may be removed by pouring a mixture of onion juice and ants' eggs into the ear, and "the blood of a wild goat given to ten drops of carduus water doth powerfully discuss the pleurisy."—Gentleman's Magazine

PECULIAR CHINESE DISHES.

Some of Them Are Palatable, but More of Them Are Not.

Some of the dishes were extremely nice, notably the little shreds of roast mutton, excellently seasoned, such as I learned ever after to call for with confidence at Chinese inns. On the other hand, the chicken was made uneatable, and the eggs on this occasion, I am bound to say, were inexpressibly nasty. The taste for them as eaten in China had need to be acquired no doubt, for I had been told at Vierny of the wonderful pains and expense at which Chinese gormands preserve their eggs till they are black and putrid, and of which they are as proud when many, many years old as an English squire of his crusted port. I have, moreover, a vague impression, which for the moment I cannot verify, that I somewhere tasted these ancient delicacies and found them good, but on the present occasion my notebook condemns them utterly.

The rissoles of pork sausage were tasty, and so were the French beans, peas and hearts of cabbage stalk cut in slices and the mandarin oranges preserved in sirup. We helped ourselves to these delicacies as we pleased, but our host every now and then with his chopsticks placed on the plate of one or other of his three guests a choice morsel, which, mercifully, it was not a matter of unbending etiquette that one should eat. It was polite, of course, occasionally to return the compliment and help him to tidbits with one's knife and fork.—Philadelphia Times.

Swamp Plants.

It should be well known by this time that swamp plants, as a rule, will do much better in comparatively dry land than in the swamps where we naturally find them. Even the rice plant, which usually grows in water, will grow well and produce a fair crop of seeds in common garden ground. The reason for this has been fully explained in scientific serials. It reads oddly in a report just issued by the United States department of agriculture, suggesting that the common swamp rose mallow, Hibiscus moscheutos, would possibly grow in dry land, as an experiment was made to test this fact on the Delaware river 35 years ago. The plant is growing in every well ordered herbaceous ground and is one of our most popular border plants. It is a weakness of the United States department of agriculture that it is so often behind the times in its publications. One of the best tasks for that department would be to make an index of what has been placed on record in the many serial publications of our country during the last half century. Dr. Franklin B. Hough did something of this work in forestry when he was in this department. It is much to be regretted that such useful work has not been given a broader scope.—Meehan's Monthly.

A Horse Has Little Brains.

The mental peculiarities of the horse are much less characteristic than its physical. It is indeed the common opinion among those who do not know the animal well that it is endowed with much sagacity, but no experienced and careful observer is likely to maintain this opinion. All such students find the intelligence of the horse to be very limited.

Although some part of this mental defect in the horse, causing its actions to be widely contrasted with those of the dog, may be due to a lack of deliberate training and to breeding with reference to intellectual accomplishment, we see, by comparing the creature with the elephant, which practically has never been bred in captivity, that the equine mind is, from the point of view of rationality, very feeble.—Professor N. S. Shaler in Scribner's Magazine.

How She Said Grace.

Little 4-year-old Ida was visiting her aunt. She was always restless at the table during the silent blessing, so her aunt explained to her why they bowed the head and kept quiet before eating. One day little Ida kept unusually quiet during grace. Finally she lifted her little head and looked up in her aunt's face and said: "Aunt Emily, do you know what I was saying? I was saying, 'Reddy, got your hair dyed, hair dyed green.' "—Philadelphia Record.

THE FIRE RECORD.

Conflagrations in Kingston, Hamilton and Brantford.

Special to The Times.

KINGSTON, Feb. 25.—This morning about 8 o'clock fire destroyed the bake shop of R. H. Toye, King street. The firemen saved the building, owned by Mrs. W. J. Crothers, from destruction. The machinery was damaged and the ovens considerably injured. Mr. Toye did the largest bread business in the city. Loss about $8,000; insured. The building stood between the Ontario Chambers and the new Whig office. Both these buildings were filled with water but not injured. Toye's confectionery store in front of the building was damaged by smoke and water.

HAMILTON, Feb. 25.—A spark from the stove set fire to straw in a crate in the rear portion of Stuart & Company's tea store, King street east, shortly before 8 yesterday morning. Before the fire could be extinguished the building, owned by Mr. Anthony Copp, was damaged to the amount of about $150. The stock of tea and coffee was damaged to about half its value, the loss being about $100 or $150.

The loss to the stock of Mr. S. Burns, No. 41 James street north, which was damaged by fire on Tuesday, has been adjusted at $560. The loss claimed was $700.

BRANTFORD, Feb. 25.—Between 9 and 10 o'clock last night fire was discovered in the engine room of the Brantford Box Company. The firemen extinguished it before much damage had been done.

At 4.30 yesterday morning fire was discovered in Simpson's blacksmith shop. The brigade was summoned and quickly extinguished the flames. Damage about $300.

Shortly after the fire Chief Calder, in examining the premises, fell through a hole burned in the floor. He was carried out unconscious, but quickly rallied. Beyond a severe shaking up he suffered no injury.

A Man of War Missing.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 25.—Anxiety is felt in regard to the Mexican man-of-war Libertad, which sailed from Vera Cruz about February 10. She was due here on Feb. 18, but nothing has been heard of her since leaving Vera Cruz.

Special to the Times.

NANAIMO, B.C., Feb. 25.—The Liberal convention last evening nominated Ralph Smith to contest Vancouver Island constituency. This is the first time in the history of the province that the Liberals have contested this district. D. W. Gordon, Conservative, is the sitting member. He was returned by acclamation in 1891.

Appointed Chief Justice.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 25.—At yesterday's Cabinet caucus Hon. Theo. Davie, Premier of British Columbia, was appointed to the Chief Justiceship of that Province.

Trial by Jury.

NANAIMO, B. C., Feb. 25.—Ex-Police Magistrate Planta at the last moment applied for a trial by jury in place of speedy trial. He will come up at the June Assizes, and has been allowed bail in $3,000.

CAN USE THE HOME.

Dr. Barnardo Willing to Accept the Childrens' Aid Society Proposition.

Mr. E. B. Edwards has received the following letter from Dr. Barnardo:

LONDON, E.,
February 2nd, 1895.

MY DEAR SIR—I have read with great pleasure the copy of the Children's Protection Act, which you sent me. I heartily congratulate all who had any share in bringing about this most desirable legislation on behalf of the children of Canada. I write now at the earliest possible moment to say that it will give me very great pleasure to offer our home at Peterborough, as a temporary shelter under the Act for the reception of girls who may be committed to us through it, and for the purpose of securing, after awhile, foster parents and homes in which the children can be boarded out. I understand from the Act that the municipality would pay for the support of those children at a fixed rate and I am quite satisfied if such expenses be paid to place my entire experienced staff and our institution at the disposal of the society for the purpose of rendering prompt and efficient aid in such cases. I, however, suggest that this arrangement should be in force only for a year; that at the end of the year we consider the position, for it is just possible from either one side or the other that we might not consider it desirable that the arrangement should be permanent. Of course, when the home is full of children who have come from England and are waiting to be placed out in homes, we could not receive those who may committed under the Act, and my offer is understood only, therefore, to obtain, if there is room. As to the class of children that would be offered to us by the Society under the Act, I hardly like now to lay down any hard and fast rule, but it would be obvious that certain children would be very desirable—that, for example, a very depraved or vicious child might injuriously affect others, and I imagine that such a case would be best be dealt with not by sending her to a home like ours, but by boarding her out at once in some family where there are no other children. But however it might be and without laying down too stringent a rule, I would wish by this letter to offer our institution at Peterborough for the purposes of the Act, and if you will convey this offer to the responsible parties, I shall be be very much obliged to you. Believe me to be, dear Mr. Edwards,

Very faithfully yours,
(Signed) THOMAS J. BARNARDO.

Grand Association P. of I.

It is understood that the Patrons of Industry have reconsidered their determination not to hold the meeting of their Grand Association shortly, and the meeting will probably be held during the next week or ten days. It is expected delegates will be present from Manitoba and Quebec, and a Dominion Executive will be formed.

Off for the City.

The Peterborough hockey team will leave this afternoon via the G. T. R. for Toronto, and to-night will meet the Granites in the junior championship finals. The boys are in excellent trim, and feel confident of winning. THE TIMES will bulletin the result of the match as soon as it is concluded, which will probably be about 10 o'clock.

A Runaway.

J. W. Fairweather's horse ran away on George street last night just about the time people were going to the minstrel performance, and the incident created quite a stir on the street. The owner was driving the animal when it dashed up the street. One of the runners of the cutter caught in the street car track, and the driver was thrown out, but escaped injury. The cutter was badly demolished.

Went by the C. P. R.

Mr. D. O. Pease, of the Grand Trunk Railway, Montreal, was in town yesterday. Mr. Pease endeared himself to the hockey team by giving them a special train from Belleville to Kingston on the occasion of their recent trip, and they extended him a pressing invitation to accompany them to Toronto to-day. Mr. Pease was unable to wait over, and went to Toronto last night via the C. P. R.

Beer Flowed Freely.

In the Police Court, yesterday morning, Martin Connors pleaded guilty to the charge of selling liquor without a license, and the Magistrate imposed a fine of $50 and costs. The Magistrate ordered that the contents of the 20-gallon keg be destroyed. After court it was taken out on the market square and emptied. The sight of so much going to waste caused many a pang among the motley group of onlookers.

He's a "Scrapper."

A young man of the town, who enjoys the not very enviable reputation of being a "scrapper," and who has several times been fined for fighting, will be up before the Magistrate this morning charged with the same offence. The fight took place on Saturday afternoon in the rear of Overend's hotel. The unprovoked assault was made upon a stranger recently arrived in town from the shanties where he had been work. The stranger administered a severe thrashing to his assailant.

The C. P. R. Excursion.

The C. P. R. has made arrangements to carry a large number of people to Toronto today, and their best and most magnificent cars will be at the service of the public. The first train will leave at 4.42 this morning arriving in Toronto at 7.25. The second will leave at 7.20 and the excursionists will be landed in Toronto at 10.10 a.m. Those who cannot go earlier in the day can take a train 4.46 and then reach the Queen City at 7.25 in plenty of time to take in either the hockey match or any of the theatrical attractions. The tickets are good for 6 days.

Stole From His Employer.

A most daring robbery was perpetrated about a mile north of Hastings on Wednesday. Harry Aust, a young Englishman who worked for a farmer named Andrew McGee, left McGee's with the ostensible intention of coming to the village for some groceries, but before leaving, it is alleged, he stole a new suit of clothes and $60 cash from his employer. The money was not missed until about eight o'clock Friday morning. Aust left Hasting on the 2.30 train, and got off at Belleville. The authorities there have been notified to be on the look out. The Belleville police received a telegram from Hastings Friday morning informing them of the above facts, but Aust had gone east on the Wednesday midnight train and likely was in Uncle Sam's domains before the authorities were notified.—Star.

THE RUGBY MINSTRELS.

A Crowded House Greeted the Amateur Artists in Cork.

The audience that greeted the Rugby Amateur Minstrels in the Opera House last night was a bumper. Every seat was filled and standing room wasn't any too plentiful.

The boys gave a good performance. Considering that the aggregation numbered not one professional outside of the LaBelle Bros. and Dan Simons, also the short time they have had for organization and rehearsals, the performance was exceedingly good, there being no confusion or break in any of the parts.

The first part consisted of the regulation melange. Eight funny end men cracked jokes—and manipulated bones and tambourines between times, and the balance was filled in with singing. The leading end men Messrs. Dan Simons and Fred Ramsay made their appearance from the "flys" lowered at the end of a rope. The fun immediately commenced after their arrival. The end men were attired in black with white and green lapels to their coats, knickerbockers and red stockings. The solid phalanx in the rear wore full dress suits. The boys made a very nice appearance.

There were several local hits sprung before the first fall of the curtain. They took well with the audience, and generous applause was accorded every effort. The singing of the chorus was especially good. Mr. Lount's rendering of "When Summer Comes Again" was well received. H. J. B. Dunsford sang a topical song that took well. R. J. Hillier rendered "A Curl from Baby's Head" in capital style. J. H. Jones had the German dialect down pat "Mit a Leetle Bunch of Whiskers on His Chin," and Dan Simons sang and danced himself into popular favor when he told of the doings of "The Band on Bradburn's Block." R. H. Strickland sang the "Rowdy Dowdy Boys," and made a hit.

In the second part the banjo club gave tuneful selections. Dan Simons did a very clever clog, and to an encore executed some intricate imitations. Then a slack wire was stretched across the stage and Mr. H. LaBelle gave a very clever exhibition of slack wire walking and balancing. Dan Simons then came on again in a knock-about song and dance that evoked continuous applause. This was followed by a thrilling trapeze performance by Mr. Maurice LaBelle, who did some difficult and clever "drops" and balancing.

The fancy drill was one of the features of the show, and was participated in by 16 of the aggregation. The marching, countermarching, and many difficult evolutions were executed very cleverly and precisely. The drill met with generous applause.

"The Trained Giraffe" with trainer Dan Simons was a huge and laughable success, abounding in ludicrous features that kept the audience in continuous good humor. This extravaganza ended the second part.

Harry Neil opened the third part with a darkey sermon, full of wholesome truths, that no doubt reached the hearts of many. In fact, judged by the impression he made, there is no doubt Mr. Neil should forsake commercial life and enter the ministry.

The performance came to an end with a farce entitled "The Asylum." It was replete with funnyisms and afforded a great deal of amusement.

Owing to the length of the program, the tableaux were not put on as advertised, but even without these the performance exceeded the expectations of those who have attended similar performances given by amateurs.

The members repaired to the rooms over the Palace Restaurant after the performance and spent a very pleasant hour.

OUR "TORY MAYOR."

This is How the Toronto Globe Refers to Mayor Kendry.

The Toronto Globe takes up Mayor Kendry's assertion made at the McCarthy meeting, and comments on it as follows:

"The Tory Mayor of Peterborough has introduced the put-up or shut-up mode of carrying on the tariff controversy, but so far has not been fortunate in selecting his ground. He offered to bet $100 with Mr. McCarthy and Col. O'Brien that cotton goods are as cheap or cheaper in Canada than in England, and they took him up. If Mr. Kendry had looked at the trade returns he would not have got into this scrape. In 1892 we imported dutiable cotton goods—raw cotton is free—of the value of $4,800,000, chiefly from England and the United States. The duty was $1,2000,000, or 25 per cent. all round. Mr. Kendry would have us believe that if we had chosen to do so we could have got these goods as cheap at home as their cost abroad, and so have saved the $1,200,000—a proposition which reflects upon our sanity. If he says that these were classes of goods not manufactured by our mills he is mistaken. Here is one case in point out of many—dyed cotton sateens used for light dress goods and linings are manufactured in Canada. The duty on them is 30 per cent.; it used to be 32½. If anyone in Peterborough "wants to gamble on a sure thing" at Mr. Kendry's expense the Globe will send him two samples of sateen, one English, and the other Canadian; the English is 30 inches wide, the Canadian only 26; the English is as good, if not better, material than the Canadian, yet, while the English has to pay 30 per cent. duty and something more for freight and other charges, it is laid down in Toronto cheaper than the Canadian. In other lines, especially in bleached and unbleached cottons, the duty is heavy enough to enable the Canadian combine to sell as cheaply as British and American mills, but, of course, if it were repealed the Canadian manufacturer would have to bring the price of his cottons down to the competitive point. To put it differently, the prices of the big combine here are, speaking generally, higher than foreign prices by very nearly the amount of the duty. The last thing a sensible Tory would bring to notice is the so-called development of the cotton industry under the N. P. By his duties and clap-on-all-sail speech Sir Leonard Tilley induced an enormous lot of capital to rush into the business. The output soon exceeded the home demand, and the cost of production was too high to admit of profitable exporting on a large scale. Temporary agreements to regulate the supply and keep the home price up where established, which involved the closing down of mills, but these were frequently violated. At last a number of capitalists came on the scene and acquired the mills for less than the amount sunk in them, several millions of money being wiped out in this manner, and set up a permanent combine, which is "holding up" the consumer at the old stand in the way described.

Committee on Appointments Called—Councillor Stone's Explanation.

Councillor Stone has been severely criticized for his absence from the special meeting of the Town Council on Friday night last, which was called to deal with the report of the Committee on Appointments of which he is chairman. In view of a satisfactory explanation which Councillor Stone has made, this criticism is manifestly unjust, and the facts of the case are published below to show the public that Councillor Stone's absence from the meeting was not due to premeditated design, but to a mishap likely to happen to any person, and which in this instance occurred most inopportunely.

Accompanied by his wife and child, Mr. Stone drove to Hastings on the Friday in question, and when between Norwood and Westwood got stuck in a snow drift, on the Westwood road. Despite the greatest exertions, it was impossible to get the team and cutter out of the drift, and the three were in a very unpleasant condition for three hours. Mr. Stone says that they came near perishing, and had it not been for the timely assistance of Mr. Richard Walsh, who heard Mr. Stone's cries, and came across the fields with a lantern, they undoubtedly would have perished.

Mr. Stone has called the Committee on Appointments to meet to-night when the question of civic appointments will be taken up again.

That Kallaher Fortune.

The chief of police has received another letter regarding the Kallaher fortune, the particulars of which are known. The letter reads as follows:

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 22nd, 1895.

Chief Roszel:

DEAR SIR.—Having noticed an item in THE TIMES Feb. 1st, concerning John Kallaher, who died in Guthrie, Oklahama, I wish to inform you that I had a brother of that name, who left Peterborough about 20 years ago for the States. Have not heard from him since. If living would be forty-seven years of age; height five feet eight inches, dark hair and whiskers light.

MICHAEL KALLAHER.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread-board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

ROBBED IN BROAD DAY.

A YOUNG GIRL GAGGED IN A CROWDED THOROUGHFARE.

Two Men Call in a Store on the Pretence of Making a Purchase, Silence the Woman in Charge and Rifle the Till.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb., 26.—Patrick Cusick, rear 21 McCaul street, and Robert Pickens, rear 20 Teraulay street, are under arrest, charged with being implicated in a daring case of daylight robbery.

At 186 1 2 Queen street west, Miss Lena Weisser conducts a small tobacco store. At 3.30 yesterday afternoon two men, one of them known by sight to Miss Weisser, entered the store, and asked for a packet of cigarettes.

GRABBED THE GIRL BY THE THROAT.

Miss Weisser handed them a packet of cigarettes, which they said was not the brand they wanted. The shorter one of the two stepped to the end of the counter, and made a move as though to point out what kind he desired. Instead of doing so he clutched her by the throat, and threw her to the floor. The second thief now took a hand in the proceedings, and the two dragged the struggling girl into a small room adjoining the story. Once or twice when they lost their hold on her throat she managed to scream for assistance. In the struggle the short man received two ugly scratches on his face, inflicted by Miss Weisser's hands. When they got her into the room an attempt was made to gag her. While the taller one held her down, stifling her cries by stuffing a linen handkerchief into her mouth, his companion turned back to the store and rifled the till of its contents, amounting in all to about $20. The whole proceedings thus far had occupied not more than two minutes, and none of the many people passing the store heard the cries or knew aught of what was being enacted within. The shortest man pocketed the contents of the till and quietly walked into the street, turning eastward. When he passed out the door, his chum released his hold on Miss Weisser, no doubt hoping the handkerchief would prove a gag to keep her long enough to allow of their escape.

A CRY FOR HELP.

Io this he was mistaken. He had only turned his back when Miss Weisser jumped to her feet and screamed for help. The thief ran through the open doorway and followed his champion, overtaking him in Simcoe street. With blood flowing from her mouth, and wounds on her throat, Miss Weisser gave chase, shouting, "Murder!" and "Robbers!" at the highest pitch of her voice. Henry Henneberg, fruit dealer, whose store is only separated from that of Miss Weisser by a thin partition, heard her first cry for help, and rushed to his door in time to see the latter of the thieves disappearing among the excited crowds. He managed to follow them, however, to Simcoe street, and directing two boys to watch them, turned back to send for police assistance.

FOLLOWING THE THIEVES.

The thieves had evidently been watching P. C. Townsend, in charge of that beat at the time, as that officer had passed the store less than 10 minutes previously. Townsend had just reached York street when James Weller, 7 Duchess street, rushed up to him and informed him of the robbery. The thieves had turned north in Simcoe street and passing into Pullon place vaulted the high fence at its eastern end, into University street, and were crossing this street, when Townsend saw them and gave chase. When the men were crossing the Armouries lawn Sergt. Cross joined in the chase. At Chestnut street Sergt. Cross took possession of a pedlar's horse and wagon and endeavored to whip the aged animal into a pace swift enough to overtake the fugitives. The horse was too slow and refused to continue the hunt past Downey's lane. The officer was compelled to start out afoot once more, tracking his man along Downey's lane, Albert street and James street to Queen, where the pursued disappeared in a woodyard.

THE ALLEGED THIEVES ARRESTED.

From the descriptions furnished the detectives by Miss Weisser they became convinced that Cusick and Pickens were the men. Detectives Davis, Black, Cuddy and Duncan were detailed to the case, and a thorough search of the neighborhood made about 8.45 p.m. Detective Black was in Queen street west, when he met Cusick, with two large pieces of court plaster concealing the wounds on his face, but minus his moustache. It had been cot off within the preceding five hours. He escorted him to Headquarters. Cusick is well known to the police, having been before the Colonel one or twice before.

Detective Black at 11.55 last night arrested Pickens at his home in Teraulay street.

BOGUS LORD IN A CELL.

Capture of an Expert Swindler in New York

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 26.—Word is received here that the individual who successfully swindled several prominent Detroiters last fall, while posing as "Lord" Claude Hamilton, is under arrest in New York. He is charged with stealing two gold watches and two dimond rings from Mrs. Evans of 1674 Broadway, and also leaving an unpaid board bill of $190. The Brooklyn authorities were also looking for him on a charge of swindling Arthur Lillie, a prominent citizen who had befriended him. Several of the hotels in New York and Brooklyn claim that "Hamilton" imposed upon them under the name of "Lord" Robert Benton. They also claim that his real name is Sydney Bebton. He is locked up at the Tombs.

COLLISION IN A MINE SHAFT.

Five Hundred Miners Imprisoned Hundreds of Feet Under the Earth.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Cages collided in the shaft of the Whitewood colliery at Normanton, near Leeds, to day. The shaft was damaged so badly that it has been impossible to bring up any of the 500 miners working below at the time of the accident. Much anxiety is felt for their safety.

HIS LAST CHANCE LOST.

Murderer Buchanan's Appeal Dismissed by the Court of Appeal.

Special to The Times.

ALBANY, N.Y., Feb. 26.—The Court of Appeals has affirmed the judgment of the lower court against Dr. Buchanan, in the latter's appeal in his celebrated murder case to the court of last record. The defendant murdered his wife by administering poison to her, in the city of New York, on April 22, 1892. Buchanan came from Nova Scotia.

WAS IT MURDER?

The Mangled Body of Robert Huson Found on the Railway Tracks at London—Suspicion of Foul Play—Was to Have Been Married Next Month.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 26.—The terribly mangled body of Robert Huson, who for some years was connected with the officers mess room at the military barracks here was found on the C.P.R. tracks, near Adelaide street, last night about eleven o'clock

The victim's home is in Jarvis, Ont., and he was to have been married next month.

Suspicions of foul play are entertained and an inquest will be held at two o'clock this afternoon.

A SCAMP'S INFATUATION.

BEBBINGTON, FORMERLY OF OTTAWA, DESERTS HIS WIFE

To Marry a Rich Girl—His Crooked Career in Buffalo—Charged with Embezzlement—He Seeks Asylum in Dakota With His Loveince.

Special to the Times

BUFFALO, Feb. 26.—Frederick L. Bebbington, an investment agent, was married in Ottawa in 1887 to a prominent society lady in that city. Business not being prosperous in Canada, the family removed to this city, where Bebbington opened an office, and began to cut a swath of considerable width in local society. There was some trouble a couple of years ago when Mrs. Bebbington attempted to have deported a young girl named "Flossie" Shepherd, whom she had adopted in Canada, but who did not turn out to the satisfaction of the Bebbingtons. She lacked the moral tone necessary for a family of such religious pretensions, Bebbington being a trustee of Ashbury church and Mrs. Bebbington an earnest moral reformer and a member in nearly all the women's societies and charitable workers' associations of the city. Now Mrs. Bebbington has brought an action for divorce from Frederick, and Fred, according to the complainant in the action, is a fugitive, being afraid to return lest he shall be prosecuted for the embezzlement of certain moneys entrusted to him. Mr. Bebbington went to England last October on business, and there met Miss Aries, the daughter of a wealthy merchant of London, and

BECAME INFATUATED WITH HER

and she with him. She came to this country to meet him, as he represented to her, so it is said, that he had an action for divorce pending, and would marry her as soon as he was free to do so under the laws of this country. The complainant alleges that the parties lived together at the Imperial hotel, Niagara Falls, Ont., and in New York City, and further states that since Nov. 1st last Bebbington has been once in this city. It was after nightfall Dec. 17th. He then returned to Niagara Falls, where he and Miss Aries remained until Jan. 19th, when they went to Detroit, Mich. On Feb. 10th he wrote a letter from Detroit to a man in this city named Murray. It is known that Bebbington is now in Sioux Falls, N.D., and it is believed Miss Aries is with him. He has gone there for the purpose of securing a divorce. Mrs. Bebbington's lawyer had an interview with Miss Aries last month, in which that lady frankly told him that Mr. Bebbington had gone west to get a divorce and that as soon as this was accomplished, she and Bebbington would sail for London and would be married at her home there. This consummation, she expected, would be reached about April 1st. Miss Aries has a brother in Baltimore, Md., A well-to-do business man.

FOR REMEDIAL LEGISLATION.

Plea of the Catholic Minority in Manitoba on the Schools Question.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 26.—This morning argument in the plea of the Catholic minority for remedial legislation was begun before the Government. Mr. J. S. Ewart, Q. C., represented the Catholics of Manitoba, and D'Alton McCarthy, Q. C., opposed the petition on behalf of the Government of that province. The absent Ministers were Mr. Costigan and Senator Ferguson.

Among the prominent people present were Rev. Fathers Allard, of St. Boniface; Chenier, of Winnipeg; ex Lieutenant-Governor Royal, Montreal; Rev. Chevrier and Senator Bernier, of Winnipeg. Premier Bowell presided.

Mr. McCarthy opened the case by announcing that the Manitoba Government had no opportunity to prepare their case and accordingly asked for an adjournment prefacing his remarks with a letter from the Attorney-General, who said, "I protest most vigorously against the the absurdly short notice which has been given."

Mr. Ewart did not oppose the adjournment, but wanted to know how long his opponents wanted to prepare their case.

Mr. McCarthy inferred that it might be enlarged until after the Legislature adjourns, to which Mr. Ewart emphatically protested against. Continuing, Mr. Ewart said there had been too much delay already, as the minority were suffering from the absence of schools in many places in consequence. He claimed the Government had ample time to prepare a case, and further stated that their counsel had made a study of it for years.

Mr. McCarthy then said no particular postponement was requested by the Attorney General, looking upon the question as one of grave importance. The Government meant to resist any remedial legislation. That no friction might occur, the Attorney General desired to show why such legislation should not be introduced, for which reason a more minute knowledge of the case would be required.

Mr. McCarthy hoped no personalities would be introduced in argument, as he was interested only in a professional capacity.

In reply to Hon. Mr. Ives, Mr. McCarthy said a short adjournment would do to enable him to communicate with Attorney-General Sifton.

Mr. Bowell intimated that the Government would not think of adjourning till after a session. Then a private caucus was held with closed doors and a telegram was later sent to Winnipeg, the reply to which will be considered at another meeting this afternoon.

Sam McConkey Pleads Guilty.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Samuel McConkey, brother of the alleged firebug, pleaded guilty in the Police Court this morning to the charge of stealing some $2 worth of purses and watch cases from the Charles Stark Company. He will come up for sentence on March 1.

A CURIOUS DISCOVERY.

PERFECTLY FORMED CHILD FOUND NEAR A MAN'S SPINE.

Physicians Operated on the Patient, Expecting to Find an Abscess and Were Astounded At What They Found—Medical Science Mystified.

Special to the Times.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 26.—A surgical operation recently performed in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital in Brooklyn has brought to light one of the most remarkable freaks in medical history. The details of the case and the name of the patient are most jealously guarded by the physicians in charge. Dr. Pardington, the superintendent will no more than admit that the case exists.

THOUGHT IT WAS AN ABSCESS.

Three months ago a young man of excellent family, said to be a prosperous Myrtle avenue merchant, began to complain of pains in his thighs, extending toward the base of the spine.

He is a bachelor, 34 years old, with a splendidly proportioned body and had not known a serious illness up to that time. The pains became so severe that an abscess was suspected and an operation performed. The patient refused to take an anaesthetic and never groaned while under the surgeon's knife.

No relief followed the operation, however; in fact, the pains increased, and the physicians determined to expose the lower portion of the spine and remove any foreign or diseased matter which might be found there. The operation resulted in the discovery of a miniature human body, the hair upon the head being visible. The tiny form was removed, and the patient will probably recover his health.

HE WAS ONE OF TWINS.

When the result of the operation became known among the man's friends they were astounded. Many of them said the thing was impossible. Physicians, however, say it is not. The case is one of those strange things that have come to light in the form of the Siamese twins and other wonders that have been exhibited in the museums. The patient was one of twins, and the form found in his body is what is known technically as an arrested development.

Prior to birth the other embryo became enveloped in his organism. The circulation was maintained after birth, and the smaller body became a portion of the larger. So it remained for 34 years. Then, in some way, circulation was cut off, and the arrested development became a source of trouble. It caused symptoms similar to those of an abscess. This is the theory of those who know of the case. Physicians will not discuss it until they get a full statement of facts. Dr. Pardington said last night:

IT IS A FREAK.

"There is some such case here, it is true, but I cannot discuss it. The patient is a young man of very good family, and I am doing everything to shield him from publicity. Every one connected with the hospital has been instructed to maintain the strictest secrecy regarding the matter. It is a freak—that is what I would call it. That is all I can say."

SHE HORSEWHIPPED HIM.

FRANK FREEMAN THRASHED BY A NAPANEE MAIDEN.

Invited Him to Her Home and then Laid on the Raw-Hide—He had Circulated Slanderous Reports.

Special to the Times.

NAPANEE, Feb. 26—The view that most of the citizens of Napanee take of the horsewhipping administered to Frank Freeman by Miss Minnie Cole, a pretty young lady of this town, is, "Served him right."

Freeman, it is stated, circulated rumors derogatory to the girl's character and they reached the ears of Miss Cole, who determined to take revenge on her slanderer. To this end she invited Freeman to visit her at her home and he, little thinking what the girl's object was, complied with the invitation.

MADE HIM FEEL AT HOME.

When he called she completely disarmed him of any suspicion he might have entertained by inviting him into one of the rooms and requesting him to take off his overcoat and hat and be seated. She went so far as to give him an apple and Freeman began to think that he was going to have a lovely time; but he reckoned without his host. Miss Cole taxed him with circulating slanderous stories about her and he emphatically denied the charge. The girl has a short rawhide whip, with lash wound around her hand and just as Freeman was in the middle of his disclaimer she brought the butt end of the whip down on his head.

HE BROKE FOR THE DOOR.

She followed this with three or more blows on the head, when the now thoroughly frightened Freeman broke for the door, followed by the irate Minnie, who belabored him with the whip unmercifully. The room was an upstairs one, and in his hurry Freeman did not bother to be conventional, but went down the stairs more like a ball than a man—minus his overcoat and hat.

CARRIES A BRUISED FACE.

His face was badly blackened, and he was a sore and sick man when he presented himself before a few of the boys a few minutes afterwards and begged on them to go back and secure his coat and hat for him.

Freeman has been in hiding ever since the affair, which is the sole topic of conversation around town.

Miss Cole is a very pretty brunette, and she is a cook in one of the hotels in town.

A Sudden Death.

BUFFALO, Feb. 26.—John A. Burch, general agent for the Lake Shore and Western railway, left his office at the close of business late this afternoon and went to market to make some purchases. While he was picking up his parcels he suddenly reeled and fell to the floor dead. He began his railroad career in Canada and for two years from 1855 to 1857 was division clerk in the office of the general agent of the Great Western in Hamilton. Since 1857 he has been connected with the Lake Shore. He was 98 years old.

The Watters Case.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—In the Police Court this morning Assistant Commissioner of Customs, T. J. Watters, of this city, appeared on the seven charges of embezzling Government funds. By consent of counsel, an adjournment was made until 2.30, when the evidence in the case will be heard for the first time. There is a chance of the case being finished today.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 27, 1895.

Good morning!

The Prince of Wales is suffer'ng from a bad attack of grip. But even this will not make grip fashionable.

The attitude of this journal on the civic reform question is evidently meeting with popular favor. Yesterday no less than a dozen prominent ratepayers called at the office to express their satisfaction at the course which we have pursued in seeking for a re-arrangement of the town officials and their salaries. Hundreds of new subscribers have been added to our lists, during the past few weeks and many cheery words have been extended to us.

The construction of the Lakefield-Peterborough Section of the Trent Valley Canal will strengthen business and help to brace things up generally. The coming summer is, therefore, likely to be a prosperous one, so far as business is concerned. It is said that several hundred men and teams will be at work as soon as the snow is off the ground. If the Government carry out their promise and put the whole section under contract, there will be work for a small army of men and horses for two or three years.

The retirement of Mr. John Burnham, M. P., leaves East Peterborough in a rather awkward shape for the Conservatives. Mr. John Lang, ex-M. P., will probably be the Reform standard-bearer, but just who will oppose him, now that Mr. Burnham is no longer a possibility, it is difficult to say. Mr. John Maloney, the popular Reeve of Douro, is favorably spoken of, and would receive a libera support. Mr. J. B. Pearce, warden of the county, is also mentioned, as is also Mr, H. Calcutt, of Ashburnham. Mr. Calcutt, however, is not likely to accept the nomination, even should it be tendered him, as his health is not the best. That Mr. Burnham's retirement increases the chances of the Liberals few will deny.

Why should the corporation pay more for its labor than is paid by an individual or a private company? And yet such men as Councillor Mills favors, not only the payment of salaries out of all proportion to the services rendered, but a supernumery number of officials, with little or no duties the perform. Is it not absurd to keep a Solicitor, at a salary of $500 per annum and perquisites, whose single duty seems to be to encourage litigation? Is it "business" to pay a head policeman $800 per year (not including the county rake off) to do the work of the county constable, in addition to what he makes on the side as a spotter for the Grand Trunk? We would also enquire of Mr. Mills if he does not think things are ripe for reorganization when he is told that a policeman at $12 or $14 per week is kept to answer the night telephone at the station while in the very next room the driver and engineer of the fire engine sleep? Would not Mr. Mills in his private business have one of these men look after the police telephone and dispense with the services of one policeman? Is it not notorious that certain liquor men are persecuted while other well known offenders are seldom molested? Is it fair to make flesh of one and fish of the other in this way? THE TIMES wants to see the liquor laws rigidly enforced, without favor, but under the present management this is impossible. It is the wish of a large majority of ratepayers that the whole civic service should be overhauled so that we may have a much cheaper, and at the same time infinitely better service.

RETIREMENT OF SIR JOHN CARLING.

Sir John Carling's retirement as the member for London, at the close of the present parliament will terminate an active political career that has been as long continued and in many respects as notable as any in the history of our country. We agree with the London Free Press that it can be truly said that no public man in Canada has held for so long a period a larger measure of the respect, confidence and general esteem of his fellow citizens. Thus deservedly entrenched his election and re-election has been insured for a period extending over an average human lifetime, with only such interruption, from electoral misdoing on the other side, as the law was forced to take cognizance of. That this public respect and confidence is to-day as firmly rooted, and abiding as ever, was amply testified at the large and representative gathering on Friday night, in the standing vote and enthusiastic cheering accorded him, as well as in the expressions of loval attachment which proceeded from every gentleman present, who was in any way to be regarded as eligible to be a party candidate in his stead That any other candidates were seriously thought of, in fact, was due to the knowledge that was widespread in the party ranks that Sir John had expressed his full determination to retire. He not only did not make any secret of his intention, but as long ago as the autumn months requested repeatedly to be given an opportunity to state his position publicly. There was a lingering hope, however, that the old, well-tried and trusted standard-bearer might be still open to persuasion and eventually induced to reverse that intention. But the decisive and emphatic declaration made by Sir John Carling from time to time to his friends and at occasional little meetings that were held, left no doubt of the entire sincerity of his purpose, and it was for this reason, and this alone, that other gentlemen allowed their names to be brought forward and put in nomination. When each in turn expressed a willingness to make way if Sir John should desire to stand for another term, we see no reason to believe that they were not equally sincere, or that there was hardly a man of them who would not have worked as zealously and heartily for his return as for any one else among them who should get the convention. Any man who may be chosen will be supported in the ensuing contest by a united and enthusiastic party, and there need be no fear of the result. The Conservative party was never stronger than it is at this moment in the cause that it has to uphold. In the past 15 years there has been no more urgent reason than there is to-day for unity, in maintaining the trade policy that has been the country's mainstay amid universal depression, and when the Opposition is so fiercely pressing for measures both revolutionary and disastrous in tendency. It is a fight, when it comes, which will call forth the unity and strength of the Conservative party, as it should be evoked at a great and threatening crisis. The National Policy will be assailed with unexampled fury by those who will stick at no tariff resolution in hunger and thirst for office. And it will behoove every man who believes in the policy instituted by Sir John Macdonald, and maintained under each successive premiership since his time, to gird on his armor. Had Sir John Carling remained in the field, we have the fullest confidence that under his lead the campain would be victorious as so often of yore. There were special reasons why he should have been a candidate again, as referred to by several of the speakers at the meeting, namely, to teach his assailants that he had not been lessened in any degree in the regard of his former friends and supporters, and as a defiance to those who have sought to put a stain upon his character. But Sir John no doubt has felt that he has had that share of public honors with which a man ought to be content, and fully earned a respite from the field of action, which brings toil, anxiety and expense, along with honor and opportunity to serve his country and his fellow-citizens. He can point with just pride to a record unsurpassed in the history of the Canadian Parliament for creditable achievement in every branch of the work which he has had control of, and retires with unblemished fame as an honorable and upright politician.

SOME OTHER DAY.

There are wonderful things we are going to do,
Some other day;
And harbors we hope to drift into
Some other day;
With folded arms and oars that trail,
We watch and wait for a favoring gale
To fill the folds of an idle sail
Some other day.

We know we must toil if ever we win
Some other day.
But we say to ourselves there's time to begin
Some other day;
And so, deferring, we loiter on,
Until at last we find withdrawn
The strength of the hope we leaned upon
Some other day.

And when we are old and our race is run,
Some other day.
We fret for the things that might have been done
Some other day.
We trace the path that leads us where
The beckoning hand of grim dispair
Leads us yonder, out of here,
Some other day.

France has decided to prohibit the importation of American cattle.

The remains of Frederick Douglass, the colored orator, were buried in Washington yesterday.

Baron Aberdare, at one time Imperial Home Secretary, and later Lord President of the Council, is dead. He was seventy nine years of age.

Emperor William, accompanied by his large staff, left Berlin last evening for Vienna to attend the funeral of Field Marshal Archduke Albrecht, of Austria.

The Khedive received Lord Cromer, the British plenipotentiary, in Cairo yesterday, and assured him that he did not intend making any changes in the Egyptian Ministry.

Mr. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, announced in the Legislature yesterday afternoon that a commission would be appointed to enquire into and report on the Toronto University troubles.

Harry Hayward, who is charged with the murder of Catharine Ging at Minneapolis, again testified in his own behalf yesterday. It is expected that his cross examination will be reached today.

Mr. Asquith, the Home Secretary, yesterday introduced the Welsh Disestablishment bill in the House of Commons, and announced that the measure was identical with the bill introduced last year.

The fourth annual convention of the Methodist Young People's Societies of Ontario opened yesterday afternoon in Elm street Methodist church, Toronto. The convention will conclude tomorrow evening.

Sir Charles H. Tupper yesterday, in an interview, denounced the regulations made by the United States authorities for harassing Canada sealers in Behring Sea, and assented to by the British Government.

Yesterday evening, by the explosion of a boiler in the Aerated Water Works of the J. J. McLaughlin Company, Toronto, the building and machinery were totally wrecked, and damage amounting to several thousands of dollars done.

It is reported in St. Petersburg that Count Tolstoi, the Russian novelist and social reformer, is the author of the Liberal manifesto recently issued against the Czar's declaration that he would uphold autocracy as earnestly as his late father.

At a special meeting of the Toronto City Council, held yesterday afternoon, it was decided to refuse to make an agreement with the aqueduct promoters until they submitted fuller information regarding the scheme to the City Engineer.

No credence is placed in Ottawa official circles in the statement that Secretary Gresham has abandoned the idea of pressing upon the United States Congress the payment of $425,000 asked as damages for injuries inflicted upon Canadian sealers.

The Rev. J. W. Annis, pastor of the Queen's avenue Methodist church, London, Ont., which was burned to the ground a few weeks ago, was stricken by cerebral paralysis at an early hour on Monday, and his recovery is not expected. Mr. Annis has ranked as one of the most brilliant orators in the Methodist denomination.

Judgment was delivered at Osgoode hall on Monday, by Mr. Justice Ferguson and Mr. Justice Rose, in the West Durham Provincial election petition, which was tried last week at Bowmanville. The judgment was that the charge of kidnapping John Yarrow, by Cowan, had been proved, but that the respondent, Mr. W. H. Reid, M. P. P., had no knowledge of what was being done by Cowan, who was his agent. The petition was dismissed with costs.

At a conference of representatives of the Dominion and Ontario Governments and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company yesterday, Father Paradis explained his repatriation scheme for bringing 4,000 French-Canadian settlers from Northern Michigan to the Nipissing district. The Commissioner of Crown Lands stated that the Government wanted more settlers in Ontario but the proposed scheme was one of securing them on very favorable terms.

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association of Hamilton yesterday it was stated that Mr. John Crerar's opinion against the claim that Sunday cars could be stopped in Hamilton had been declared by Mr. Mowat to be based on an incorrect interpretation of the law. The Premier of Ontario had so informed a deputation who had waited upon him, and he had further said that even if Mr. Crerar's opinion were correct he would amend the law so that cars might be prevented from running on Sunday.

Weaver's Strike.

CLINTON, Mass., Feb. 26. — At the meeting of the strikers in the town hall this evening, a women's union was formed 300 of the 1000 present joining. It was finally decided to return to work tomorrow morning and accept the cut down until May 1, when, if times and gingham market are better, an advance to the old price will be demanded, and if this is not given then a strike will be inaugurated.

A GREAT MEASURE.

The Proposed Asquith Bill Is Pregnant with Vast Reforms.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—In the Commons, Mr. Asquith said the bill proposed that the church should cease to be established in Wales and Monmouth in January, 1897; that provision be made for the formation of a representative body made up from the clergy and laity, to which power should be given to legislate on ecclesiastical matters; that the church should be transferred to this body and the glebes to the parish districts and town councils, and that other property voted in the church be placed in the hands of a commission of clergymen who should receive their present emoluments during their lives, the income from the remainder of property to be used in the erection and maintenance of hospitals, dispensaries and convalescent homes, to provide nurses for the sick or for laborers' dwellings, allotments and for technical education. The opponents of the bill, he said, might accuse them of attempting to secularise religion, but the Government held that the purposes mentioned were truly religious, and that there would be no profanation of a fund dedicated to pious uses in applying it to the relief of the suffering. The bill was conceived in an honest desire to satisfy a genuine demand of a vast mass of the Welsh, with the least possible detriment to the interests of the church.

Influenza's Ravages.

LONDON, Feb. 26—The Daily News correspondent in Berlin says: "Influenza is spreading rapidly here, and already has more victims than in any year since 1889. The majority of the sufferers are adults. Serious lung disease have followed the influenza in many cases."

Louise Michel Ill.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Louis Michel, the little anarchist agitator, has been very ill for several days. She is not expected to recover.

Captain Drowned.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Capt. Stewart, of the British steamer Duchess of Roxburghe, which arrived at Liverpool from Galveston and Norfolk yesterday, was drowned during the voyage.

George Howell Wins the Case.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—In the Assize Court yesterday the jury returned a verdict for George Howell, who was sued by Michael Curran for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections.

Brooklyn's Fine City Hall Damaged.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 26.—Fire did $50,000 damage to the City hall this morning. The tower surmounting the building was destroyed.

Ran the Blockade.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—Captain F. J. Hansford arrived here on Saturday, having been successful in running the blockade and delivering to the Japanese $4,000,000 worth of arms and ammunition. This is Hansford's third experience of this kind, he having been to Chili when the war with Peru was on and to Brazil with munitions of war for the Da Gama rebels. A British syndicate sent out the munitions, having bought the steamer Metapeda. She sailed from Hamburg. Captain Hansford was given sealed instructions to land his cargo at Yokuska, a naval station not far from Yokohama. When within a few days of his destination the Metapeda was sighted by the Chinese. A fleet of torpedo boats was sent after her, but she outsailed them.

JOLY WILL RUN.

The French-Canadian Protestant to Contest Portneuf.

Special to the Times.

[illegible], Feb. 26.—John Valentine Ellis, the Grit editor of St. John, N.B., who suffered himself to be imprisoned for principle's sake, and because he had published a most defamatory article, will be asked to run in the Liberal interest in the city of St. John. Chas. W. Weldon will run in the County of St. John for the Liberals. The present members are Messrs. Hazen and Chesley, Conservatives.

Rev. Dr. McLeod, of Fredericton, has decided that he won't run in the prohibition interest. Mr. McLeod thinks the fact of his being a minister has to do with the matter.

Our dear and patriotic friend, Alex McNeill, M.P. for North Bruce, has decided that if the Government offer him a Senatorship he will accept. If this comes to pass the Hon. J. C. Patterson may run in North Bruce. The McCarthy Patron candidate will be H. T. Potts and the Liberal nominee Dr. Bonnar.

Hon. H. G. Joly de Lotbiniere has decided to run in Portneuf, in the Quebec interest. Delisle, the present Conservative member, beat his Liberal opponent by 150 in 1891.

ROSEBERY WORSE.

The British Premier is in a Serious Condition —He has the Grip.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The condition of Lord Rosebery this morning is not favorable. He has passed a sleepless night and there is an increase of weakness.

The Premier was confined to his bed on Saturday last owing to a sharp attack of influenza which is now epidemic throughout London.

The American Trade Absolutely Destroyed by the Order.

Special to the Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Speaking of the decree issued by the French Government prohibiting the importation of American cattle Nelson Morris, the well-known packer said: "We shipped $18,000,000 worth of cattle and cattle product to France alone last year and this great trade is absolutely destroyed by the order of the German and Belgium embargo has been to reduce the price of cattle of the classes shipped to these countries by $10 a head and this French edict will even more injuriously affect prices."

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

The Weather.

Probs.—Moderate winds; fine; turning milder.

Velney Ashford Jailed.

Velney Ashford, a native of Cobourg, who was arrested in Hawaii for taking part in the recent rebellion has been sentenced to one year's imprisonment and $1,000 fine. On account of ill-health the hard labor was remitted.

The Excursions.

A crowd of citizens numbering fully 200 took the 7.25 C.P.R. for Toronto yesterday morning. A large number accompanied the hockeyists in the afternoon on the G.T.R. Probably 500 people took advantage of the low rates and visited the Queen City.

Both Were Fined.

In the Police Court yesterday Charles Pogue and a man named Smythe were charged with being disorderly by fighting. Both were disfigured as the result of the encounter. The magistrate administered a soothing balm to each in the shape of a fine of $5 and costs, which was paid.

Did You?

See the white maple bedroom suites in A. Clegg's window, native maple, bird's-eye maple panels, pretty design, very attractive and not very expensive. A full line of bedroom suites at all prices. Parlor suites, couches, and everything in furniture at bottom prices. A. Clegg, 427 George street. d&w20

The Instalment Due.

She never sings the old, old songs
She shrieked in days of yore;
She never thumps the keyboard now
Until her thumbs are sore.
Alas! upon the latest grand,
She never more will play,
She failed with the instalments and
They've taken it away.

The Norwood Races.

The Norwood races take place today. A number of the sporting fraternity of the town will attend. The principal event is the free for all, the entries of which are as follows: "Harry B" owned by H. LeBrun; "Numedian," owned by R. J. Hewitt, Brighton; "Demand," owned by Mr. Nattrass, Millbrook; "Golden Bow," owned by M. Dawson; "Chimes E," owned by D. Robinson Toronto.

Elves Gets Six Months.

The clothes wringer swindler, James Elves, was sent to the central prison for six months yesterday morning by the police magistrate. Elves' mode of operations has been published. Three of his victims in Peterborough gave evidence against him in court, and a clear case of fraud was made out. As an excuse for his conduct Elves told the magistrate that he was unable to read or write and didn't know to whom to return the wringers.

Nearly Broke the Window.

A horse, belonging to a farmer and attached to a cutter, created some excitement on George street, yesterday afternoon, at the corner of George and Simcoe streets. The animal became fractious and tried to run away, but at the time the street was full of vehicles and there wasn't an opening for a dash. The horse began to rear and back up and got on to the sidewalk in front of Kingan & Allen's hardware store. It would undoubtedly have backed through one of the large plate-glass windows had not several spectators seized the cutter. Even then the window came very nearly being broken.

Charged With Mal-Practice.

A writ has been issued in the High Court of Justice against Dr. Mallory, registrar of East Northumberland, for $20,000 for alleged mal-practice. The plaintiff Charles Boney, of the Township of Cramahe, had his fingers caught in the threshing machine in October last, and consulted Dr. Mallory for medical advice. The doctor amputated the hand, which operation the plaintiff claims was not necessary, and claims that several fingers and the hand could have been saved if proper medical treatment had been given. The action will come up for trial at the Spring Assizes next month. Mr. W. L. Payne, of Colborne, is acting for the plaintiff, McCarthy, Osler & Co., of Toronto, for defendant.

Twenty Thousand Roses.

There are nearly 20,000 rose trees in bloom now at Dunlop's conservatories Bloor-st. west, Toronto. Visitors are always well come. Mr. Dunlop is proud of his establishment and takes pleasure in speaking of its beauties. He ships them by mail and express to all parts of Canada, and as these orders are filled direct from the trees, he guarantees them to arrive in good condition. Sale room, 445 Yonge-st., and 5 King street west.

THE PETERBORO'S WON.

THEY DEFEAT THE GRANITES OF TORONTO BY 7 GOALS TO 6.

It Was a Close and Hotly Contested Game, the Scores Being Made Almost Alternately—The Home Boys Put Up a Splendid Game.

Peterborough's hockey team defeated the Granites in Toronto last night, in the junior championship finals, in a score of 7 goals to 6.

The boys and a large number of their friends left for Toronto yesterday afternoon on the G.T.R. and reached the Queen City in time to take supper at the Palmer House. They left here a little down-hearted on account of the indisposition of Montgomery, who was afraid he would not be able to play. He went along, however, and when the puck was faced was in his accustomed position.

It was the most hotly contested game of the season and was witnessed by a large crowd of the citizens of the Queen City. The games were scored almost alternately and it was a toss-up all through as to which team would win. The Peterborough's playing was a revelation to the Granites. Their combination work and staying powers was wonderful and in the end scored for them the victory.

Playing commenced shortly after 8 o'clock. When time was up the score stood 6 to 6. The excitement at this moment was at fever heat. Both teams fought hard for victory, which fell to Peterborough. The summary of the games is as follows:

Majority for Peterborough 1.

The returns were received by game in town and bulletined in the Palace restaurant and the Pullman hotel. The result was received with cheers by interested groups which had gathered to learn the returns.

Quite a few citizens who took in the excursion returned by the G.T.R. special early this morning. They report that the boys put up a splendid game.

BROKE HIS BACK.

Awful Accident to a Little Son of Mr. A. Smith.

The five year old little son of Mr. A. Smith, of Romain street, met with an awful accident on Monday.

The little fellow was coming down stairs when he slipped and fell the entire flight falling heavily on his back.

Medical assistance was immediately secured and an investigation revealed the deplorable fact that the little fellow's back was broken. He has been suffering intensely since, and the hopes of his recovery are very slight.

EAST RIDING NOMINATION.

Mr. John Lang, Ex-M. P. Unanimously Chosen by the Liberals.

The Reformers of East Peterborough met in convention at Norwood yesterday afternoon for the purpose of nominating a candidate to contest that riding in the coming elections. It was a very large and representative gathering, fully 200 delegates being present from all parts of the riding. Mr. John Lang, Ex-M.P., of Otonabee, was the unanimous choice of the convention. The nominee made a brief speech in which he said he was confident of the results of the campaign.

Among the nominations made were Mr. Alex. Nevins, Haliburton; Messrs. James and William Drummond, Otonabee; Mr. John Brown, Belmont; Mr. E. Hawthorne, Reeve of Dummer, and Messrs. John Finlay and Thomas Rork, of Norwood.

POPULAR ICE SPORTS.

A Curling Match at the Rink—General News of the Sports.

On the rink last night skip Rutherford defeated skip Ferguson as follows:

Rinks.	Rinks.
Col. Roger	G. Geroux
E. H. D. Hall	J. Tucker
D. Davidson	R. B. Rogers
C. Rutherford, sk.18	W. Ferguson, skip.10

Mr. J. B. Pentland has won the point competition, winning 48 out of a possible 72.

There will probably be two classes of racing cyclists in Canada next season. Mr. George H. Orr, of the Wanderers, has given notice of the necessary amendments to the C. W. A. by-laws to provide for the separation of riders under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association into two classes.

TO TENNESSEE.

Next June Will Methodists Travel to a Great International Conference.

Historic Chattanooga in Tennessee will see next June the greatest Methodist gathering on the continent. It will be the International Conference of Epworth leagues of all branches of Methodism in North America.

Rev. Dr. Steel, of Nashville, Tenn., general secretary of the Epworth League, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, appeared at the convention of the Methodist Young People of Ontario on yesterday to invite the Canadian Methodists to the Chattanooga gathering. The trip will take 29 hours from Toronto and cost $20.

About 500 delegates are present at the conference and Elm street Methodist church is crowded. All the Methodist ministers of Toronto and about 100 from outside are in attendance.

The various papers on yesterday's section of the program were read. Much importance is laid on the work of the league during and after revivals.

This afternoon the convention will divide up into rallies. W. T. R. Preston will be chairman of the literary rally where reading habits and their relation to spiritual work will be discussed. Rev. G. E. Cindinnen will preside at the Christian endeavor rally; F. W. Daily, of London, at the missionary rally, and Rev. J. E. Lancley at the social rally.

LEFT ALL ALONE.

Husband and Daughters Leave Her in Solitude and Want.

Mrs. Deacon, who lives on Douro street, Ashburnham, thinks that fate has used her very, very cruelly, and she wants the public to know it.

At present she is living alone in a little brick house at the foot of the big hill that frowns down upon the village. Three or four large maple trees stand in front of the house, and bare of their leaves look like grim sentinels guarding the hearthstone and warding off invading monsters. Years ago little children played beneath the foliaged branches, but like the foliage they have disappeared. The warm sunshine of spring and the gentle rains of April will woo the bursting leaves back to the parent stem, but not so with the children. They have gone never to return and the old trees will bud with the freshness of spring and furnish roseate tints in the autumn sunlight, many a time, 'tis likely, before the shadows of the departed again fall athwart the threshold of this home.

For in September last, according to Mrs. Deacon's story, her husband and her three daughters picked up and got out. They took the furniture at night time, and hied themselves away to Toronto where they are now living at 123 McCaul street, leaving her, who for long years performed well the sacred duties of wife and mother, alone.

It is the old, old story, says the deserted wife. Twenty years ago, when the children were young, a dissension arose between her and Mr. Deacon. It was of such a nature that time could not efface it, and as the years rolled on it assumed larger dimensions, more serious aspects, and the breach widened into a gulf that all the ties of marriage could not bridge. As the children grew older they took part in it, and finally sided with their father. Still they lived on in outward peace, but with inward discord, until the culminating point was reached, when daughters and father went to Toronto.

And now Mrs. Deacon is left alone. She says no provision, whatever, was made for her support. She has the house and the land, but both are heavily mortgaged. There is very little furniture left, and what there is is disappearing piece by piece to buy bread for the board and coal for the hearth.

And what is to become of her she does not know. She has done nothing wrong, she says, and why should she be deserted, alone and penniless? A sad case, surely, but one of thousands in this cruel, unfeeling world.

THE Y. M. C. A. DEBT.

The New Directors Have $400 to Carry—Annual Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association the following officers were elected:

President—J. W. Bennett (re-elected.)
First Vice-President—Mr. Alf. Parker.
Second Vice-President—Mr. Grover.
Treasurer—Mr. Madill (re-elected.)

The president, Messrs. Roger, Parker and Grover were appointed to act as Executive Committee.

The following gentlemen were appointed for directors: Messrs. Bennett, Parker, Moore, Madill, Croly, V. Best, P. H. Green, F. Mason, Sheriff Hall, W. F. Nelson, G. M. Roger, W. J. Green, B. F. Ackerman, R. J. Kidd, M. A. Morrison, F. Moore, T. H. Martin, F. W. Gladman, H. P. Kennedy, A. E. Dixon, J. S. Knapman, T. McFadden, E. A. Peck, Lamb, Stanley and M. W. Matchett.

During 1894 the Association was "on the down grade." Without a secretary or workers ground was lost, financial support failed, and it enters 1895's work with a burden of $400 debt, but a foundation is being laid for a good work among the young men of Peterborough. We are realizing, says the secretary, the true aim of the Young Men's Christian Association in saving men, and look forward to a grand work this year, closing with a balance on the right side.

At the close of the meeting the Board of Directors had a short conference. Twenty new members were received. With the exception of the finances the directors felt much encouraged with the present state of the work.

A Metal Breadboard
THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check they become impossible to thoroughly clean them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

THE HYAMS ON TRIAL.

E. W. H. AYLESWORTH A FORMER EMPLOYEE ON THE STAND.

He Tells How He, Wells and Miss Latimer Went to Work for the Prisoner—District Attorney Wellman of New York on the Case.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—As Magistrate Denison took his place on the Police Court bench this morning Harry Place Hyams, one of the twin brothers accused of murdering young Wells two years ago on Colborne street, pushed his way up through the staircase leading to the prisoners' dock and sat down beside half a dozen rather respectable looking drunks. His brother Dallas stood below for want of accommodation at the side of his counterpart.

In a few minutes the dock was cleared of all save the accused murderers who appeared dressed just the same as they did a week ago, one wearing a fur collar on his coat, but there was not one person out of fifty in the crowded court-room who knew one from the other.

A FAMOUS N.Y. LAWYER.

When the case which promises to be one of the most famous in the history of the country was reached those in the court room were on the tip toe of expectancy. His Worship announced that he was ready to proceed but a delay was granted for a few minutes as W. G. Murdoch, T. W. Horn, Francis L. Wellman and Attorney W. W. Gouch, the last two named of New York, had not yet arrived.

The crowd appeared excited during this interval and the prisoners moved about nervously in the dock. Magistrate Denison left the bench in the meantime and when he returned the proceedings were further delayed as E. F. B. Johnston, Q.C., an associate counsel for the prisoners, had been detained.

WANTED WELLMAN'S ASSISTANCE.

Mr. Johnston soon came, however, and after His Worship had told the prisoners to stand up and had read to them the accusation, Mr. Johnston said that he desired to make application to have associated with Mr. Murdoch, Mr. Horne and himself in the case, Francis L. Wellman, ex-assistant District Attorney of New York, who had been the family solicitor of the prisoners, who knew considerable about the case and who was familiar with the career of the two brothers for many years past. Mr. Johnston thought that Mr. Wellman could be granted this favor as a courtesy by the Magistrate.

THE REQUEST NOT GRANTED.

His Worship said that he was afraid that could not be done as it would be setting a precedent, which he did not wish to do. He would rather, if anything extraordinary were to be done, have it done by a judge of one of the higher courts. There were, he observed, a number of lawyers about home.

The preliminary hearing was then proceeded with, and A. W. Barber, Manager of the C. P. R. Telegraph Company, was the first witness called. He produced certain telegrams, but as they had not been sent by either of the prisoners, his Worship held that they were inadmissible.

AYLESWORTH IN THE BOX.

G. E. W. H. Aylesworth, brother-in-law of Mrs. Harry Hyams, then took the stand and told how he came to enter the employ of the Hyams brothers, as bookkeeper, three years ago this month. Wells, the victim of the tragedy, was the first to secure a position with the Hyams at 11 King street west, and he got it almost immediately after young Wells, the witness and Martha Wells entered into a contract to pay the Hyams brothers $1,000 each. In a short time the three of them were at work for the prisoners.

The duty of the witness was to copy Dun Wiman's sheets and to do what was called reporting. Either one or the other of the prisoners would give him a number of names of citizens and tell the witness to go and find out as much as he possibly could about them. He subsequently discovered that many of the sheets that he had copied were either torn up or burned.

SAW ENVELOPES BURNED.

After describing the work done by Martha and Willie Wells and himself the witness was shown a large quantity of envelopes and folios which he said had been written upon by the deceased and Miss Latimer, of the warehouse. Miss Latimer came to work in the warehouse on Colborne street, and when there was engaged in addressing envelopes and writing sheets. She also went out on messages.

They were much dissatisfied, and the prisoners told them that they were thinking about taking a summer resort hotel at Fort Erie and would give Wells and the witness $10 per week to run it.

STACK OF BILLS A FOOT HIGH.

The witness and Wells made an arrangement to meet the prisoners in the office subsequently and have a talk over the repayment of the money. When they went in a stack of bills a foot high was on the counter, large bills on top and smaller ones down lower. The accused told the brother-in-law that they were going into the auction business on Colborne street. They would need some help, and offered to increase the salaries of Wells and Aylesworth to $10 and $15 a week respectively provided they did not draw out their thousand dollars each.

This was agreed to, and the witness was satisfied that Wells never got his money back as he was killed about three weeks afterwards. Aylesworth could swear that Harry Hyams told Wells on the Saturday before the Monday that he was killed that he would pay back the $1,000 that had been borrowed.

POLICIES FOR $50,000.

The witness said Harry Hyams wanted himself and Wells to take out policies for $50,000, but Aylesworth would have nothing to do with it as he said he could not pay the premiums. Wells said the same. At a subsequent interview H. P. Hyams suggested that Willie Wells take out a policy in his name and Hyams would pay him $2,500 to carry it. Witness was at the Colborne street warehouse on Saturday, January 14, 1893, and heard Harry Hyams tell Willie Wells that he would give him his $1,000 on Monday when deceased and Hyams were to have gone to Pickering. A telegram was sent to that effect, said the witness, but this evidence was not admitted until Local Manager Hogarth of of the G. N. W. Telegraph Co., had been sworn concerning certain despatches sent to one Jones at Pickering.

TWO TELEGRAMS PRODUCED.

Two telegrams were produced as received at the Pickering office, and Aylesworth on being recalled testified that the first which stated that Hyams and the deceased would be in Whitby was sent by Willie Wells, and the second saying "We cannot come until tomorrow," was sent by Harry Hyams. The last one was sent on January 10th because Hyams couldn't get the money for Willie to buy the farm with.

On Sunday, Jan. 15th, the day before the tragedy, Harry Hyams called at witness' house, 213 Mutual street, and left a list of nine names with instructions for the witness to get a report on them before coming to work on the following morning.

PHOTOGRAPHS PUT IN.

Photographs of the hoist and the building in which the tragedy occurred were here put in as exhibits by the Crown.

During the time that Aylesworth was in the warehouse he never knew the elevator weight to be unhooked.

The big iron elevator weight was now produced and identified by the witness. He was satisfied that the hook which is at present on the weight is the same as was in use the day of the tragedy.

Mr. Johnson wanted witness to swear positively that this was the same hook, but Aylesworth would not do so.

HARRY'S HANDS BLEEDING.

Harry Hyams came to witness' house about 1 o'clock on January 16, 1893, with his hands bleeding. Witness said: "Harry, what's the matter?" He said: "We've had an accident, a bad one, Willie's hurt." Aylesworth, after being told that deceased was at King's, went out and learned from the doctor that the body was at the undertaker's. After viewing the body witness went to the warehouse on Colborne street, which was deserted. There he found a hammer and chisel (both of which were produced in court) and took them with him. Aylesworth then went back home, and Harry Hyams was still there, but said that he didn't know how the accident occurred, as neither he nor his brother were in the warehouse at the time. The day after the funeral, however, Harry Hyams told him a different story. He said that Harry said:

THE DIFFERENT STORY HE TOLD.

"I was at the barber shop and went to the warehouse. Down stairs I found my brother Dallas, who had fainted, and I sent him home in a hack. He said the blood got on his hands from lifting the big weight off Willie's head in the cellar. After removing the body to witness' house and from there to Oshawa graveyard, the remains were interred in Aylesworth's plot. He saw the body exhumed and the skull is now in possession of Drs. Caven and Johnson, who conducted the post-mortem examination."

Witness knew that the insurance money on Wells' life had been paid and Harry Hyams got it all except about $4,000.

MRS. AYLESWORTH GOT $4,700.

In the course of cross-examination M. Johnson elicited the fact that Aylesworth's wife received $4,700 of the $30,000 insurance on Well's life. The witness said in answer to persistent questions by Mr. Johnson that he certainly did feel very strongly against the Hyams brothers. On the day of the funeral he became suspicious that everything was not right.

He had been looking up witnesses for the Crown and went to Montreal on that mission. Witness had been pursuing the prisoners ever since his suspicion against them was aroused the day after the funeral and he had during the past few weeks been assisting the Crown so far as possible in getting up evidence.

EVIDENCE OUTSIDE OF CANADA.

Aylesworth said he had been in at least six places in the pursuit of this work, but there was a vigorous kick from Crown Attorney Curry when Lawyer Johnson wanted to know if witness had gone outside of Canada.

"I object to that," said Mr. Curry, "They want to know all we know, and I won't have it."

Mr. Johnson—"Oh, we know that already," and then the crowd laughed at the expense of the Crown.

Aylesworth did finally admit that he had been in the United States on this business.

BLIND AND USELESS WORK.

While Aylesworth would not swear that none of the envelopes and report sheets had been sent out he felt satisfied that the clerks in the office were engaged in a blind and useless work. He stated that after the death of Wells he remained in the employ of the accused for about three months.

"With all these suspicions rankling in your mind still you kept on working for them, did you?"

"Yes, I kept on working and always on the look out for something that might throw light on the tragedy."

GOULD WEDDING FEASTS.

COUNT DE CASTELLANE'S FAREWELL TO BACHELORDOM.

Disastrous Explosion in Brooklyn—Admiral Ting's Bravery—His Orders Overruled by His Cowardly Captains.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The festivities for the wedding of Miss Anna Gould and Count de Castellane began yesterday. The Count gave a farewell bachelor dinner at the Waldorf hotel last evening to more than 20 persons, among whom were a number of his intimate New York friends. Miss Anna Gould was being entertained at the same time at a dinner given in her honor by Mrs. James Abercrombie Burden, of 908 Fifth avenue. The dinner given by the Count was a formal affair. It was served in the Astor state dining room of the Waldorf.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary Miss Anna Gould will remain a Protestant and she will give a dinner to her bridesmaids on Saturday.

FRANCOIS COPPEE DYING.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Post will tomorrow print a despatch from Paris saying that Francois Coppee, the author and poet, is suffering from inflammation of the lungs and it is feared is dying.

EVERETT'S MOTION.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The debate in the Commons on Mr. Everett's motion continued until midnight, when the motion was agreed to without a division.

EXPLOSION IN BROOKLYN.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 27.—An explosion from an unknown cause occurred at 4.30 this afternoon in a two story frame building at 25 to 31 Johnson avenue, and as a result John Flaha, aged 68 was killed and three other persons were injured. The building was formerly used as a dye factory. The explosion was immediately followed by a rumbling noise and the dust flew in all directions and some of the heavy timbers were thrown into the middle of the street. One of them was forced into the side of an adjoining building, making a hole three feet wide. The explosion was heard 20 blocks away. Several persons were injured.

TING A HERO.

LONDON, Feq. 27.—The Times tomorrow will print a despatch from Chee-Foo saying that documents found at Wei Hai Wei show that Admiral Ting wisely decided to dismantle the mainland forts as a source of weakness, but he was overruled. He afterwards determined to die fighting, but his captains refused to support him.

WATTERS SENT TO GAOL.

EX-COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS SENTENCED FOR ONE YEAR.

A Plea of Technical Guilt Was Entered and the Charges Were Not Gone Into—Justice Sure and Swift.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—The case of the Crown against T. J. Watters, late assistant commissioner of customs, was called in the Police court this morning and adjourned until three, it being understood that Mr. Watters would then plead technically guilty to the five charges laid against him and elected to be tried summarily. At three o'clock the Police court was crowded. Messrs. D. O'Connor, Q.C., W. D. Hogg, Q.C., and J. H. Ritchie, Q.C., appeared for the Crown, and B. B. Osler, Q.C., and Alex. Ferguson for the defendant Watters. Mr. Osler stated that with great hesitation he had advised his client to plead guilty technically. A large amount of money passed through his hands and, morally speaking, the fact of funds remaining in his hands was only negligence. The books had been carefully gone over and every cent paid back. Mr. Watters had filled three offices and had had a promise of a parliamentary grant which had not passed. This left him a reasonable expectation of more funds and had made him use funds rightly belonging to the Crown and Mr. Watters by pleading guilty was entitled to consideration.

His Worship in giving sentence said that he had taken into consideration that Mr. Ritchie had been acting for the Minister of Justice, and as the matter had already been looked into it was not necessary for him to do so. As a warning for the future conduct of officers in a position of public trust he sentenced the prisoner to one year's imprisonment in the Carleton county gaol without labor.

BIG BLAZE AT HALIFAX.

SHEDS, WHARVES AND ELEVATORS GO UP IN FLAMES.

The Loss Is Fully Half a Million—The Dominion Government Loses Heavily—Two Firemen Badly Injured.

Special to the Times.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 27.—It was a fierce fire which started just after 10 o'clock this morning in the large shed at the outer end of Deepwater wharf. A strong north wind was blowing which fanned the flames into fury, and for a short time the shed, wharf and elevator shute were doomed. Part of the contents of the shed on the upper part of the wharf were removed, but the contents of the outer shed were nearly all lost. It consisted of merchandise from and for steamers, the steamer Indian having discharged a quantity of goods last night for points west.

FLAMES SPREAD QUICKLY.

The flames ran quickly along the elevator floe and communicated with the elevator, which was soon a mass of flames. Its sides and roof were covered with slates, and the heat caused these to fly about in a dangerous manner, driving the firemen from the scene.

The Sarmatian and other houses on the opposite side of Water street caught fire from the embers, and in a short time fully a dozen houses were ablaze. The conflagration is almost beyond control. Fortunately there were no steamers at Deepwater terminus at the time. The steamer Indrain left early this morning.

The Dartmouth fire department have come to the assistance of the Halifax brigade. The Western Union wires have been destroyed by the firemen.

THE FIRE UNDER CONTROL.

Later—The fire is now under control. The chief loss sustained is by the Dominion Government, whose property around the deepwater terminus is pretty well destroyed. The big immigration and other sheds are gone and the long wharf is burned.

The grain elevator and the elevator shute are also burned. The block of wooden buildings opposite the elevator are badly scorched but only one or two smaller ones were destroyed.

No firemen were killed, but two were badly injured. The total loss will be over half a million, nearly the whole of which will be sustained by the Dominion Government, on which there is no insurance.

Captain and Engineer of the Crathie Give Evidence.

Special to the Times

LOWESTOFT, Feb 27.—Mr. Greenham said he burned paper in the boat in order to attract attention of the colliding vessel and expressed his belief that if the Crathie had kept a good lookout it would have been possible for them to have seen it burning. Capt. Gordon, commander of the Crathie, took the stand and testified that when the wreckage was cleared away from the Crathie's bows the ship was turned around to go after the Elbe. This was about three quarters of an hour after the collision, but the Elbe had steamed away.

Both the captain and the chief engineer of the Crathie deposed that the vessel's telegraph was frozen at the time of the collision. Orders were given to the lookout man who shouted them to the engineer. The engineer admitted that he had not looked to see whether the telegraph was all right and the vessel sailed from Rotterdam. On the conclusion of the engineer's testimony the coroner intimated that the inquest would be adjourned until March 20th. The solicitor for the captain of the Crathie objected to this process and asked that the jury render a verdict. It would be cruel, he said, to let the matter hang fire over the captain's head for a month. The coroner opposed the rendering of a verdict at the present time and the inquest was adjourned.

17 YEARS A POPE.

Leo XIII, to Celebrate the Anniversary of His Coronation.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Morning today publishes a despatch from Rome saying that the Pope will officiate on Sunday next at a special service in the Sistine chapel in celebration of the 17th anniversary of his coronation.

On Saturday next his Holiness will receive the congratulations of the notabilities at Rome, and through the diplomatic corps the congratulations of the Governments having representatives at the Vatican.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 28, 1895.

Good morning!

The Canadian Pacific, while not being able to pay a dividend from its profits, has kept up its efficient service, and has not drawn on its capital, which is much more than most railroad companies can say these hard times.

The President of the doleful republic of Hawaii hesitates to hang the sentenced "rebels" He possibly thinks that the executions might afford a bad precedent if certain rebels against her nibs the ham-colored queen should happen to be called to account. The thought possibly gives Dole a pain in the neck.

The nomination of Mr. Lang indicates that the Liberals of East Peterborough are determined to carry the riding if at all possible. Mr. Long is undoubtedly the strongest man that can be put in the field by that party, and if the Conservatives intend to have any show they will require to get their war paint on withhut delay.

Mr. W. R. Callaway, the genial and popular district passenger agent of the C. P.R., has scriptural authority for requiring payment of full fares by clergymen. Here are some of his proofs. "Thou shalt not pass," Hebrews xx, 18; "Suffer no man to pass," Judges iii., 28; "None snall ever pass," Isaiah xxxiv., 10; "This generation shall not pass," Mark xiii., 30; "Though they roar yet they cannot pass," Jeremiah v., 22; "So they paid their fare and went," Jonah i., 3.

The report of the royal commission on the liquor traffic will fill 4,500 printed pages—4,500 printed pages that no man will ever read! It is a very great pity that the government should not have given a decisive and an emphatic "No," to the demands of the political prohibitionists, instead of spending a large sum of the people's money on a commission which will report in 4,500 pages that the people who are in favor of prohibition are in favor of it, while those who are opposed to prohibition are against it.

D'Alton McCarthy is being spoken of as a likely man to be appointed one of the proposed colonial judges on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The salary attached to the post is in the neighborhood of $25,000 a year, which is comfortable enough as salaries go nowadays, and the work is not arduous. But Mr. McCarthy is currently reported to make as much if not more than that out of the practice of his profession in Canada, and he is a good man to have in the country. The politicians would no doubt say farewell to him with tears in their eyes gladly enough, but we are not all politicians.

Many far-fetched excuses are being made by those who favor letting the affairs of the town run along in the same old rut. The latest was presented by Councillor Mason, when he urged the retention of the present solicitor on the ground that he had once saved the Corporation a lot of money by beating the Grand Junction Railway in the highest court in the British Empire in an action which it brought to recover $75,000. If Mr. Edwards' friends are no better posted than is this councillor, their arguments are likely to do their client more harm than good. In the first place the town never had any interest in the suit brought by Mr. Bickford, of the Grand Junction Railway, against the county. While it is true that the county was successful, everybody knows that the whole credit is due to Mr. Michael Sanderson, Reeve of Smith, Mr. John Maloney, Reeve of Douro, Mr. Pearce and one or two others. The best evidence of this is the fact that the county soon after dismissed Mr. Edwards, and have not since employed him.

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK.

According to the Mail's Ottawa correspondent the story sent out from Ottawa that no sessional preparations were being made is untrue, the work of getting ready for the session having gone on hand in hand with the preparation of the voters lists and the ministerial stumping tour. As the Mail is the party mouthpiece its utterances can be looked upon as being official, and from this point of view it is clear that the party is still in a state of uncertainty as to whether it is best to hold a session first and an election afterwards or do the other thing. It is not likely that the country is suffering any great annoyance or inconvenience from the uncertainty. The politicians are about the only people who are keenly interested in the question. The masses of people do not care a button which course is followed, but they are not likely to be impressed by the wisdom and brain power of the men at the helm who are showing such pitiful indecision of character in the matter. In the meantime another ministerial stumping tour is being arranged, and it is understood that the decision in regard to the holding of an election or a session will not be made until the appeal of the Manitoba Roman Catholics for remedial legislation has been heard. The party would give its eye teeth to have Sir John Macdonald or Sir John Thompson back again at this juncture.

POLITICAL UNCERTAINTY ACROSS THE LINES.

In default of any stiffening up of the old Democratic party, the leaders of thought across the border are begining to confess to a belief that the next Presidential election will be fought on quite new lines and by quite new organizations. The Boston Herald (Clevelandite) has a significant article on "the condition of the parties," in which it contends that "it is plain that there must be, a new alignment of parties if there is to be any contest at all for the next presidency." It fully reviews the condition of the Democracy and argues that it was never so near annihilation as now—and this with nothing but disunion in its own ranks. Under present conditions, the Herald says, that the Republicans must "carry the next presidency, whatever they do;" and adds that there can be no genuine contest for the presidency until the parties are ranged against each other on the currency issue.

Simultaneously with this comes the news from Washington that a grand silver movement is on foot, which purposes to make the Presidental campaign in '96 a fight on the silver issue. Lecturers are to be sent out, we are told, and the country educated on the question. Mr. Bland, the silver leader in the present House of Representatives, is quoted as having said:

"It (the silver issue) ought to have been the principal issue two years ago, but we were then just emerging from the shadow of sectionalism and the Force Bill, and it was no time to divide on financial questions. But that time has now arrived, and the next contest will be waged between the free coinage men and those who oppose that proposition. Party lines will be obliterated, and this will be the one thing which will divide the voters of the country."

The significance of the simultaneous appearance of these two political conditions will not be lost on thinking men—one of the great parties in a state of disunion and collapse, and the rise of a new issue which offers a job to a new party. It may be that we in the gallery will have more to see on the stage of American politics in '96 than the rivalries between Republican leaders.

HARWOOD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Our village is very quiet at present, owing to the bad roads.

Messrs. T. W. Dixon and T. Whaley have returned home from Cashe Bay, when they have been working for the past four or five months.

We are very sorry to say we have been receiving our mail very irregularly for the past few weeks. Mr. Bair, our mail carrier, will have to do better or there will be a change.

We are sorry to hear our old friend, Mr. Harstone, is giving up business; he has been our general merchant here for the past 30 years.

It is rumored that Mr. W. J. Edmison is going to open up the Phœnix Hotel. It is the most convenient house in our village and will be run in first-class style should Mr. Edmison take hold of the business for Bill is a hustler.

INTERESTING TO LADIES
SOMETHING FOR NOTHING
CAN YOU GET IT?

Many who thought little of it [illegible] were well pleased to get a good sized glass jar or tin of bulky alum, ammonia or other powerful but injurious mixture, for use as Baking Powder, at much less, perhaps even half the price, of the really good article, overlooking the fact that the amount thus APPARENTLY saved is of small moment in comparison with the real but not always immediately observed inevitable injury following the use of these articles. If in addition to the seemingly low prices, there is attached some showy gift or prize to give the impression of extra value, the inferior or hurtful nature of the powder is lost sight of in the expectation (a vain one) of getting "something for nothing."

"LADIES' HOME" and "HAPPY THOUGHT" on the other hand, can always be depended on as articles of first class quality, and such as can be AND ARE guaranteed not only free from everything in the slightest degree injurious, but invariably sure, satisfactory and economical.

BEBBINGTON, FORMERLY OF OTTAWA, DESERTS HIS WIFE

To Marry a Rich Girl—His Crooked Career in Buffalo—Charged with Embezzlement—He Seeks Asylum in Dakota With His Lovelace.

Special to the Times

BUFFALO, Feb. 27.—Frederick L. Bebbington, an investment agent, was married in Ottawa in 1887 to a prominent society lady in that city. Business not being prosperous in Canada, the family removed to this city, where Bebbington opened an office, and began to cut a swath of considerable width in local society. There was some trouble a couple of years ago when Mrs. Bebbington attempted to have deported a young girl named "Flossie" Shepherd, whom she had adopted in Canada, but who did not turn out to the satisfaction of the Bebbingtons. She lacked the moral tone necessary for a family of such religious pretensions, Bebbington being a trustee of Ashbury church and Mrs. Bebbington an earnest moral reformer and a member in nearly all the women's societies and charitable workers' associations of the city. Now Mrs. Bebbington has brought an action for divorce from Frederick, and Fred, according to the complainant in the action, is a fugitive, being afraid to return lest he shall be prosecuted for the embezzlement of certain moneys entrusted to him. Mr. Bebbington went to England last October on business, and there met Miss Aries, the daughter of a wealthy merchant of London, and

and she with him. She came to this country to meet him, as he represented to her, so it is said, that he had an action for divorce pending, and would marry her as soon as he was free to do so under the laws of this country. The complainant alleges that the parties lived together at the Imperial hotel, Niagara Falls, Ont., and in New York City, and further states that since Nov. 1st last Bebbington has been once in this city. It was after nightfall Dec. 17th. He then returned to Niagara Falls, where he and Miss Aries remained until Jan. 19th, when they went to Detroit, Mich. On Feb. 10th he wrote a letter from Detroit to a man in this city named Murray. It is known that Bebbington is now in Sioux Falls, N.D., and it is believed Miss Aries is with him. He has gone there for the purpose of securing a divorce. Mrs. Bebbington's lawyer had an interview with Miss Aries last month, in which that lady frankly told him that Mr. Bebbington had gone west to get a divorce and that as soon as this was accomplished, she and Bebbington would sail for London and would be married at her home there. This consummation, she expected, would be reached about April 1st. Miss Aries has a brother in Baltimore, Md., A well-to-do business man.

FOR REMEDIAL LEGISLATION.

Plea of the Catholic Minority in Manitoba on the Schools Question.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 27.—This morning argument in the plea of the Catholic minority for remedial legislation was begun before the Government. Mr. J. S. Ewart, Q. C., represented the Catholics of Manitoba, and D'Alton McCarthy, Q. C., opposed the petition on behalf of the Government of that province. The absent Ministers were Mr. Costigan and Senator Ferguson.

Among the prominent people present were Rev. Fathers Allard, of St. Boniface; Chenier, of Winnipeg; ex Lieutenant-Governor Royal, Montreal; Rev. Chevrier and Senator Bernier, of Winnipeg. Premier Bowell presided.

Mr. McCarthy opened the case by announcing that the Manitoba Government had no opportunity to prepare their case and accordingly asked for an adjournment prefacing his remarks with a letter from the Attorney-General, who said, "I protest most vigorously against the the absurdly short notice which has been given."

Mr. Ewart did not oppose the adjournment, but wanted to know how long his opponents wanted to prepare their case.

Mr. McCarthy inferred that it might be enlarged until after the Legislature adjourns, to which Mr. Ewart emphatically protested against. Continuing, Mr. Ewart said there had been too much delay already, as the minority were suffering from the absence of schools in many places in consequence. He claimed the Government had ample time to prepare a case, and further stated that their counsel had made a study of it for years.

Mr. McCarthy then said no particular postponement was requested by the Attorney General, looking upon the question as one of grave importance. The Government meant to resist any remedial legislation. That no friction might occur, the Attorney General desired to show why such legislation should not be introduced, for which reason a more minute knowledge of the case would be required.

Mr. McCarthy hoped no personalities would be introduced in argument, as he was interested only in a professional capacity.

In reply to Hon. Mr. Ives, Mr. McCarthy said a short adjournment would do to enable him to communicate with Attorney-General Sifton.

Mr. Howell intimated that the Government would not think of adjourning till after a session. Then a private caucus was held with closed doors and a telegram was later sent to Winnipeg, the reply to which will be considered at another meeting this afternoon.

George Howell Wins the Case.

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—In the Assize Court yesterday the jury returned a verdict for George Howell, who was sued by Michael Curran for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections.

IN A JUNGLE STORM.

You Hear It, but Can't See It Until It Can Also Be Felt.

People who have never been in a jungle talk of the sky as a painter talks of the horizon or a seafaring man of the offing—as if when you wanted to see it you only need use your eyes. But in the jungle you don't see the sky—at least you only see a few scraggy patches of it overhead through the openings in the twigs and leaves. Neither do you feel the wind blowing, nor get burned or dazzled by the sun, nor even see that luminary, except by momentary glimpses about midday, from which it follows that a jungleman does not usually pretend to be weatherwise. If he does, he is even a greater humbug than the rest of the weather prophets. On the afternoon about which we are speaking I remember setting forth on my walk in the still glow of the tropical calm and wondering rather at the intense stillness of the surrounding forest. Then, the air grew cooler, and the green of the foliage in front seemed to deepen, and presently there was a sound as of a giant waterfall in the distance. Waterfalls do not, however, grow louder every second, whereas the noise in front did so. Then there was a loud, angry growl, as of a dozen lions. A minute more, and the whole jungle began to roar as if 50 squadrons of heavy cavalry were coming up at a gallop. Then came a drop of rain and a peal of thunder which seemed to make the world stop.

Then the storm began. The sky above darkened; the trees clattered; the brushwood beneath hissed and bowed itself. A deluge of raindrops blotted out the narrow view. Down it came, soaking through the densest leaves under which one fled for refuge, striking the grass and sand with millions of dull thuds, dashing furiously against the leaves as if they were so many hostile shields, streaking the air with innumerable perpendicular lines and hurling itself down with the force of bullets.

In such a downpour one may as well walk and get wet as stand still and get wet. Unfortunately one did not know where to walk to. The "circumbendibus system" presupposes the fact that the wagon wheels and bullock tracks can be seen and noted, but when the cart track is no longer a cart track, but "all turned to rushing waters," such tracks cannot be seen, and unless you have a pocket compass you may as well try to fly as to get back to where you came from. When one reads of travelers lost in the backwoods, they always steer by the sun—and probably very badly—but when there is no sun what are you to do?—Siam Free Press.

CHRONIC CHILLINESS.

The Remedy Suggested Is Outdoor Exercise at All Seasons.

How some people suffer in winter! They are constantly having chills. A feeling of cold water trickling down the back or some local stagnation of blood, with altered nervous sensations, is experienced. The hands, feet, nose or ears are especially likely to give inconvenience. Such individuals cannot get warm even in bed, and, as a consequence, often suffer from insomnia, for sleeplessness is often caused by cold feet. Many such conditions arise from the fear of taking outdoor exercise, because the weather is too cold. Hence the circulation is not kept going, and the blood, vitiated by the close, impure air of the house, has no chance offered it of being allowed to purify itself. The foulest river or stream of water is rendered pure by exposure to the air as it comes along, and after a run of a few miles becomes fit for consumption. Why, then, will delicate people deny the stream of life an opportunity to purify itself as it courses through their veins? Here is the secret of how to keep warm in winter—outdoor exercise in pure air.

Many individuals mistake the feeling of cold for "catarrh." But feeling cold and "taking a cold" are different things. A shiver from exposure to cold—indeed a half frozen condition—is not in itself likely to end in a so called "cold," so long as the exposure has been in the open air. But we hold that by breathing the impure air of badly ventilated rooms a chill may be very easily contracted that will end in a "cold."

In cold weather we distinctly recommend the ordinarily healthy man or woman to try the effect of outdoor exercise, especially when the feeling is strong that it is too cold to go out of doors. Exercise under such circumstances will usually act as a tonic to the whole frame and brace up the nervous system, the special function of which is to regulate the heat of the body. The skin should be freely exposed to the air before dressing in the morning, and after the morning washing or cold tepid bath rub the body into a glow with a coarse towel, and you will be very nearly cold and waterproof.—Philadelphia Times.

Studying to Please.

He had been particularly fortunate in his business and felt in the mood for tipping the waiters at his hotel rather liberally. As a result, every time he entered the dining room half a dozen willing waiters rushed for him like football players in a big match. This came to be annoying after awhile, so he called the head waiter to him and said:

"Now, see here, I don't want all the waiters in the place bothering me every time I get something to eat. Settle on one man and let him attend to my wants."

Then his eye roamed around at the assembled attendants, and without any particular reason he said:

"There, let that fellow with a wart on his nose look out for me."

So it was settled, and for some time the designated waiter was on hand. One day, however, the man with money found another attendant at his table. He motioned to the head waiter.

"Didn't I tell you to let me have the waiter with a wart on his nose?" he demanded.

"Yes, sah, but this one will be better, sah. He has two warts on his nose."—Philadelphia Press.

Life Worth Living.

Those people who say that life is not worth living find it so because they do not go to work to make it worth living. Why does sadness overpower them? Is it so much harder for them than others to see sin and suffering? What right have they to add their weight to the world's burdens? Is it a sign of intellect to be cowardly? And do these people not dream that the spiritual power which makes such an intellectual condition impossible is vastly superior to any power that the intellect alone can attain?—Elizabeth Peabody.

Plaintive.

"A human life," said the sentimental young man, "is a poem—tragic, comic, sentimental, as the case may be."

"Yes," sighed Miss Passeigh, "and so many of us are rejected manuscripts."—Washington Star.

A Wonderfully Liberal Offer!

Five Weeks for 10 cents.

A Trial Subscription for

THE NEW YORK LEDGER

Just to convince everybody before subscribing of the true merits of our beautifully illustrated journal, we will send the New York Ledger for

FIVE WEEKS FOR 10 CENTS.

These five numbers will contain the opening chapters of Paul Kemble's powerful and interesting story, "The Killules of Killell," also the opening chapters (with synopsis) of Seward W. Hopkin's story of the great strike in the Pennsylvania coal mines, "On a Criminal Charge." The other continued stories in these numbers are by Hall Caine and Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth. In addition to the continued stories, these five numbers of the New York Ledger, contain short stories poems, articles on the topics of the day, a brilliant editorial page, a children's column, a correspondence and scientific department, a Woman's World page devoted to everything of interest to women including a pattern department worth to any woman many, many times the price of the Ledger. The following is a partial list of the authors who contribute to these five numbers:

Hall Caine, Seward W. Hopkins, Paul Kemble, Effie Adelaide Rowlands, Elizabeth Olmis, Mary Lowe Dickenson, Amy Randolph, Hon. Henry L. Dawes, Mary Kyle Dallas, Prof. W. W. Kennedy, William Elliott Griffis, D. D., Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, Oscar Wilde, W. Thompson and others.

This vast quantity of delightful reading matter of interest to all members of the family goes to make the New York Ledger the most perfect National Family Journal ever offered to the American people. Your Postmaster, your Subscription Agent or your Newsdealer will receive your 10c. for us for your Trial Subscription and send us the money—or you can send the money direct to us. Try it, and judge for yourself what a great paper the New York Ledger is.

NOT THE SAME GIRL.

But She "Was Glad" Time Hadn't Made Any Changes In Her.

The following anecdote has both a comical and pathetic side. What a long time 50 years is in the life of a human being! And how far apart, how unlike in tastes, feelings, opinions and habits men and women can become who in childhood slept under the same roof, attended the same school and dreamed of nothing but of being friends forever! A gentleman whose "courtly manners" were mentioned in all the newspapers when he died, a few years after this incident, fancied in his old age that he wished to see his boyhood friends and most of all the fair young girl whose love long years before he almost, but not quite, had dared to ask.

He forgot country manners and called at half past 11 in the forenoon. He was asked to walk "right out into the kitchen," as there was no fire anywhere else.

His early admiration stood before him in a worn calico dress, no collar and a wide and not faultlessly clean apron. Her half combed grizzly hair was tucked under a rusty black lace cap trimmed with faded purple ribbon. She had no teeth, and a huge pair of silver bowed spectacles were pushed up on her brown, wrinkled forehead.

Fifty-two years before they had parted with a kiss, and he had been intending to meet her with one, and thus bridge the chasm of years, but he changed his mind when through his gold bowed glasses he took in the picture before him.

Wiping her hands on her apron, she gave him a hearty handshake and bade him "sit right down," adding that they were "killing hogs and trying up lard," but if he would "stay to dinner" she would have "a fire put in the front room."

Of course he declined the invitation, and for his own comfort as well as for his convenience he determined to make his call short. Still he must say something complimentary before leaving, but what could he say?

Just then the lard boiled over, and with a shrill cry to her daughter to "come quick" the woman jumped up and caught hold of the kettle. The smoke and perfume were in themselves far from agreeable, but they were grateful to the caller, as they gave him a chance for the desired compliment.

"Your step has lost none of its elasticity since the evening we sauntered together along the banks of the R," he said, "while this"—holding out his gold headed cane—"is needed to support mine."

"Yes," answered the woman, "I'm as spry as a kitten, and I have thought ever since you've been here that I was glad enough time hadn't changed me as it has you."—Youth's Companion.

COOKS AND THEIR DRINKS.

Why the Boss of the Kitchen Goes on an Occasional Spree.

"You ask if she is a drinking woman, ma'am?" said the proprietor of a restaurant to a lady who had inquired about the character of a cook. "Why, yes, to be sure, she has her sprees, but she always sobers up enough to do her work well. I gave her a recommendation as a first class cook, and I didn't think it necessary to say anything about her drinking, for they nearly all drink. They need it to keep themselves up, because they swallow so much hot air. We give them spirits on principle, and other houses do the same."

Various reasons have been given for the intemperance of this class. It is said to be due to the tasting of sauces, etc., flavored with spirits, to the lack of appetite which the constant sight and odor of cooking produce, and the consequent necessity for stimulants to give strength to continue work, or to the exhaustion of the system by the high temperature, which produces a craving for spirits. Whatever the cause, it is pitiable to know that many contract habits that blight their lives and entail a miserable old age.

Women who cook for small families and whose work is not exhausting are not specially prone to the excessive use of stimulants. The trouble is with those who in hotels, restaurants, large boarding houses, etc., are in the kitchen and over the stove from morning to night. Undoubtedly there are temperate women among these, but many are intemperate.—New York Tribune.

Netting Malay Tapirs.

Colonel Charles B. Hicks has arrived in this city after spending two years in the orient. The colonel has been hunting tigers and wild boars with the rajah of Jadpour, and has also been pursuing tapirs in the Malay peninsula. He said:

"In starting out after tapirs we take a flat bottomed boat, with a bamboo house on it, lights in the stern and equipped with a crew of natives. Thus provided the hunter sails up the river. Now, there is a leaf of a peculiar tree in Malay, which, if burned, emits an odor which can be smelled for miles and miles. The smell draws the tapirs. So no tapir hunter omits to keep a supply of these leaves.

"We were supplied with nets, and whenever a tapir was caught in a net we had a lively time. The tapir would flounder and fight. It took the best skill of the natives to hold him till he could be towed to land and secured. However, the natives such as we employed had had so much experience that they managed the work well.

"If we ever came unexpectedly upon old and young tapirs together, the old ones would immediately kill their young to prevent their capture."—San Francisco Examiner.

Keep the Feet Warm.

It is the great secret of health, I firmly believe, to keep one's feet warm and dry and then not to coddle oneself otherwise. So far as I have been able to observe, the feet require different treatment from all the rest of the body. Woolen is good for the feet, but beware of it elsewhere. Father Kneipp is undoubtedly right in forbidding flannel next the skin in the form of underclothing. It makes most people tender and gives some of them the fidgets. But the writer has seen no people who have adopted woolen stockings who have not been glad of them, all this on the supposition, of course, that people do wear shoes, for if they could discard these utterly and go barefooted, as they do in Woerishofen, no doubt that would be better still.—Boston Transcript.

Buried In Her Best Bonnet.

Being buried in a sealskin sack is not half so droll as the Boston woman ordering she should wear a certain particularly becoming bonnet on her last journey, an order, too, that was religiously carried out by her family when the time came for burial.—Boston Journal.

A Postal Order Is Safer.

WHAT A PERSON WEIGHS.

It Is Difficult to Determine Exactly, Even With Seemingly Accurate Scales.

Many persons weigh themselves frequently and imagine that they know their weight. Sweet illusion! Nothing is more difficult than to know one's weight exactly, even with access to first class scales. We hear one say, "I am making flesh; I have increased two pounds," and another, "I am getting into form; I weigh three pounds less," but while I do not wish to make myself disagreeable, especially to people who keep account of their weight, I am convinced that in most of such cases there is really not an ounce of gain or loss, or if there is any variation it is not what the scales record.

A lady goes into a store, weighs herself and receives a card, Aug. 15, 130 pounds. She goes to the country, and returning after several months weighs herself again in the same store and receives a card, on which she finds inscribed, Nov. 22, 136 pounds. She has gained six pounds in three months and ascribes it to the change, the fresh air, etc. She feels happy—good weight, good health. But is this increase real? In nine cases out of ten it is only apparent, due mainly to wearing more or heavier clothes, thicker boots, etc.

The ordinary methods for determining variations in weight give absolutely fallacious results. The causes which influence weight are numerous and rarely taken into consideration. For example, was the weight taken immediately after breakfast or long after, or following active exercise attended with free perspiration? Again, many people, even educated people, have extraordinary ideas as to what affects the weight of the body. Have you not been asked more than once if it is true that one weighs less after meals than before? As if every additional weight in the pocket or the stomach were not necessarily revealed by the balance. The fact is that people are in the habit of weighing themselves, for good luck, one day after breakfast, another day before dinner, another day with heavy clothes on, another day when it rains, etc. Add to this the errors of the scales, and who can say that he knows exactly his own weight or range of variation?

One's weight is like a mobile expression—it changes every instant. The study of this matter is nevertheless of considerable physiological and hygienic importance, a fact of which I have become thoroughly convinced in the course of more than ten years' investigation of the subject.

The inaccuracies of ordinary balances, such as one finds in hotels, at railway stations, etc., determined me to make a portable balance to weigh 100 kilograms (220 pounds), and to be exact to within an ounce, and since then I have weighed myself regularly every day at the same hour in the morning and under identical conditions, and today I possess a record of five years of experiments conducted with the utmost precision.

Every day when weighing myself I record the barometric and hygrometric variations, the temperature and the dinner menu of the day. These experiments have convinced me more than ever that our weight is in a perpetual state of fluctuation. After eliminating the errors of the instrument our weight varies, subject to innumerable influences. At breakfast on a warm day one loses more than 150 grams an hour. How, then, are you to arrive at your true weight when it is subject to such incessant fluctuations? When we remember that 70 per cent of our body is water, there is little difficulty in understanding that our weight must vary continually with the transpiration of moisture; moreover, it varies with the pressure of the atmosphere.

The mere variations in atmospheric humidity suffice to account for a change of more than a pound, and other causes may suffice to account for another pound. The person who weighs only at intervals may infer from this that he is growing lighter or heavier, but the conclusion is unwarranted. There are some people, on the other hand, who will tell you their weight never changes. This, too, is a error; it is constantly fluctuating. The fault is generally that the scales used do not record variations of a pound or so. For ordinary purposes this is of no consequence, but for recording changes of weight in sickness it is of very serious moment.

The scales are not without their importance in medical practice, especially with infants. The weight of an infant increases in definite proportion during the first weeks of life, and there can be no departure from this regularity of increase without impairment of health. For adult persons, too, it is good to consult the scales, for they are the barometer of health. Any sudden increase of weight, amounting to a pound or so in a day, indicates a tendency to disease. It is evidence of health when the weight does not fluctuate more than three or four ounces from day to day. Great fluctuation implies functional derangement.—Dr. Parville in Correspondent.

The Blue Heron.

Wherever the blue heron was he always looked as if he might be going to do something presently. Even now perhaps the weather was on his mind, but at this moment—well, there are times when a heron's strength is to stand still. Certainly he seemed in no danger of overeating. A cracker told me that the major made an excellent dish if killed in the full of the moon. The bird, he said, feeds mostly at night and fares best with the moon to help him.

If the reader would dine off roast blue heron, therefore, as I hope I never shall, let him mind the lunar phases. But think of the gastronomic ups and downs of a bird that is fat and lean by turns 12 times a year! Possibly my informant overstated the case, but in any event I would trust the major to bear himself like a philosopher. If there is any one of God's creatures that can wait for what he wants, it must be the great blue heron.—"Florida Sketch Book."

The Difference.

The other night, when the streets were crowded, a dog running along the sidewalk stopped out on a crossing, and "pointing" his muzzle in the air began to howl. It was worth while noticing the way in which different people who heard the animal were effected. One woman stopped and began to wring her hands. "I know that my brother is dead. I'm just as sure of it as if I had seen him. I never know a dog to howl that you did not hear of death."

"Won't somebody shoot that brute!" exclaimed a man, looking for a convenient rock to throw at the offender.

The policeman on the beat had started for the dog when a young lady who was crossing the street stopped and patted the animal on the head. "Poor doggy," she said in a sympathetic voice, "you're lost, aren't you? Poor fellow!" and the dog stopped howling and trotted along after his new friend.—Boston Herald.

BOGUS LORD IN A CELL.

Capture of an Expert Swindler in New York.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 26.—Word is received here that the individual who successfully swindled several prominent Detroiters last fall, while posing as "Lord" Claude Hamilton, is under arrest in New York. He is charged with stealing two gold watches and two dimond rings from Mrs. Evans of 1674 Broadway, and also leaving an unpaid board bill of $190. The Brooklyn authorities were also looking for him on a charge of swindling Arthur Lillie, a prominent citizen who had befriended him. Several of the hotels in New York and Brooklyn claim that "Hamilton" imposed upon them under the name of "Lord" Robert Benton. They also claim that his real name is Sydney Bebton. He is locked up at the Tombs.

COLLISION IN A MINE SHAFT.

Five Hundred Miners Imprisoned Hundreds of Feet Under the Earth.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Cages collided in the shaft of the Whitewood colliery at Normanton, near Leeds, to day. The shaft was damaged so badly that it has been impossible to bring up any of the 500 miners working below at the time of the accident. Much anxiety is felt for their safety.

The Watters Case.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—In the Police Court this morning Assistant Commissioner of Customs, T. J. Watters, of this city, appeared on the seven charges of embezzling Government funds. By consent of counsel, an adjournment was made until 2:30, when the evidence in the case will be heard for the first time. There is a chance of the case being finished today.

AFTER BURGLARS.

The Accomplice of a Thieving Gang Traced to Chicago.

Special to the Times.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Feb. 27.—Deputy Sheriff O'Brien, who was shot by the Briswold bank burglars is very low and slight hopes are entertained of his recovery. The authorities have identified the wounded robber who was caught. He is Cad Maguire of Omaha. The robber who shot O'Brien and then escaped is Chas. O'Connor, also of Omaha. The authorities are hot on O'Connor's trial and expect to get him. The postage stamps stolen were shipped to a man named Davis in Chicago. Davis, who is a South Water street saloon keeper, was arrested tonight in Chicago, together with his bartender John Walmartin shortly after the valise was delivered at the saloon. The valise was found to contain four large packages of stamps worth a little over $600. Davis is well-known to the police.

Death of Mr. Meredith.

MONTREAL, Feb. 27.—Mr. W. H. Meredith, a prominent broker of this city, and director of the Bank of Montreal, died this afternoon from pneumonia. Mr. Meredith was a son of the late Sir William Collis Meredith, Chief Justice, of Queen's Bench, Quebec, and second cousin to Chief Justice Meredith of Toronto, and of Mr. H. V. Meredith, local manager of the Bank of Montreal, and of Mr. Chas. Meredith, broker.

A MYSTERIOUS CASE.

Robert Hewson's Death May Have Resulted from Suicide or Robbery.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The inquest in the case of Robert Hewson, who was run over by a C. P. R. engine on Monday night, near William street, was begun on Tuesday afternoon. It was found that in addition to his watch and money having been taken, a ring which he wore was missing. Two brothers of deceased, William Hewson, of Jarvis, and Frank, yardmaster at Windsor, have arrived. Hewson's friends believe he was the victim of foul play, while some suggest the theory of suicide. He went to the home of his fiancee, Miss Ada A. Tulett, daughter of Mr. Thomas Tulett, of No. 672 Elias street, on Monday evening, and remained until about a quarter or 20 minutes after 11 o'clock, when he started for his boarding-house. It was only about half an hour afterwards that his mangled remains were discovered on the railway track. The body was taken to Hagersville today for burial. The inquest was adjourned until 7.30 o'clock tomorrow night.

WILL THE KING RESIGN?

Rumor that Sweden's Monarch is Tired of Ruling Norway.

Special to the Times.

CHRISTIANA, Norway, Feb. 27.—Will the King resign? Such is the rumor that has startled people here today. The friction between Norway and Sweden has become so great that some settlement of the matter must be arranged.

It is rumored that King Oscar contemplates a solution of the crisis by ceding the throne of Norway to his son Oscar, who renounced all claims to the throne of Sweden on marrying a lady not of royal birth.

PUT POISON IN THE BUTTER.

It Was for Rats, but by Mistake Got on Rev. Mr. Sweet's Dinner Table.

Special to the Times.

PASSAIC, Feb. 27.—Rev. William I Sweet of the First Congregational Church, has rats in his cellar and they have been growing fat on the contents of his butter tub.

Mr. Sweet got tired of paying 25 cents a pound for butter to feed to them, so he bought some poison and mixed it with part of the contents of the tub. He forgot to tell the servant what he had done. She put the poisoned butter in a dish and placed it on the table at dinner.

Within an hour the whole family was violently ill. Two doctors were in attendance all the afternoon and succeeded in bringing every one around all right.

BRAMPTON'S CRAZY FAMILY.

The Two Elder McClure Brothers to be Sent to Toronto Asylum.

Special to The Times.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 27.—David and Samuel McClure, two of the family who went crazy over religion, were examined on Monday afternoon. They will be sent to the Toronto Asylum. John, the younger brother, has almost fully recovered and is at liberty. The mother has also recovered and is at home.

The daughters are being treated by Dr. C. Y. Moore. They are making satisfactory improvement and will no doubt ere long regain their senses.

PROTEST AGAINST HARTY.

Bribery and Corruption are the Charges that are Preferred.

Special to the Times.

KINGSTON, Feb. 27.—A protest against the return of Hon. Wm. Harty, M.P.P., Minister of Public Works, was entered this morning by the Conservative Association.

The usual list of bribery and corruption embraces a long list.

The Conservatives feel sure of unseating Mr. Harty, as they claim they have sound proof to justify their claims.

Carolina Tragedy.

RALEIGH, N.C., Feb. 27.—A special to the Caucasian says there was a tragedy in the town of Lexington yesterday, which grew out of business rivalry. Dr. Lee Payne, jr., and Mr. Baxter Shemwell are both interested in the drug business. Shemwell had written to some companies that the medical examinations made by Payne were not properly made. This engendered bad feeling. Payne's father undertook to make peace and was talking with Shemwell. But the older Payne lost his temper and called Shemwell a liar. Both pulled revolvers and the shots startled young Payne, who also opened fire on Shemwell, who returned it. Later in the day Shemwell shot and killed the elder Payne on the street. Shemwell was then arrested.

A Supposed Murder Case.

HAWKESBURY, Ont., Feb. 27.—Frank Seave, French-Canadian, who disappeared from here 14 years ago, returned last November, but is thought to have been murdered as he disappeared. A man named Burrass was last seen with him. The latter subsequently displayed a plentitude of money and then disappeared. The officers are looking for Burrass.

Killed at Maidstone Cross.

WINDSOR, Ont., Feb. 27.—John Gilkinson, a well-known citizen of Kingsville, was instantly killed by a Michigan Central train at Maidstone Cross early this morning. He purchased a buggy in Windsor and was taking it home at the time.

UPRISING IN CUBA.

Towns Attacked by Insurgents and Ruined.

Special to the Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 27.—The latest advices from Cuba confirm the reports of a general uprising of the patriots there. The movement is simultaneous at seven different points on the island, and the insurgents have attacked eight or ten interior towns.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Secretary Gresham received a cablegram today from Consul General Ramon Williams at Havana, announcing that a state of affairs, practically amounting to martial law had been proclaimed in Cuba. It appears from the despatch that the proclamation of the Governor General has caused great excitement throughout the island where no general revolution exists, as it was the first notice the people received that the Government was taking means to prevent disturbances in the section from spreading.

CAPE COLONY'S NEW RULER.

Sir Hercules Robinson Succeeds Sir Henry Brougham Loch.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Sir Hercules Robinson, formerly Governor of Hong Kong, Ceylon, New South Wales, New Zealand and of the Cape of Good Hope, holding the latter position from 1880 to 1888, has been appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Cape Colony and High Commissioner for South Africa in succession to Sir Henry Brougham Loch.

Sir Henry was recently recalled from Cape Colony on account of his long standing differences of opinion with the premier, the Hon. Cecil Rhodes.

A GREAT CONFLAGRATION.

The Heart of the Factory District in Chicago in Flames.

Special to the Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—A fire which has caused half a million dollars' damage began here this morning in the Kastner building, 245 South Jefferson street and spread throughout the west side factory district.

In panics which occurred in several of the large factories, numbers of people were killed.

An Actress Marries a General.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Jane Stuart Halohan, who until four weeks ago was a member of Richard Mansfield's company and who resigned while the company was in Washington, was married last night to Gen. Auer, of Milwaukee.

Yesterday at Galt the two local curling clubs played an eight rink match to settle the question of superiority. At the conclusion of the game the score showed the Galt club to have defeated the Galt Granites by 157 to 112.

At the Simcoe street rink, London yesterday, four rinks from the London and Forest City clubs played a match for the Malahide medal, which has been held for 25 years by the former club. The Forest City won this time, however, by 69 to 67.

Mrs. J. Coleman-Drayton, of Trenton, yesterday began a cross suit for divorce against her husband on the ground of desertion.

Oakville Gold Cure.

Parties desiring information concerning this well-known institution, will be cheerfully supplied by Mr. A. H. Mellville, agent, Peterborough.

Reception to Rev. Mr. Andrews.

A reception was tendered to Rev. Mr. Andrews, the new minister in charge of the South Ward Mission on Tuesday night. The Mission was nicely decorated and a pleasant time was spent. Addresses were made by Revs. Davidson, Hedley and Kendrick.

Hockey Match Tonight.

Lindsay's hockey team will arrive in town this afternoon, and tonight on the rink will play the Volts. The puck will be faced at 9 o'clock. The Volts' team will be:—Goal, Kelly; point, Knowles; cover point, Wilgar; forwards, Hicks, Thorne, Hall and Claxton.

A Seven Days' Thaw.

A genuine thaw set in yesterday, and corporation laborers were out in force on the streets delving into the depths of the accumulated ice and snow. The Meteorological Bureau, Toronto, predicts a seven days' thaw, which, if true, will break up sleighing and render the roads in bad condition.

Racing at Norwood.

The fine weather drew a large crowd to the Norwood races yesterday. Peterborough was well represented. The principal event, the free-for-all was won by "Demand," owned by R. J. Hewitt, of Brighton. "Harry B" took second money. In the 2.40 race of the preceding day, "Harry B" won the race in excellent time.

Cobourg Poultry Show.

The Poultry and Pet Stock Association hold their first annual exhibition in the Victoria Opera House, Cobourg commencing today and lasting four days. The event promises to be a grand success. Stock will be exhibited from Peterborough, Hamilton, Guelph, Toronto and many of the adjoining towns and villages.

An "Old Hoss" Sale.

The Canadian Express Company will sell at auction in Toronto, next month, a large amount of unclaimed express freight. A long list of names of parties, to whom the goods were consigned has been published. The following parties in Peterborough are on the list: R. Drury, J. M. Green, W. Hunt, Micklestone & Co., Waller & Co., George Lochner.

The Business World.

The stock of Foster & Pender, carpet dealers, will be sold on March 7th by auction. W. H. Flaherty, liquor dealer; H. Preston, broker, and J. F. Anderson, grocer, have been burned out at Niagara Falls. J. J. Grills, of Markham, has assigned to C. N. Sutherland. J. & N. Lemmy, of Toronto township, has assigned to W. Newhouse.

Death of Mrs W. J. Paterson.

Mrs. Walter J. Paterson, of Ashburnham, died very suddenly yesterday morning. The preceding day she was apparently enjoying excellent health, and only on that night complained of feeling unwell. A physician was called in, but did not think Mrs. Paterson was seriously indisposed. Yesterday morning she felt just about the same. Mr. Paterson called on the doctor, who still thought nothing serious was the matter. At noon Mrs. Paterson was dead, the immediate cause being heart failure. It was a terrible shock to the grief stricken husband and relatives, who have the sympathy of the community. Deceased was a daughter of Mr. Frank Hamilton, of Ashburnham. In 1886 she was married to Mr. Paterson. She was 29 years of age and a consistent member of Mark street Methodist church. Three little children are left motherless by the sad event. The funeral will take place tomorrow at 2 o'clock p.m. to the Little Lake cemetery.

HOW THEY PLAYED.

The Peterboro's Put Up the Best Game the Queen City Has Seen.

The simplest, closest and most exciting game of hockey that has been played in Toronto this year was that which took place last night at the Granite Rink between the Granite II. and the Peterboroughs, the respective champions of the western and eastern groups of the junior O.H.A. series. From the time the signal was given for the game to commence until the same sibilant sound announced its termination the 800 spectators were kept keyed up to a fever heat of excitement.

The Granite supporters were out in force and there was a large contingent of Peterborough rooters on hand to cheer their boys to victory. The best hockey was seen in the first half, the game towards the close degenerating into an exhibition of the Donnybrook kind. Peterborough's combination play was exceptionally good and was far superior to that of the Toronto team, which was a little ragged. In the initial half, the teams scored alternately and at the intermission the score was 5 all. Peterborough did not do any dallying on the resumption of play, but rushed the gypsum down on the Granite goal, where it stayed for a few moments but not for long as the Granite defence was doing some strong work. The play was soon transferred to the other end, but nothing resulted. Adams, the cover point of the Peterborough team, made a long lift down the rink at this juncture, straight on the goal, and caught Livingstone, the Granite goalkeeper, napping, and the eastern team added one to their score. During the progress of the twelfth game no less than three of the Granite players and one of the visitors were sent to the fence for foul play. The Granites had all the best of the game, and after eight minutes' play evened up the score on a shot by Dixon. The last game was the longest of the match, and it was scored just at the call of time by Phelan of the Peterboroughs, who made a fine rush down the centre of the rink. There some talk after the game, on the part of the Granite team, of protesting the match on the ground that the full time was not played, but it is probable that nothing will be done in the matter. Johnning and Ewing for home team scintillated brilliantly, while Adams at cover point and Phelan and King on the rush line were the bright particular stars of the Peterboroughs.—Globe.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. James S. Christie, of Hastings, was in town yesterday.

Mr. R. M. Caldwell, of Belleville, is at the Snowden House.

Mr. Richard Land, returned to town yesterday after spending some months among friends in Algoma.

Death of Miss Flood.

The death of Miss Ellen Elizabeth Flood, fifth daughter of Mr. John Flood, of Ennismore, occurred on Tuesday. Deceased young lady was attacked with influenza about a year ago, and never fully recovered from it. No immediate serious results were feared until a few weeks ago when most alarming symptoms set in. The best medical aid was called in, but despite all that could be done she passed away quietly to rest. Deceased was known and beloved by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who will sympathize with the bereaved family in their sad affliction. The funeral will leave the family residence at 8.30 this morning and proceed to the Roman Catholic church, Ennismore, thence to the Chemong cemetery where interment will take place.

Will Come Up Again.

At a meeting of the Committee on Appointments the opinion of the Committee was unanimous that the report which was before the special council meeting, had not been disposed of, and was still properly before the council. In view of this the Committee did not think it was necessary to send in a further report, but at the meeting of the council on Monday night the adoption of the pending report will be moved.

WITH THE SPORTS.

The Huron Football Club will meet for organization on Thursday evening.

At Elmvale on Tuesday the home team beat Peterborough at curling by 12 shots.

Members of the Ramblers' Cycling Club hold their regular meeting this evening.

The curling match at Buffalo yesterday between the Caledonians and Torontos was postponed on account of absence of ice.

DURING THE LAST FEW WEEKS

Fresh Spring Goods

Have been coming to us from all quarters, and we are busy opening them up and placing them on exhibition. This week we show a window of English Prints at 7c a yard, in neat patterns, every piece having the stamp of freshness about it. Also quantities of Prints with turkey red grounds in black spots and flowers, cardinal ground and white flowers, also heavy drillettes with cardinal stripes, flowers and spots. Neat patterns in lilacs and the old reliable madder browns in light and dark shades. Duck Suitings a new feature in Dress Goods last year, are this year shown in great variety. Call and see our stock in plain and fancy stripes, spots, etc.

GRAY AND WHITE COTTONS

We believe, have reached Rock Bottom Prices. Just received an immense stock, special value. No old goods in this department. See our 8x4 Grey Sheeting at 15c. New patterns in Crettones and Tickings, are very choice. In our stock will be found all the desirable patterns.

We have received an immense range of

TWEEDS AND COTTONADES

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. H. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 161 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

HYAMS' TRIAL GOES ON.

HARRY TOOK HOME BLOOD-STAINED TROUSERS TO BE WASHED.

A Servant's Startling Evidence—Miss Mabie Latimer Employed as Stenographer in the Warehouse Tells Her Story in the Box.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—Colonel Denison made a rush through the list of accused petty offenders at the Police Court this morning, and then the Hyams twins were ushered into his Worship's presence looking much brighter than they did yesterday and dressed identically as before. There was an interested crowd inside the court room and a much disgusted gathering outside the front door of Headquarters, and if there is a man in Toronto cordially detested by a thousand citizens who, it may be said, have the honor to be unknown to the police, it is the big "cop" who this morning is acting as doorkeeper at the house of Justice on Court street.

Dallas Hyams especially was quite chipper this morning, and he even chatted with the riff raff crowd that swayed about though separated from him by the iron railing of the prisoners' dock.

THE TYPE WRITER'S STORY.

When the docket had been cleared of everything except the sensational murder case, Miss Mabel Latimer was called as the first witness for the Crown. She testified that Harry Hyams instructed her to deliver a letter to a party in Deer Park and another to a party across the Don before going to work on the morning that young Wells was killed. She did as Hyams ordered and reached the Colborne street warehouse about a quarter before noon on Monday.

The first person she met there was Harry Hyams, who said that there had been an accident in the basement and that Willie Wells had been killed. Witness asked him how it happened and he replied that his brother was upstairs fixing the weight when it slipped and fell on Willie.

"In what condition was Harry Hyams when you saw him?"

"He was standing there with his hands scratched, and he said it had been caused by lifting the weight from Willie Wells' head."

"Was there blood on his hands?"

"Yes, I think there was."

On being cross-examined by Mr. Johnston witness said that she was sorry, but not particularly excited, when she heard that Wells was killed.

"I want you to tell me whether you ever thought of this conversation with Harry Hyams after the 16th of January, 1893, and before you saw the story in the newspapers?"

"Well, I'm not sure, but I think I have."

Witness would swear that she could give word for word the conversation between herself and Harry Hyams the day of the tragedy. She said that subsequent to the tragedy she did not deliver any messages but was sent out by the Hyams to look at furniture.

"Oh! They wouldn't trust Aylesworth, so they sent you?"

At this juncture Crown Attorney Curry jumped out and objected to Mr. Johnston's remarks.

"If you want to make any remark's," said the Crown Attorney, "make them when the case comes before a jury."

DEFENCE SURE OF ACQUITTAL.

"Don't be the least bit afraid, my learned friend," retorted Mr. Johnston, "the case will never go to the jury."

Addressing the witness: "Will you swear that you did not say to Mr. Palin on the day of the tragedy: 'Oh, Mr. Palin, did you hear about the accident,' and when he asked how it happened you said, 'the elevator weight fell on Willie and killed him?'"

"I don't remember it, but I may have said that."

Witness could not remember any conversation down town that day other than that with Harry Hyams. Neither could she fix one occasion during the next three months when be had had a conversation with Palin, although she might have been talking to him.

Miss Latimer saw carpenters at work about the elevator, but she did not know what they were doing. She knew that the 16th January was a cold day and they had a stove going in the office downstairs.

"Did Wells ride a bicycle?"

"Yes he rode a wheel and was in the habit of riding around the warehouse and sometimes near the elevator."

Witness said she had frequently gone home for dinner and left the Hyams alone in the warehouse.

Re-examined by Mr. Curry, witness said she was engaged as typewriter and stenographer, but had none of that work to do. All she did was to address envelopes.

To Mr. Johnston—"All the books I saw was a directory. The Hyams appeared to be endeavoring to lay the foundation for a sort of mercantile agency."

Mr. Johnston was pressing hard for answers to questions such as this, when Mr. Curry sprang to his feet again and protested stoutly but his Worship asked the Crown Attorney to allow Mr. Johnston to proceed with his cross examination. Mr. Curry did so with reluctance and Mr. Johnston observed:

"My learned friend appears to be very nervous this morning; yesterday's examination could not have been considered very satisfactory to him."

After some further cross firing between counsel, and the crowd had had their laugh, the cross examination was proceeded with.

THE WITNESS WAS COOL.

This young lady gave her evidence in the coolest sort of fashion and acted toward the counsel for the prisoners as if it was none of his business what she had to say concerning the tragedy. Mr. Johnston, however, soon gave the witness to understand that she was there to give her testimony and that it would be better for her to separate herself from such an independent bearing as she manifested until after she had told what she knew in connection with the case.

THE HYAMS' SERVANT.

Mrs. Lizzie Penjilley the woman who was engaged as servant at the Gould street residence the time of the tragedy, was next examined. She swore that the Hyams brothers went to work together the day Wells was killed. Between 10 and 11 o'clock the same morning Dallas returned looking very much troubled, and said that Willie Wells had met with an accident.

Subsequently Harry Hyams came home and the next day gave witness a pair of trousers to wash. There were spots of blood below the knees and witness could not get them out by washing. She took the trousers back to the room occupied by Dallas Hyams and his wife, as she thought they belonged to Dallas.

Some time after that Mrs. Dallas Hyams sent the trousers to the dyers. During her service at the Hyams house witness was more than once made the recipient of gifts from the brothers, but she did not know why they were given.

KINDHEARTED BUT NERVOUS.

To Mr. Johnston witness said the prisoners were timid, nervous sort of men and easily excited. They were also kind hearted men. The trousers on which the blood was found were light drab colored and the spots were about the size of pin heads. Dallas Hyams who remained in the house for fully three days after the fatality, told the witness that if any person called to tell them that he could not see them.

The court then adjourned.

JOHN L. AND TEMPERANCE.

The Ex-Champion Pugilist's Next Fight May Be Against the Liquor Traffic.

Special to the Times.

JEFFERSON, Fla., Feb. 28.—Poor old John L. Sullivan, as a last resort, may become a temperance advocate. Not that he is a shining light in the fight against the liquor traffic, but he is broke financially and must get something to do at once. To-day the ex champion received the following note from Col. K. D. Chandler, editor of a temperance organ here:

"If you sign the temperance pledge I will contract with you to travel with me over the country in the temperance cause. There will be big money in it. Millions of people would go to see and hear Sullivan, the reformed drunkard, who have only abuse for him now as a pugilist or an actor."

Some of his friends say Sullivan is thinking very seriously of taking up Chandler's offer.

A TEXAS PASTIME.

Seven Highwaymen Hold Up a Train near a Big City.

Special to the Times.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 28.—At 8 o'clock last night the north bound Houston & Texas Central train as it stopped at the intersection of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, five miles north of here, was held up by seven highwaymen who covered the engineer with sixshooters. They forced a porter to uncouple the train from the engine, baggage and express car.

Three of the robbers stepped into the cab and forced the engineer to pull a distance of half a mile. There they compelled Express Messenger A. H. Harris, of Wells Fargo & Co., to open his door and safe and tear open packages. There was no money, but the robbers took the express messenger's pistol. They shot away the headlight and ordered the engineer to back his train. In doing so the engineer collided with the rest of the train bursting the bumpers.

On the train was a party of ladies returning from the Moody meeting being held here. They all went to praying, one of them leading off with "Oh Lord, thou who rescued Daniel from the lion's den, deliver us, we beseech Thee, from the hands of these bandits." The sheriff is out with bloodhounds trying to run down the robbers.

THIRTY-NINE KILLED.

A TERRIBLE MINE DISASTER IN NEW MEXICO.

Eleven of the Men Rescued from a Frightful Death—Appropriation for the Homeless—A Brooklyn Trolley Victim.

Special to the Times.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., Feb. 28.—A terrific explosion of gas occurred in the White Ash mine of the Santa Fe Railway Co., three miles from Cerrillos, at 11 o'clock, causing the death of at least 39 miners. The first intimation of the disaster was a muffled roar and clouds of smoke and dust rolling from the mouth of the mine. Nearly 300 men are employed in the mine, but only 50 were at work when the explosion took place. Only 11 of them escaped alive and some of them may yet die. Twenty-nine dead bodies have been taken from the mine, and it is doubtful if those remaining are alive. Relays of men have been working heroically all day to reach those who are still imprisoned in the mine, but little progress can be made on account of the gas which prevailed in every shaft and overpowers the workers in a short time. Up to 4 yesterday evening those on the inside could be heard trying to work their way out of the but as nothing has been heard since then the imprisoned men in all probability have succumbed to the deadly gas. The mine was know to be badly ventilated and full of bad air and gas, and a catastrophe of this kind has been frequently predicted. A bill was introduced in the New Mexico Legislature this evening to appropriate $5,000 for the relief of the widows and orphans. It will probably pass. The cause of the explosion is not yet known, and the facts are hard to get at. All the efforts of the men in the vicinity are being put for to liberate those imprisoned in the mine.

CAVED-IN MINE,

TROLLEY VICTIM.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 28.—Gustave Carlson, 11 years old, was killed this afternoon. The lad was returning to school when, as he attempted to cross Humboldt street, he was struck by a car of Meeker ave. trolley line and instantly killed. Thos. Dugan while assisting in lifting the car from the boy's body had his leg fractured. This is the 100th victim of trolley cars since their introduction here.

FATALLY BURNED.

BUFFALO, Feb. 28.—Josie Siebafske, aged 15, was fatally burned this afternoon. Her dress caught fire from a bon fire which had been built to thaw out a switch on the N.Y. Central R.R. tracks near her home.

Sacrilegious Legislators.

JEFFERSON, City, Mo., Feb. 28.—The Senand House have defeated bills prohibiting Sunday baseball, Sunday theaters and similar amusements. The bill prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors was killed, and a bill authorizing pool-selling and book-making on race courses during the race season on either home or foreign events has been passed.

Killed His Mother and Himself.

ALFORD, MAINE, Feb. 28.—Leroy A. Fernald, who murdered his mother in their home in East Lebanon yesterday morning, and after setting the building on fire ran to an attic to await death in the flames, was found dead in his cell in the jail where he was brought last night. Leroy was insane.

Attempted Suicide.

KINGSTON, Feb. 28.—Driver Kennedy, a member of "A" battery, attempted to commit suicide yesterday by hacking his throat with a penknife. He was detected in the act, and, therefore, his injuries are slight. He was under arrest at the time. Kennedy was at one time a member of the Irish Fusiliers. He was discharged from the Battery this morning.

TO BOYCOTT THE G.T.R.

ANTI-CANADIAN CRUSADE STARTED BY TRANS-ATLANTIC STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

Grand Trunk Differential Passenger Rates in Favor of the St. Lawrence Route is the Cause of the Trouble.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The local managers of the Trans-Atlantic Steamship Company have sent a somewhat remarkable communication to the Trunk Line Association. In effect they call upon the railroads to boycott the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada and the Chicago and Grand Trunk, on immigration passenger business destined from New York to all points west.

If the trunk lines refuse to do this the steamship companies, although they do not so state in their letter, intend to break off relations with the Railroad Association and no longer allow immigrant passengers to be routed by the clearing house, as has been done for several years.

The grievance of the Steamship Companies is that the Grand Trunk, by paying a compensation of $6 apiece on all prepaid passengers routed via Montreal, while the trunk lines allow only $1.20, is diverting business away from New York to Canadian ports and hence the lines putting into New York are losing their legitimate share of the travel. There have been conferences about the matter for several days, and yesterday Secretary T. S. Sanford of the Trans-Atlantic Association obtained the signatures of all the leading companies doing business between this country and Europe. It is as follows:

New York, Feb. 26th, 1895.

"L. P. Farmer, Esq.,
"Commissioner Trunk Line Assn.

"Dear Sir.—The Grand Trunk Railway persists in discriminating against the port of New York by granting high commissions on immigrant business via Montreal which cannot be secured by us. We therefore request that until further notice you do not route any immigrant business by the Grand Trunk and Chicago and Grand Trunk."

CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

The steamship lines represented in this letter are: The North German Lloyd, the Hamburg American, the White Star, the Cunard, the International Navigation Company, the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, the Netherland American Steam Navigation Company, the Fabre line, the Thingvalla line and the Anchor line.

The steamship people feel very much aggrieved over the present condition of affairs, and they propose, if necessary, to take things into their own hands and make a deal with some one railway that is willing to allow the best commissions, leaving all the other railroads out in the cold. If this is done, the boycotted trunk railways will lose one of their best sources of revenue. The Grand Trunk allows six dollars apiece on all prepaid passengers routed via Montreal, while the trunk line roads allow but one dollar and a half, and this commission is on the basis of tickets sold to Chicago, the commissions to points beyond being proportional. The net difference between New York and Montreal and Quebec is still greater, since the open tariff rate to the public is $12 from New York to Chicago, while it is only $11.50 from Montreal to Chicago; in other words the G. T. R. carries passengers from Montreal to Chicago for a net rate of $5.50 each.

WHAT THE RATES ARE.

The local steamship managers at first made individual protests against this practice to several roads, demanding that the matter be taken up with the Western lines with a view to settling the controversy between the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific, with whom the trouble started. The trunk lines did nothing, and the steamship men became impatient. If their present demand is ignored they purpose taking some such action as that outlined, of sending all their immigration business over one line and boycotting the others.

Heretofore the steamship companies have allowed the immigrant clearing-house to route passengers over any route they saw fit, and the steamship lines paid the established fares; and, as the business originates with the steamship lines, they think they can convert it as they please. Immigrant passengers are now divided equally among the eight trunk lines, and these mostly send their immigrants over the Grand Trunk lines. So, too, the Grand Trunk eastern business in return is given to these lines in preference. Thus the Grand Trunk will have an offset should the railway companies or any of them fall in with the steamship companies' demand for a boycott of its line.

FIRED ON THE YANKEE.

An Unknown British Man-of-War said to have Peppered an Unknown American

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—A dispatch from Colon Colombia, says:—The Faith, a coasting sloop, which arrived here yesterday from Bocas Del Toro, brought the news of the French conflict at Bluefields. The Faith met two British schooners, the Dauntless and the Brothers at Bocas Del Toro. The masters of the schooners reported that while they were at Bluefields, two weeks before, an American ship, whose name they did not know, arrived there.

The British Consul at Bluefields was informed that she had on board arms imported by Samuel Weil. The American ship left Bluefields for Cape Gracias Adios north of Bluefields. The British man-of-war followed her there and found her landing two boatloads of arms. The Britisher fired on her, carrying away her mast.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The British Foreign Office has no information of the reported french trouble at Bluefields, or of alleged disabling of an American ship by a British man-of-war.

"CATHOLIC PRIESTHOOD."

An Ex-Priest Almost Mobbed in Georgia

Special to the Times.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 27.—Savannah escaped a riot tonight through the intervention of the militia. The trouble was started by ex Priest Joseph Slaters' lecture on "The Roman Catholic Priesthood." For several days efforts have been made by members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians to revoke the ex priest's permit to deliver the lecture, but the Mayor, upon legal advice, replied that it could not be done. Threats were openly made against the lecturer, and the chief of police and a detail of officers were ordered on duty at the hall where the lecture was to be delivered. The militia had to be called out to preserve the peace.

More Canadians Deported.

BUFFALO, Feb. 27.—Inspector De Barry sent Daniel Near and Walter Gracy back to Canada yesterday. The men came to this city to get work, and the inspector decided there were enough Buffalonians out of employment to fill any vacant positions.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 28, 1895.

Good morning !

If it is true that our head policeman is in the employ of the Grand Trunk, he would be a very good official to remove.

Queen Victoria is thinking of creating a literary for England. It was an idea formed by the Prince Consort two years before his death.

Mayor Kendry does not like Mr. Sproule and a few others in the Council. The gentlemen referred to have an unpleasant habit of doing their duty.

Lent began on Wednesday last, and everybody is supposed to grovel in sackcloth and ashes and renounce the world the flesh and the devil for a time. That is what people are supposed to do. But there are precious few of them that do it.

It is pleasant to learn that our good old friend, Li Hung Chang was graciously received in his recent interviews with the Chinese emperor. But the nature of his reception from the other emperor when he goes to sue for peace will be more important.

There is a certain sentiment gathering in Peterborough that will compel the reorganization of the Town officials. Mayor Kendry may block the way for a brief time, but the feeling is becoming so strong that he or no other man or set of men can long stem the tide of popular discontent.

There seems to be some need of law reform in the State of New York. After a long-winded trial a murderer named Buchanan was, on the 1st of August, 1893, sentenced to death. Since that the murderer's counsel have been using every artifice of law to prevent the execution, and at length the decision of the court of last resort have been reached, and Buchanan must die. Had he had a sharper lawyer he might have died of old age.

The story is told of a German saloonkeeper in whose place the boys had a boistrous time. "Dey drank all mine seegars," complained Schneider, "und schmoked all mine peer. Dey trow mine pottles mit the vindow owat, und smashed mine vrow mit ein club. I shtand dot ; but ven dey kicked mine leetle dog I vas mat—mein gott, I vas mat !" Mayor Kendry is similarly pachydermatous. One may object to the wasting of a few odd thousands in useless litigation ; or point out that Peterborough has more policemen than is necessary and more than its finances warrant ; or insist that the service which costs the town so much money is no good ; or advocate the overthrow of the Conservative party, he can "Shtand all dot." But when one ventures to utter a doubt as to the existence of a cotton or wollen combine, our worthy Mayor gets mad indeed.

The hearing of the appeal in the Manitoba schools case has been adjourned until Monday next, and if a further adjournment can be secured, it will not be gone on with then. It is freely predicted that the result will be that the Manitoba Legislature will be asked to pass an act legalizing stat aided Separate Schools, or relieving the Roman Catholics in some other way, although the Legislature has already declared officially that it will not change one jot from its present position. By following this course, however, the question of decisive legislation will be shelved for a time—long enough, probably to prevent it from coming to a boil until the elections are all over. This will be a great relief to the Ottawa politicians who have been on pins and needles ever since the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council was made public.

REALLY A CANADIAN LAKE.

A great deal of nonsense is being talked from time to time in connection with the various schemes for affording Hawaii cable connection with the outside world. It was proposed that the British cable from British Columbia to Australia call there and give the commerce of these islands a chance ; but the political cry was raised against the scheme and a lot of cheap folly talked about the fortresses with which Great Britain was striving to surround the United States. Now the American Congress is considering a proposal to lay a cable from San Francisco to the Islands, and the point is raised that the value of the commerce between the two countries would not justify the outlay. To this the New York Recorder loftily retorts that "these are the arguments of peanut politicians without the slightest appreciation of the immense national interests involved. The question of whether the cable will be commercially profitable is not worth one minute's consideration beside the vastly greater question whether the United States or great Britain shall hold the keys of the Pacific.' They must made the petty fellow who thinks that in this Western world a cable is much more apt to be an instrument of trade than of war, feel pretty small. Continuing the Recorder says :

The control of the Pacific is certainly worth $500,000, whatever the cable may be worth as a commercial investment. The nation that becomes firmly established on the Hawaiian Islands will be ultimately the dominating power of the Pacific. That power will be either Great Britain or the United States. It must be the United States, for the Pacific is an American sea.

Now that is just where the Recorder is woefully astray. If it comes to a jingo jawing match, we shall feel compelled to remind our contemporary that the Pacific is in reality a Canadian lake ! As for the cable, all concerned may depend upon it that the inexorable laws of trade will punish any kite-flying for glory's sake ; and to refuse for political reasons to tap a cable going right by the gates of Honolulu is not in accord with the hard business sense of this age.

A NOBLE JUDGE.

As a prisoner on Thursday in Victoria B C., was leaving the dock after having been sentenced to five years' imprisonment for robbery, he said, "Thank you, sir," which was interpreted as contempt of court. He was taken back and given three years additional for each word. So runs a news item which appeared in all the papers Saturday.

The judge capable of acting in such a petty, spoiled child fashion as that with a prisoner is better fitted to spend his life throwing bricks at the shadow of a black cat than in passing judgement on the erring. If the facts are substanitaly as stated in the despatch summarized above, there should be some head chopping done with as little delay as possible. An official inquiry should be made into the facts at once.

It is all very well to say that judges are human and are just as apt to let thier passions an feelings get the best of them as the rest of us. That is true. But not while they are on the bench. Judge Jones in private life and Judge Jones on the bench are different creatures or ought to be. If Judge Jones chooses to let his angry passions rise in private life, that is his own business and no one has the right to say a word. But when he does it on the bench he is guilty of an insult to the Majesty of the law, to the spirit of British fair play, to ordinary human intelligence. The course of the Brilish Columbia judge in this matter affords a good ground for an investigation.

POPPY LAND LIMITED EXPRESS.

The first train leaves at 6 p.m.
For the land where the poppy blows ;
And mother dear is the engineer,
And each passenger laughs and crows.

The palace car is the mother's arms,
The whistle a low, sweet strain,
The passengers wink and nod and blink,
And go fast asleep in the train.

At 8 p.m. the next train starts
For the poppy land afar ;
The summons clear falls on the ear—
"All aboard for the sleeping car."

What is the fare to poppy land ?
I hope it is not too dear,
The fare is this, a hug and a kiss,
And is paid to the engineer.

So I ask of Him, whom children took,
In His arms, in kindness great,
Take charge, I pray, of the trains each day
That leave at 6 and 8.

"Keep watch of the passengers, thus I pray,
For to me they are very dear ;
And special care, O gracious Lord,
Over the gentle engineer."

INTERESTING TO LADIES
SOMETHING FOR NOTHING
CAN YOU GET IT?

Many who should know whether, are well pleased to get a good sized glass jar or tin of bulky alum, ammonia or other powerful but injurious mixture, for use as Baking Powder, at much less, perhaps even half the price, of the really good article, overlooking the fact that the amount thus APPARENTLY saved is of small moment in comparison with the real but not always immediately observed inevitable injury following the use of these articles. If in addition to the seemingly low prices, there is attached some showy gift or prize to give the impression of extra value, the inferior or hurtful nature of the powder is lost sight of in the expectation (a vain one) of getting "something for nothing."

"LADIES' HOME" and "HAPPY THOUGHT" on the other hand, can always be depended on as articles of first class quality, and such as can be AND ARE guaranteed not only free from everything in the slightest degree injurious, but invariably sure, satisfactory and economical.

BIG BLAZE AT HALIFAX.

SHEDS, WHARVES AND ELEVATORS GO UP IN FLAMES.

The Loss is Fully Half a Million—The Dominion Government Loses Heavily—Two Firemen Badly Injured.

Special to the Times.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 27.—It was a fierce fire which started just after 10 o'clock this morning in the large shed at the outer end of Deepwater wharf. A strong north wind was blowing which fanned the flames into fury, and for a short time the shed, wharf and elevator shute were doomed. Part of the contents of the shed on the upper part of the wharf were removed, but the contents of the outer shed were nearly all lost. It consisted of merchandise from and for steamers, the steamer Indian having discharged a quantity of goods last night for points west.

FLAMES SPREAD QUICKLY.

The flames ran quickly along the elevator flue and communicated with the elevator, which was soon a mass of flames. Its sides and roof were covered with slates, and the heat caused these to fly about in a dangerous manner, driving the firemen from the scene.

The Sarmatian and other houses on the opposite side of Water street caught fire from the embers, and in a short time fully a dozen houses were ablaze. The conflagration is almost beyond control. Fortunately there were no steamers at Deepwater terminus at the time. The steamer Irrdrain left early this morning.

The Dartmouth fire department have come to the assistance of the Halifax brigade. The Western Union wires have been destroyed by the firemen.

THE FIRE UNDER CONTROL.

Later—The fire is now under control. The chief loss sustained is by the Dominion Government, whose property around the deepwater terminus is pretty well destroyed. The big immigration and other sheds are gone and the long wharf is burned.

The grain elevator and the elevator shute are also burned. The block of wooden buildings opposite the elevator are badly scorched but only one or two smaller ones were destroyed.

No firemen were killed, but two were badly injured. The total loss will be over half a million, nearly the whole of which will be sustained by the Dominion Government, on which there is no insurance.

THE ELBE ENQUIRY.

Captain and Engineer of the Crathie Give Evidence.

Special to the Times

LOWESTOFT, Feb 27.—Mr. Greenham said he burned paper in the boat in order to attract attention of the colliding vessel and expressed his belief that if the Crathie had kept a good lookout it would have been possible for them to have seen it burning. Capt. Gordon, commander of the Crathie, took the stand and testified that when the wreckage was cleared away from the Crathie's bows the ship was turned around to go after the Elbe. This was about three quarters of an hour after the collision, but the Elbe had steamed away.

Both the captain and the chief engineer of the Crathie deposed that the vessel's telegraph was frozen at the time of the collision. Orders were given to the lookout man who shouted them to the engineer. The engineer admitted that he had not looked to see whether the telegraph was all right and the vessel sailed from Rotterdam. On the conclusion of the engineer's testimony the coroner intimated that the inquest would be adjourned until March 20th. The solicitor for the captain of the Crathie objected to this process and asked that the jury render a verdict. It would be cruel, he said, to let the matter hang fire over the captain's head for a month. The coroner opposed the rendering of a verdict at the present time and the inquest was adjourned.

17 YEARS A POPE.

Leo XIII, to Celebrate the Anniversary of His Coronation.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Morning today publishes a despatch from Rome saying that the Pope will officiate on Sunday next at a special service in the Sistine chapel in celebration of the 17th anniversary of his coronation.

On Saturday next his Holiness will receive the congratulations of the notabilities at Rome, and through the diplomatic corps the congratulations of the Governments having representatives at the Vatican.

AFTER BURGLARS.

The Accomplice of a Thieving Gang Traced to Chicago.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Feb. 27.—Deputy Sheriff O'Brien, who was shot by the Briswold bank burglars is very low and slight hopes are entertained of his recovery. The authorities have identified the wounded robber who was caught. He is Cad Maguire of Omaha. The robber who shot O'Brien and then escaped is Chas. O'Connor, also of Omaha. The authorities are hot on O'Conner's trial and expect to get him. The postage stamps stolen were shipped to a man named Davis in Chicago. Davis, who is a South Water street saloon keeper, was arrested tonight in Chicago, together with his bartender John Walmartin shortly after the valise was delivered at the saloon. The valise was found to contain four large packages of stamps worth a little over $850. Davis is well known to the police.

AN AMERICAN EDITOR

CHARLES A. DANA, THE VENERABLE CHIEF OF THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Little Corner Room and Its Plain Furnishings—Personal Appearance and Traits of a Man Whose Name Is Known In Every American Household.

The rather naked little corner room in The Sun building, in which Mr. Dana has sat almost daily for 25 years, is a surprise to many persons who see it for the first time. His genuine love of beautiful things, his disposition to acquire them if possible and the extraordinary range and accuracy of his æsthetic appreciations are so widely known that it is quite natural for those who do not understand him to expect to find his tastes reflected in his accustomed place of work. The room might be even barer than it is and yet serve Mr. Dana's purpose as well as if it were the gallery of Apollo. On the other hand, if his chair and desk were established in the middle of the vastest and most sumptuous presence chamber to be found anywhere and amid a throng of curious and noisy onlookers, Mr. Dana would work on with the same tranquil efficiency, providing his pen did not splutter and the capacious wastebasket at his feet were emptied from time to time. The processes of his mind are neither stimulated nor intimidated by the surroundings. The accessories of luxurious professional habits are absent because they are superfluous to Mr. Dana. If he thought they would help him to make a better newspaper, they would all be there.

In the middle of the small room is a desk table of black walnut, of the Fulton street style and the period of the first administration of Grant; a shabby little round table at the window, where Mr. Dana sits when the day is dark; one leather covered chair, which does duty at either post, and two wooden chairs, both rickety, for visitors on errands of business or ceremony. On the desk a revolving case, with a few dozen books of reference; an inkpot and pen, not much used except in correcting manuscript or proofs, for Mr. Dana talks off to a stenographer his editorial articles and his correspondence, sometimes spending on the revision of the former twice as much time as was required for the dictation; a window seat filled with exchanges, marked here and there in blue pencil for the editor's eyes; a big pair of shears and two or three extra pairs of spectacles in cache against an emergency. These few items constitute what is practically the whole objective equipment of the editor of The Sun. The shears are probably the newest article of furniture in the list. They replaced, three or four years ago, another pair of unknown antiquity, besought and obtained by Eugene Field and now occupying, alongside of Mr. Gladstone's ax, the place of honor in that poet's celebrated collection of edged instruments.

Into the corner room described there swings nearly every morning in the year a man of 75, looking 15 years younger; largely built, square framed, with a step as firm as a sea captain's; vigorous, sometimes to abruptness, in his bodily movements, but deliberate and gentle in his speech; dressed always in such a way that his clothes seem to belong to him and not he to them; with strong brown hands, rather large, which do not tremble as they hold book or paper, and a countenance familiar to most Americans through portraits or caricatures, whose marked features the caricaturists distort in various whimsical ways without ever succeeding in making the face seem either ridiculous or ignoble. Mr. Dana's full beard is trimmed more closely than in former years. It ranks as snow white only by courtesy. The last strongholds of the pigment are not yet conquered.

The impression which Mr. Dana makes upon those who come into contact with him personally for the first time or the fortieth is that of vigorous and sympathetic good will, both desirous and capable of pleasing. He is frank and engaging in conversation, and the wonderful range of his intellectual interests makes him equally ready to learn or to communicate. Men who seek him merely to measure their wits against his for a purpose often go away charmed with their reception and well satisfied with results until they begin to reckon at a distance what has actually been accomplished by the interview. If shrewd kindness beams on the stranger through one of the two lenses of his gold bowed spectacles, kind shrewdness is alert behind the other glass. He has learned how to say no when necessary, and even to say it in italics, but he has never learned to say an inconsiderate thing. Mr. Dana uses no tobacco, but that is not the reason why he is superior to petulance and never frets himself under any circumstances, whatever his mood. He knows wine and respects it and himself, but that is not the reason why he knows at a glance good poetry from bad, even if the good be disguised in cramped handwriting and words misspelled, while the bad is displayed in typography beautiful to see. He prefers the mushroom to mush and milk, being both a connoisseur and a cultivator of the former, but that is not the reason why, as a journalist, his perception of the interesting, the unexpected, the refreshing, has not been dulled by 50 years' exercise.

Mr. Dana was born with a voracious intellectual appetite, which has remained healthy and insatiate all of his life. He shrinks at nothing short of actual dullness or literary deformity so marked as to be repulsive. He is a tireless reader of books, magazines and journals in many languages. Whether print or manuscript comes under his eyes, he takes in the ideas seemingly by whole paragraphs rather than by words, lines or even sentences. Unlike most other very rapid readers that I have known, he does not merely sample the page or the chapter or the book.

A glance through his glasses seems to establish a circuit which at once puts his brain in possession not only of the essential facts, but also of any refinement of style that may be there, or any novel or felicitous verbal formula, no matter how inconspicuous. When he closes the book or throws aside the newspaper the probability is small that he has missed anything worth having. This process of acquisition has been going on without a break and with constantly increasing speed ever since his early boyhood. It is supported by a memory which selects with discrimination and then retains with tenacity.—Edward P. Mitchell in McClure's.

Love Apple.

When I first knew Covent garden, tomatoes in their raw state were habitually known as "love apples." It was only when they were preserved in bottles to be used as sauce that they took the name now universally applied to them. Very rarely were they eaten raw in a salad or cooked, stewed or stuffed or au gratin.—G. A. Sala in London Telegraph.

HOW THE HARDY CASCARILLEROS OF PERU OBTAIN THE BARK.

A Calling That is Full of Dangers—How the Cinchona Trees Are Located and Stripped—The Natural Home of This Wonderful Medicine.

It was while serving on the South American station, with the comfortable old craft snugly moored in Callao harbor, that the writer, in company with a party of friends, took a trip inland to witness the operations of the celebrated cascarilleros or cinchona bark searchers. The mountains of Peru are the natural home of this wonderful medicinal tree, which is easily distinguishable from surrounding foliage by its beautiful lanceolate leaves and magnificent proportions. They frequently reach a height of 80 feet, straight as a lance, and covered with foliage. The leaves are large and of a deep, glossy green, relieved by delicate pink lines, producing a beautiful effect in the brilliant sunshine of that favored land.

The life of a cascarillero is one of peril, constant toil and incessant hardship. But it is his livelihood, and, with hungry mouths to feed, the poor but fearless native cuts loose from his wretched mountain habitation of bark, bidding his dusky family circle farewell, not knowing whether he will ever meet them alive again or not. Little does the consumer of the drug, who purchases it within the portals of some luxurious establishment, realize the danger and suffering involved in procuring the powder soon to be taken so lightly or carelessly for some real or fancied trouble.

The hunter plunges resolutely into the dark and mighty forest, striking well known trails, which lead far beyond the pale of civilization or even tracts of country utilized by the half savage hunter of game. With scarcely a change of clothing, encumbered with nothing save the rude implements of his calling, the cascarillero pushes on through tangled depths of jungle over rough and wind swept mountains, braving furious torrents and improvising frail swinging bridges of trees and tough creepers. Ever on the alert, with muscles developed and sinews hardened like steel, facing beasts of prey and slipping from beyond the slimy, fatal coils of huge serpents lurking amid the oozy morasses and foothills, the poor fellow eludes perhaps death in a dozen frightful forms to meet his fate through torture—dying by inches.

Although the pay of the quinine hunter is ridiculously small, it suffices to meet the simple requirements of himself and family, and as a class they are happy and contented with their lot in life. It is a vocation that is handed down from father to son, the elder schooling his progeny in all secrets pertaining to forest life and the search for the highly prized bark, but despite long years of experience, coupled with an intimate knowledge of the intricate trails leading to the cinchona vocations, many Indian hunters yearly lose their lives amid the bewildering depths of the dark, untrodden jungles of the vast wilderness.

Occasionally a number of hunters will pool their interests, starting out in company as a greater protection against disaster. Upon reaching a desirable spot, where the signs of paying trees are considered good, preparations for camping are at once made, a detail looking after that duty, while particularly keen eyed and lithe hunters pick out the loftiest trees, from the tops of which they scan the forest, quickly locating clumps of the precious cinchonas.

Then it is the musical, deep toned voices of the cascarilleros ring out in careless chorus through the silent recesses of the far spreading forest. The ring of axes and echoes of sturdy blows dealt lofty monarchs of the Cordilleras mingle in unison with the weird Indian chant, while the blazing campfires throw out a cheery welcome to any wayfarer, who, regardless of race or color, always is accorded a welcome to the camp of the quinine hunters. At night, when all labor is necessarily suspended, the members of the expedition gather about the well kept fire, when many a wild and stirring tale of thrilling adventure is recounted by the dusky searchers as they loll at ease on the long, velvety grass of the plateau.

The task of gathering cinchona bark occupies all the working hours between sunrise and set. The camp is early astir, with no time lost in culinary preparations. The making of savory messes and aroma of strong, fresh coffee is confined to the two or three white men occasionally accompanying the party of hunters. This may comprise a botanist, sent on by some European concern to study the flora of the comparatively unknown region, an adventurous traveler or a hard pressed prospector in search of the precious metals. All find shelter and a hearty welcome within the frontier camp of cascarilleros.

Armed with knives and keen edged hatchets, the tree is quickly felled with all hands cutting, stripping and clearing the trunk from all foreign growth encumbering the trunk. This is a task of no small magnitude, frequently consuming days of constant and patient labor. The sharp edges of lancelike leaves, mingled with thorns and huge briers, lacerate and wound the hunters' flesh, who are not overburdened with clothing, their dark bodies exhibiting a network of scars and wounds, the result of their encounters with parasites and creepers as well as attacks from savage beasts prowling under cover of the jungle.

The bark is removed, cut into tiny curling strips and piled in some convenient spot, where one or more of the party are detailed to look after the drying process. This comparatively easy duty is generally awarded to one more or less disabled by wounds or accident in falling from some lookout tree or station. The thin portions curl up, drying rapidly, while the large, thick slices retain their shape and are easily packed for transportation. When all are pronounced ready by the "torlejo," or head hunter of the party, the bark is neatly lashed together with deftly plaited seizings of plaited grass and bound with broad, tough leaves as a protection to the cured bark. Then the Indians and peons shoulder their burdens, oftentimes striking the home trail with a weight of 150 to 200 pounds on their backs, secured by straps of broadly plaited plateau grass passed around their foreheads. With their jaws actively at work masticating the wonderful leaves of the strength giving cocoa, these small, slender natives will travel over a caballero, 100 leagues, of the roughest mountain trails, conveying their hard earned quinine treasures to market, their hardships and privations lightened along the perilous pathway by the sonorous cadence of their native songs, to which they time their sure and steady pace.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PUMAS IN DEADLY CONFLICT.

Great Cats That Make a Battling Fight When Evenly Matched.

"On our return trip to the coast I saw a thrilling incident of life in the South American forest, a fight to the death between two big pumas. These great beasts are fierce, hard fighters at all times against a common enemy, but it is only during the mating season that the males fight among themselves, and when they do the contest means death to one or both of them. For strength and courage they are the equals of the African lion or the tigers of the Indian jungles.

"We were making our way down a narrow wooded ravine in the foothills of the Andes and had stopped for our midday meal on the bank of a small mountain stream of clear water. After we had finished the meal I lay down for a short rest, but in less than five minutes I was aroused by the most terrific roaring, snapping and snarling of wild beasts I had ever heard.

"'Pumas, and there's going to be a fight,' said our guide in a whisper. It was not difficult to locate the animals. They were not more than 100 yards away, and by creeping through the brush as quietly as possible we were able to get near enough to see the fight without disturbing them. When we caught sight of the two animals, they were crouching close to the ground, facing each other, in a small space under some large trees. They were the finest specimens of the puma I ever saw.

"They were probably 30 feet apart, and as they crouched there, glaring at each other, they looked like giant cats about to spring on their prey. Pugilists never sparred with greater caution than did those big brutes. Their tails were switching back and forth, and their eyes were like balls of fire. Slowly they moved around in a circle, all the time cautiously getting closer and closer together. It was evident that each was waiting for the other to make the first lead. For more than ten minutes they watched and waited. The roaring and snarling we had heard when they first met had ceased. They made no sound now as they watched for a chance to spring.

"Our own nerves were trembling under the strain when at last the two great beasts rose in the air at the same instant, and, like catapults, came together with a thud that could have been heard 200 yards away. They dropped to the ground, and for almost ten minutes all we could make out was two great brown bodies rolling over and over in the death struggle. They made no outcry of any kind, but every few seconds we could hear their powerful jaws come together with a snap like the closing of a well oiled steel trap.

"Finally they began to weaken, and as their struggles grew less violent we could see that both of them were covered with blood, while their flesh was torn to shreds. In five minutes more the fight was over, and the two giants of the forest were stretched out at full length on the ground, clasped in each other's limbs, just as two playful kittens sometimes lie down together. They struggled feebly a little longer, and then both of them lay perfectly still. Both were dead when we got to them, and I never saw animals so torn to pieces. The entrails of both were torn out and scattered over the ground where they had fought, and in their necks were great ragged holes, from which the blood had flowed in streams while they were still fighting. They each had a score of wounds that would have killed any animal with less tenacity of life."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Napoleon's Thriftiness.

Economy and privation were always more supportable to him than borrowing. He detested irregularities in financial matters. "Your finances are deplorably conducted, apparently on metaphysical principles. Believe me, money is a very physical thing," he once said to Joseph when the latter, as king of Naples, could not make both ends meet. He put Jerome to sea largely to stop his reckless expenditures. At 15 that young man paid $3,200 for a shaving case "containing everything except the beard to enable its owner to use it." Some of the most furious scenes which occurred between Napoleon and Josephine were because she was continually in debt. After the divorce he frequently cautioned her to be watchful of her money. "Think what a bad opinion I would have of you if I knew you were in debt with an income of $600,000 a year," he wrote her in 1813.

The methodical habits of Marie Louise were a constant satisfaction to Napoleon. "She settles all her accounts once a week, deprives herself of new gowns if necessary and imposes privations upon herself in order to keep out of debt," he said proudly. A bill of 60 francs and 82 centimes was once sent to him for window blinds placed in the salon of the Princess Borghese. "As I did not order this expenditure, which ought not to be charged to my budget, the princess will pay it," he wrote on the margin. It was not parsimony. It was the man's sense of order. No one was more generous in gifts, pensions, salaries, but it irritated him to see money wasted or managed carelessly.—McClure's Magazine.

California's Wonderful Temple.

In southern California, in the county of San Luis Obispo, there is situated one of the most remarkable prehistoric monuments known to the archæologists. From a distance it looks like an immense rock rising from the plains of Carisso, but upon nearer approach it is seen to be a temple of extraordinary dimensions and of unknown antiquity. The inner court has a level floor 225 feet long and 135 feet wide, and the ceiling is from 60 to 100 feet high, according to situation. The building was evidently used by prehistoric man, but for what purpose and how long since no one knows. It has been suggested, however, that it was either a temple of worship or the capitol of some ancient government. The walls and portions of the ceiling are beautifully decorated with paintings in colors red, white and black, many of them supposed to have some symbolic meaning. Holcomb, who visited the site of this wonderful edifice in 1893, and who put in several days trying to find evidences of human sacrifice among the various scenes depicted on the walls, says that the colors are apparently as bright as when first laid on.

The Indians of that locality are said to have no traditions concerning the building of this temple, yet they all regard it with superstitious reverence.—St. Louis Republic.

Weird Story of a Chair.

In the museum at Cape Town is shown an old fashioned, high backed wooden chair, to which attaches a weird story. It is related that the chair is the one in which the Dutch governor was found sitting dead a few moments after the execution of a soldier whom he had sentenced to be hanged, and who on his doom being pronounced solemnly called upon his condemner to accompany him to the throne of the Supreme Judge.—Times of India.

UPRISING IN CUBA.

Towns Attacked by Insurgents and Ruined.

Special to the Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 27.—The latest advices from Cuba confirm the reports of a general uprising of the patriots there. The movement is simultaneous at seven different points on the island, and the insurgents have attacked eight or ten interior towns.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Secretary Gresham received a cablegram today from Consul General Ramon Williams at Havana, announcing that a state of affairs, practically amounting to martial law had been proclaimed in Cuba. It appears from the despatch that the proclamation of the Governor General has caused great excitement throughout the island where no general revolution exists, as it was the first notice the people received that the Government was taking means to prevent disturbances in the section from spreading.

CAPE COLONY'S NEW RULER.

Sir Hercules Robinson Succeeds Sir Henry Brougham Loch.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Sir Hercules Robinson, formerly Governor of Hong Kong, Ceylon, New South Wales, New Zealand and of the Cape of Good Hope, holding the latter position from 1880 to 1888, has been appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Cape Colony and High Commissioner for South Africa in succession to Sir Henry Brougham Loch.

Sir Henry was recently recalled from Cape Colony on account of his long standing differences of opinion with the premier, the Hon. Cecil Rhodes.

A GREAT CONFLAGRATION.

The Heart of the Factory District in Chicago in Flames.

Special to the Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—A fire which has caused half a million dollars' damage began here this morning in the Kastner building, 245 South Jefferson street and spread throughout the west side factory district.

In panics which occurred in several of the large factories, numbers of people were killed.

Death of Mr. Meredith.

MONTREAL, Feb. 27.—Mr. W. H. Meredith, a prominent broker of this city, and director of the Bank of Montreal, died this afternoon from pneumonia. Mr. Meredith was a son of the late Sir William Collis Meredith, Chief Justice, of Queen's Bench, Quebec, and second cousin to Chief Justice Meredith of Toronto, and of Mr. H. V. Meredith, local manager of the Bank of Montreal, and of Mr. Chas. Meredith, broker.

HE IS A GAY DECEIVER.

PERCY P. GAUTHIER, ALIAS GOODRICH TOO MUCH MARRIED.

Wedded a 20-Year-Old Widow Although He Had a Wife and Two Daughters Living in Waterbury, Conn.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—It is the old story of a trusting woman and a wicked man.

A year ago there came to Toronto from the United States a man who went by the name of Percy P. Goodrich who worked at intervals for the Acme Silver Co. He passed as a bachelor and on Feb. 20, 1894, he was married by the Rev. Canon Sanson of Trinity Church to the 20 year old widow of Frederick Bletherwick, a machinist who died of consumption after two years wedded life. Mrs. Bletherwick had been a widow for a year and was living with her father James Legood, machinist, 517 Queen street east. Goodrich said his age was 35.

LEFT HER IN LESS THAN A MONTH.

Goodrich, as he called himself, took his bride to a Church street boarding house, and in less than a month left her, going to the States to look for work and promising to send for her. He gave her only enough money to pay a week's board. The young woman had letters from Goodrich dated Boston and Portland, the last being in July, but he ceased writing, and she never again saw him.

It now transpires that "Goodrich's" real name is Percy P. Gauthier, and that he is a bigamist. Strange rumors came to the ears of the young woman, and through Father La Marche, pastor of the French Roman Catholic church in King street east, it was learned that the gay deceiver had a wife in Waterbury, Conn.

A LETTER FROM HIS LEGAL WIFE.

She wrote to Waterbury and received a letter from Gauthier's first wife, who stated that she was married to him 22 years ago, when she was 20 years of age; that they had five children, of whom two girls, aged 16 and 14, are living.

Wife No. 1 gives Gauthier a bad reputation. She says he has not supported his family for years, and when he did live with them he was no good. She says that he is not a Protestant, as he represented here, but a Catholic, and she being of the same faith will not consent to a divorce. She expresses great pity for Mrs. Bletherwick in being deceived by the man who treated her and his children so badly.

Gauthier is now supposed to be in Philadelphia, where his mother lives.

Attempted Bigamy.

ST. ANDREWS, N.B Feb.28.—George Hood, a merchant tailor, was arrested here, charged with attempting to contract a bigamous marriage with Ethel, the daughter of Deputy Sheriff Leonard Chase, of this town. Mr. Hood came here a few months ago from Edmunston, in Victoria country, N. B. His wife is in the State of Maine, where she is proceeding against him for divorce. Hood is in gaol pending investigation.

"Personal Purity."

A large audience listened to Dr. Hunter's lecture on "Personal Purity" in the Opera House last night. It was an able and forcible effort and no doubt will long be remembered by those present. The music rendered by the octette and orchestra was a pleasing feature.

The Lumber Business.

The Campbellford Herald says: Everything promises well for brisk "driving" on the Trent waters during the coming spring and summer. Gilmour's drive at Healey Falls, we understand, will be pushed through as soon as the ice clears the river; and their drive at Lakefield will follow it up shortly afterwards. These in addition to the new drives to be moved by both the Gilmour Co. and Rathburn Co. will make business active the greater part of the summer. The outlook for extensive lumbering operations is the best for a number of years.

A Tribute to Their Pastor.

The Quarterly Board of the George street Methodist church have passed the following complimentary resolution: This Quarterly Board rejoices in the fact that under the pastorate of the Rev. W. R. Young the church has enjoyed great peace and continued prosperity, financial and spiritual. At no time in the history of the congregation has there prevailed greater confidence and love between pastor and people, and at no time has there existed in the congregation a higher spiritual life. This Board gives thanks to the Great Head of the church and tenders to their beloved pastor their congratulations, and offer to him their continued sympathy and support.

A Painful Accident.

Mr. George Riddell met with an accident on Friday which will lay him aside from work for a few weeks. He was employed at the picker in the Messrs. Routh's woolen mill, and having occasion to stop the machine he threw off the belt, and soon afterwards put his hand into the opening to clean it out, thinking the cylinder had ceased revolving. He made a mistake, however, as the teeth of the cylinder, which was still moving, came into contact with his hand and tore the flesh into shreds, but fortunately no bones were broken. As soon as Mr. Riddell shouted, Robert Reynolds, who was in the room, ran to his assistance and stopped the cylinder. Dr. Carlaw dressed the wounds. —Campbellford Herald.

Waif on the Doorstep.

On Sunday evening last there was an increase in one of the families of Campbellford in an unexpected way. A fine, plump little baby boy was left upon the doorstep of the dwelling, and it is now being cared for by its alleged grandmother. The little waif who is about one year and six months old, has been tenderly cared for since birth by its mother who is said to reside in the neighborhood of Frankford. It was comfortably wrapped up, and was none the worse for having had a berth outside the building for a short time. Its mother who is not in good circumstances, claims that a certain member of the family where the little one was left, has a better right to its care than she has, and she took this means of settling the matter, it is said, after having failed in getting money from the proper source for its support. The child will continue to receive kind treatment.

A Clever Trick.

The Watchman says: On Saturday evening a sneak thief attempted to get in his fine work. While passing Messrs. Johnston & Simon's boot and shoe establishment he attached a hook to a pair of rubbers and then carefully played out a long line of cord until he reached a hallway and carelessly threw the ball of string into the same, the intention being to return in a few minutes, haul in the line and gather unto himself the rubbers and any other merchandise that might be attached. Fortunately, the small boy in the store commenced just at this time to take in the display goods and he discovered the "hook and string," and following the latter to its termination gathered it up, and thus the sneak thief failed in his "catch" and lost his hook and line as well. The firm have lost a couple of pair of boots and think they went in a similar way. Merchants should keep a sharp lookout for similar schemes.

WOULD BE A BOON.

Howry & Sons Will Erect Mills Here if Proper Inducements Are Offered.

The J. W. Howry & Sons Lumbering Company, of Fenelon Falls, propose to erect immediately a large saw mill with double band saws and a large gang. In connection with this they will also build, equip and operate a large box factory and planing mill. The two will afford lucrative employment for 600 hands.

It is proposed to use steam power to operate these large concerns, the advantage of this motive power to them, existing in the fact that huge quantities of waste and refuse can thus be utilized as fuel, which otherwise would go to waste. While water power is plenty it would not, consequently be any advantage or inducement as far as location is concerned.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is very anxious to have the company erect these mills in Peterborough. The company is prepared to do so, providing some encouragement is offered them by the town.

The advantage to Peterborough of having these mills in operation here is inestimable. The concern is large, influential and wealthy and it would take them years to exhaust their immense timber limits. Six hundred men would be given employment, which would mean much to the business interests of the town and be a boon to trade.

Mr. L. D. Swan is in town in the interest of the project. A meeting of the Board of Trade and also of the Manufacturer's Committee of the Council will be held tonight. It is earnestly to be desired that both these committees take hold of the matter tonight and pass resolutions urging the Council to offer the Howry concern every reasonable inducement to erect their mills here.

VOLT HOCKEYISTS WIN.

They Beat Lindsay on the Rink Last Night in a Score of 4 to 1.

The hockey match last night between the Volts II and a team from Lindsay resulted in a victory for the home boys in a score of 4 goals to 1.

The ice was in a fearful condition and it was almost impossible to play at all. In the first half only two goals were scored, Lindsay getting the first and the Volts the second. In the second half there was more spirit in the game. The Volts had everything their own way and scored three successive goals. The teams lined up as follows:

Volts II		Lindsay
Kelley	Goal	Walton
Thorne	Point	Parkins
Knowles	Cover Point	Shannon
Clexton	Forwards	Rankin
Wilgar		McGeehan
McIntosh		Bigelow

Referee—W. Crossley.

CURLING NOTES.

The Lindsay Watchman says: On Saturday last the Bankers of Peterborough sent up a rink to play against the Bankers of Lindsay, and the teachers of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute came up to try conclusions with the staff of our institute. The Peterborough collegiate were represented by Mr. Fessenden, principal; Mr. Jeffers, English master; Mr. Drope, commercial master; and Mr. O'Brien, English master. They were the guests of our four pedagogues during the day. Both visiting teams after a keen contest and a very good game lost by six and five points respectively:—

Ashburnham Council and School Board will meet on Monday night.

The directors of the Catholic Benefit Association met last night.

Peterborough lodge, No. 111, I.O.O.F., met last night and conferred a degree.

The arbitrator's award in the outfall sewer matter can reasonably be expected next week.

The members of the Provincial Legislature visited the Agricultural College at Guelph yesterday.

The streets are in a very bad condition. County roads are reported to be full of pitchholes and almost impassable.

Miss L. Kennedy, of Peterborough, has been elected fifth vice-president of the district of the Bay of Quinte conference of young Methodists.

A man named Brown, from Saginaw, Mich., was accidentally killed while working in the woods for Howry & Co., last week. The unfortunate man had been working on the skidway, when something gave way and the man falling forward, a log rolled over him and crushed in his skull.

Troublesome bogus coins in the shape of 20 cent pieces are floating with good money, quite a number of them having been lately discovered in towns along the front. They are a good imitation in size, weight, stamp, appearance and "ring," and it requires some skill to detect them. Look carefully at money you take from strangers.

Next Monday night promises to be a great night for Oddfellows in Lindsay. The excellent degree team of Otonabee lodge, I.O.O.F., Peterborough, with a number of the members of the order, will visit Lindsay and exemplify the degree work. Large deputations from Bobcaygeon, Manilla, Sunderland, Cannington and Woodville are also expected, and a pleasant evening is guaranteed.

It is said that the people residing at Rush Point, in the township of Belmont, are considerably alarmed over what appears to be the outbreak of diphtheria in that locality. For several days past two children of Mr. Justice Alley, postmaster of that place, have been ill, and it is now [illegible] of Havelock, have pronounced their illness diphtheria. The township officials immediately called in session the Board of Health, to take proper steps for the safety of the community.

A dashing young deer hunter from the thrifty town of Galt, on his departure from an unsuccessful two weeks' outing in Lindsay recently, was the innocent object of a delightful sensation of appreciation, as it were. Among the passengers of the G.T.R. train on Tuesday evening last, going west on the main car our disappointed friend met an old acquaintance, a fair Belle of Port Hope, going on a business trip to the city. At the conductor's call of "all aboard," a fair fun loving Lindsay girl promptly produced a shower of rice and antiquated slippers that fairly covered the travellers, whose blushing surprise seemed to indicate to the onlooker that they "were in it."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Miss Brennan, of Hunter street, is visiting in Toronto.

Miss Celia McGee has returned from a visit with friends in Lindsay.

Mr. George J. Riddell, of Toronto, is stopping at the Snowden House.

Mr. Thomas Lytle, of Peterborough, spent Monday in town.—Watchman.

Mrs. Dr. Harrison and daughter and Miss Campbell, of Keene, are visiting friends in town.

Mr. William Carter, of Peterborough, was the guest of Mr. Joseph Carter last week.—Hastings Star.

Mr. L. D. Swan, of Howry & Co., Fenelon Falls, is in town and made THE TIMES a welcome call yesterday.

Miss Emma Smith, of Ashburnham, is a delegate at Havelock from the Mark street Methodist Sunday School.

Mrs. (Mayor) Kendry is attending the S. S. convention as a delegate from the George street Methodist Sunday School.

Mr. C.S. McDonald, representing Heintzman & Co., piano manufacturers, is in town in the interest of the firm and made THE TIMES a call. Mr. McDonald is well-known in Peterborough and vicinity, having sold a large number of pianos in this district. The Heintzman piano is the acknowledged peer on the market today, and more of them have been sold in this country than of any other make.

EAST PETERBORO' RIDING.

Editor of the Times.

The Liberal-Conservatives of East Peterborough meet at Norwood next Tuesday to select a candidate for the Commons. In view of the rumored retirement of Mr. Burnham, who has definitely, we understand, declared that he will not again be a candidate, the selection of his successor is a matter of some importance to the party. Among the names mentioned is that of Mr. J. B. Pearce, reeve of Norwood, who has been a faithful and consistent Conservative for many years, and would make a good representative if elected. But Mr. Pearce does not seem to have any political aspirations, and so Dr. Brennan, of Peterborough is most favorably considered as a possible candidate. Dr. Brennan is a young man who takes a prominent part in Peterborough politics, and his long residence in Norwood and Hastings has made him as well known in the eastern part of the riding as in the west, where he resides. He is active and energetic, and if he accepted the nomination he would no doubt make a strong fight in this important constituency.

Norwood Feb. 27.

EAST PETERBOROUGH FARMER.

The Business World.

W. W. Pegg, the well-known Newmarket money-lender, is offering to compromise. Mr. Pegg has large assets, but the Bank of Commerce, to which he is indebted is forcing him to realize and he cannot do so at once. The creditors of Pollock & Co., dry goods, Trent Bridge, will meet this afternoon in Assignee Tew's office. R. J. Davidson, general storekeeper, Newmarket, has assigned to E. J. Henderson. A receiver is to be appointed for McRae & Co., Ottawa, dealers in cements. J. Bonner & Son, proprietors of woollen mills at Owen Sound, are reported to be financially embarrassed. The Uxbridge Piano and Organ Manufacturing Co. (Ltd.) is winding up. A new firm will continue the business.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

HYAMS MORE HOPEFUL.

YESTERDAY'S EVIDENCE WAS ALL IN THEIR FAVOR.

Dr. King Did Not Think the Wounds Were Caused by the Chisel—Wells Applied in Person and Alone for the $30,000 Policy.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 1.—It is apparent that a feeling of deep unrest permeates the Hyams twins, who were again brought before Colonel Denison this morning on a charge of having murdered William C. Wells at the old Hyams warehouse on Colborne street two years ago. They show today that they are far from being afraid of having the fullest inquiry made, and they are, to all outward appearances, sanguine of the final result.

The counsel for the prisoners were delayed and did not reach police headquarters until nearly 11 o'clock. Magistrate Denison had told the barristers for the accused that he would be ready at 10.30, so there was a wait which was filled by the prisoners and the large crowd of spectators by discussing the evidence that has been adduced and is expected to be adduced hereafter.

A POINT FOR THE DEFENCE.

The first witness called was H. B. Patton, of the Yonge street branch of the Imperial Bank, who was called to show Martha Wells' account in the bank subsequent to March, 1893. Mr. Johnston strenuously objected to the evidence, but his Worship considered it admissible.

Witness swore to the signature of H. P. Hyams endorsed on a check, given for $2,000 by Martha Wells Hyams, his wife, in June, 1893, and another check for $7,964 to Dallas Hyams in September.

Mr. Johnston objected to this evidence, as he contended that neither of these checks were given by Martha Wells but by Mrs. H. P. Hyams.

The checks were not allowed in evidence as the Crown could not prove the signature.

THOSE CUTS ON HARRY HYAMS' HANDS.

The cross examination of Dr. Edmund E. King was then proceeded with.

He said: "From what I heard and saw I think it quite consistent that the abrasions of the skin on Harry Hyams' hands the day of the tragedy could have been caused by Hyams taking hold of a frosty iron weight."

Witness was satisfied when he visited the warehouse the day Wells was killed that deceased had been in the act of jumping away when the weight struck him and smashed in his skull. The red fresh blood which he saw indicated that Wells had been struck violently and suddenly by the weight, which theory was quite compatible with the story told to him by Harry Hyams. The crush in the skull above the right eye was wide enough to admit of a man's finger and perhaps a little more.

"If this weight had been resting upon the lad's head after he was struck and the body was pulled away would a pool of blood be left where the separation of the body and weight was made?"

"Oh yes; it would be quite reasonable to expect a pool of blood at that point."

"If any person had been close at hand when the wound was inflicted would you expect them to be spattered with blood?"

"Yes, I would expect to find the clothing of the one close by pretty freely spattered with blood."

A CHISEL COULD NOT HAVE CAUSED THE WOUNDS.

"Do you think that the chisel found in the cellar could have produced the wounds on Wells' head?"

"No, I do not think so."

"Did you think that the story of the weight having fallen and killed Wells was reasonable?"

"Yes, it seemed to me the most probable solution of the fatality."

WHY HE SUMMONED THE CORONER.

Mr. Curry, re examining the witness—"Why did you consider it necessary to summon the coroner?"

"Because there were only two persons in the basement; I considered it an accident, but for fear something might subsequently transpire I was not satisfied to take chances and thought it would be safer to call in a coroner."

Mr. Johnston objected to the Crown Attorney badgering his own witness, but Mr. Curry said that he was doing nothing of the sort, claiming that he was simply doing his duty and nothing more.

To the Magistrate—"Wells' hands had no gloves on when I saw him and if Witness Fox said there were gloves on the dead man's hands I am satisfied that he is mistaken."

HE READ IT IN THE PAPERS.

The next witness called was John Wright, a plumber at 403 Yonge street. He had known Hyams for about three years but did not hear of the killing of Wells until he saw it in the newspapers. The day after the funeral he went down to the Colborne street warehouse and saw Harry Hyams. Witness was shown the spot where the accident was alleged to have occurred. After seeing the hook he had remarked that it was strange that the hook should have got unfastened from the elevator rope. To him the elevator box moved up and down in an easy manner.

To Mr. Johnson—"I was quite short sighted at the time that I visited the warehouse."

INSURANCE OF THE VICTIM.

Samuel W. Hughes, an insurance agent for the Covenant Mutual, testified as to the insurance of Willie Wells. The deceased was insured for $2,000 in two different policies of $1,000 each, and Harry Hyams paid the premium on the second policy. Mrs. Aylesworth was also insured in the company.

Mr. Johnston objected to this evidence on the ground that the witness was not in possession of the documents.

To Mr. Johnston—"When Hyams paid the premium I do not remember his having said that he owed Willie some money and would pay the premium on the insurance policy for him, but such conversation may have taken place."

Witness said that the amount paid by Hyams was only a small matter, being simply an $8 membership fee.

Before leaving the box witness admitted that he went to Wells and persuaded him to have his life insured.

WELLS APPLIED ALONE.

George Henry Grundy, agent for the New York Life Insurance Company, swore that he knew Wm. C. Wells, and took two policies on his life, one in June and the other in September of 1892. Deceased first insured for $1,000, saying he would take more later on. The second policy was for $30,000, but witness did not know the amount until he came to make out the policy. The beneficiary was Martha Wells. He fixed the date of the second policy on Sept. 30. Wells was medically examined by Dr. Temple. The deceased made both applications for this insurance and on neither occasion was Hyams present.

Upon one visit in connection with the first policy Aylesworth asked witness what commission he would give if he, Aylesworth, got witness a $30,000 policy. Witness said, "Oh, ten per cent." Aylesworth, pointing across the table to Wells, said, "There's your man."

Witness believed that after Wells took out the insurance policy for $30,000 deceased gave Aylesworth a couple of notes for his commission. The insurance money was subsequently paid to Martha Wells after some delay had been occasioned in proving the death of Wells. The check was for $30,000 odd dollars.

Witness did not think that the premium on the $30,000 policy was paid with a $500 bill as had been stated in previous evidence.

To Mr. Johnston witness said he had a talk with Wells as to his means for carrying so large a policy. Wells told him that he had an income from some property down at Pickering and some other property in Somerset, England.

Witness then felt satisfied that the risk was all right, and he went to the Hyams brothers and tried to insure them. He succeeded in taking a risk on Dallas Hyams' life for $60,000. Before witness succeeded in getting young Wells to insure he explained the whole scheme to him and showed him three different plans. The deceased finally decided that the endowment policy would be the most profitable risk to him.

The evidence of the morning went to show that the prisoners had a mania for insurance.

The court adjourned at 1.30 for an hour and a half.

A JURY WILL DECIDE

Whether or not Luella Lacey Poisoned an 18-Months-Old Baby.

Special to the Times.

HAMILTON, March 1.—The Grimsby poisoning case was put through its preliminary stages yesterday, when Luella Lacey, the 13-year-old servant-girl of Thomas Pearson, South Grimsby, was arraigned before Magistrate Forbes on a charge of administering carbolic acid to the 18-months-old boy, causing its death.

The girl was defended by Mr. Lancaster, and pleaded not guilty. Mr. Brennen, of St. Catharines, conducted the prosecution.

Testimony was offered to show that no one but the prisoner was in the house with the child at the time of the poisoning, and that the bottle could not possibly be reached by the infant.

The prisoner was committed for trial at the Assizes, which open in St. Catharines next week.

A PUZZLE FOR DOCTORS.

Over Fifteen Hours Unconscious After Inhaling Gas, with Pulse Normal.

Special to the Times.

TERRA HAUTE, Ind., March 1.—Samuel Backus went to bed last night and accidently left a light burning in his room. The odor of escaping gas was noticed today. The door was burst open and Backus was found unconscious.

A physician worked over him all day, but failed to rouse him from a comatose state. His pulse is normal and his breathing regular. The medical men who have seen him are completely baffled by his condition.

Only two cases are on record of persons overcome by gas who have remained unconscious for over fifteen hours and recovered. Backus has passed the fifteenth hour and is still alive.

DIED AT BELLEVILLE.

Henry McCarthy, a Popular Young Man, Passes Away.

Special to the Times.

BELLEVILLE, March 1.—Henry McCarthy a popular young man of this city, died at nine o'clock this morning after an illness of eighteen months from consumption.

He had been employed with Wallbridge & Clarke, grocers and wine merchants, until taken ill. He was 26 years of age and unmarried. He was a member of Moira Lodge of Masons and Court Quinte, A.O.F. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon.

COUNTY CONSTABLES

Forming a Provincial Association at Hamilton.

Special to The Times.

HAMILTON, March 1.—The Dominion county constables met here today for the purpose of organization. About 75 were in attendance this morning. Constable Thomas Wasson, of Toronto, president of the York County Constables' Association, is the likely candidate for president.

The association will apply to the Dominion and Provincial Parliaments for a return to the old scale of constables fees.

JAPS RETREATING

From Their Advanced Position at Wei-Hai-Wei—China Must Give Up.

Special to the Times.

CHEFOO, March 1.—The Japanese are evacuating their advanced position at Wei-Hai-Wei. Ninghai, a town lying about midway between Wei-Hai-Wei and this city, has been abandoned. The greater part of the Japanese army which has been operating on the Shan-Tung peninsula has re embarked upon transports, which have left Wei-Hai-Wei for Talien Wan, on the Liau-Tung peninsula, almost directly across the Gulf of Pe-Chi-Li from Wei-Hai-Wei.

KING OF CANAL STREET DEAD.

He Died from Pneumonia Contracted at a Cock Fight in Canada.

Special to the Times.

BUFFALO, March 1.—Hank Kilcourse, the "King of Canal street," and the greatest dog and cock-fighter of Buffalo, died last night at a hospital from pneumonia contracted at a cocking main which he attended about four weeks ago in Canada.

Manitoba Stands Firm.

WINNIPEG, March 1.—The Fisher amendment in the Manitoba Legislature was defeated by the Greenway Government by 22 to 10. On the same division Attorney-General Sifton's resolution declaring that Manitoba would tolerate no interference in its school affairs was carried.

A Fire at Markham.

MARKHAM, March 1.—Fire destroyed H. C. Clendenning's stable early this morning. It was insured in the Royal for $100.

DeBarry Still at It.

BUFFALO, March. 1.—Inspector DeBarry yesterday deported William Nichols, a farm hand from Niagara Falls, Ont, who had been engaged by Frank Randall, of Ripley, Chautuqua county. He was to receive $160 for nine months' labor, besides his board, lodging and washing, and at the end of the nine months he intended to return home again.

MARTER'S CRITICISM.

The Provincial Treasurer concluded his budget speech shortly after five o'clock, occupying two hours in its delivery. Mr. Marter, leader of the Opposition, followed and severly criticized the workings of the survey and colonization road branches of the Crown Lands department. He also attacked the Education department and took the Minister of Agriculture to task for a recent speech at London.

HYAMS' TRIAL GOES ON.

HARRY TOOK HOME BLOOD-STAINED TROUSERS TO BE WASHED.

A Servant's Startling Evidence—Miss Mable Latimer Employed as Stenographer in the Warehouse Tells Her Story in the Box.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—Colonel Denison made a rush through the list of accused petty offenders at the Police Court this morning, and then the Hyams twins were ushered into his Worship's presence looking much brighter than they did yesterday and dressed identically as before. There was an interested crowd inside the court room and a much disgusted gathering outside the front door of Headquarters, and if there is a man in Toronto cordially detested by a thousand citizens who, it may be said, have the honor to be unknown to the police, it is the big "cop" who this morning is acting as doorkeeper at the house of Justice on Court street.

Dallas Hyams especially was quite chipper this morning, and he even chatted with the riff raff crowd that swayed about though separated from him by the iron railing of the prisoners' dock.

THE TYPE WRITER'S STORY.

When the docket had been cleared of everything except the sensational murder case, Miss Mabel Latimer was called as the first witness for the Crown. She testified that Harry Hyams instructed her to deliver a letter to a party in Deer Park and another to a party across the Don before going to work on the morning that young Wells was killed. She did as Hyams ordered and reached the Colborne street warehouse about a quarter before noon on Monday.

The first person she met there was Harry Hyams, who said that there had been an accident in the basement and that Willie Wells had been killed. Witness asked him how it happened and he replied that his brother was upstairs fixing the weight when it slipped and fell on Willie.

"In what condition was Harry Hyams when you saw him?"

"He was standing there with his hands scratched, and he said it had been caused by lifting the weight from Willie Wells' head."

"Was there blood on his hands?"

"Yes, I think there was."

On being cross-examined by Mr. Johnston, witness said that she was sorry, but not particularly excited, when she heard that Wells was killed.

"I want you to tell me whether you ever thought of this conversation with Harry Hyams after the 16th of January, 1893, and before you saw the story in the newspapers?"

"Well, I'm not sure, but I think I have."

Witness would swear that she could give word for word the conversation between herself and Harry Hyams the day of the tragedy. She said that subsequent to the tragedy she did not deliver any messages but was sent out by the Hyams to look at furniture.

"Oh! They wouldn't trust Aylesworth, so they sent you?"

At this juncture Crown Attorney Curry jumped out and objected to Mr. Johnston's remarks.

"If you want to make any remark's," said the Crown Attorney, "make them when the case comes before a jury."

DEFENCE SURE OF ACQUITTAL.

"Don't be the least bit afraid, my learned friend," retorted Mr. Johnston, "the case will never go to the jury."

Addressing the witness: "Will you swear that you did not say to Mr. Palin on the day of the tragedy: 'Oh, Mr. Palin, did you hear about the accident,' and when he asked how it happened you said, 'the elevator weight fell on Willie and killed him?'"

"I don't remember it, but I may have said that."

Witness could not remember any conversation down town that day other than that with Harry Hyams. Neither could she fix one occasion during the next three months when he had had a conversation with Palin, although she might have been talking to him.

Miss Latimer saw carpenters at work about the elevator, but she did not know what they were doing. She knew that the 16th January was a cold day and they had a stove going in the office downstairs.

"Did Wells ride a bicycle?"

"Yes he rode a wheel and was in the habit of riding around the warehouse and sometimes near the elevator."

Witness said she had frequently gone home for dinner and left the Hyams alone in the warehouse.

Re-examined by Mr. Curry, witness said she was engaged as typewriter and stenographer, but had none of that work to do. All she did was to address envelopes.

To Mr. Johnston—"All the books I saw was a directory. The Hyams appeared to be endeavoring to lay the foundation for a sort of mercantile agency."

Mr. Johnston was pressing hard for answers to questions such as this, when Mr. Curry sprang to his feet again and protested stoutly but his Worship asked the Crown Attorney to allow Mr. Johnston to proceed with his cross examination. Mr. Curry did so with reluctance and Mr. Johnston observed:

"My learned friend appears to be very nervous this morning; yesterday's examination could not have been considered very satisfactory to him."

After some further cross firing between counsel, and the crowd had had their laugh, the cross examination was proceeded with.

THE WITNESS WAS COOL.

This young lady gave her evidence in the coolest sort of fashion and acted toward the counsel for the prisoners as if it was none of his business what she had to say concerning the tragedy. Mr. Johnston, however, soon gave the witness to understand that she was there to give her testimony and that it would be better for her to separate herself from such an independent bearing as she manifested until after she had told what she knew in connection with the case.

THE HYAMS' SERVANT.

Mrs. Lizzie Penjilley the woman who was engaged as servant at the Gould street residence the time of the tragedy, was next examined. She swore that the Hyams brothers went to work together the day Wells was killed. Between 10 and 11 o'clock the same morning Dallas returned looking very much troubled, and said that Willie Wells had met with an accident.

Subsequently Harry Hyams came home and the next day gave witness a pair of trousers to wash. There were spots of blood below the knees and witness could not get them out by washing. She took the trousers back to the room occupied by Dallas Hyams and his wife, as she thought they belonged to Dallas.

Some time after that Mrs. Dallas Hyams sent the trousers to the dyers. During her service at the Hyams house witness was more than once made the recipient of gifts from the brothers, but she did not know why they were given.

KINDHEARTED BUT NERVOUS.

To Mr. Johnston witness said the prisoners were timid, nervous sort of men and easily excited. They were also kind hearted men. The trousers on which the blood was found were light drab colored and the spots were about the size of pin heads. Dallas Hyams, who remained in the house for fully three days after the fatality, told the witness that if any person called to tell them that he could not see them.

The court then adjourned.

MENTAL AND PHYSICAL SUFFERING THE CAUSE

Paine's Celery Compound Effects a Wonderful Cure for Mrs. Alfred Perry, of Port Maitland, N.S.

Nervous prostration, sleeplessness, mental depression, despondency, general weakness, and a run-down physical condition, are troubles from which multitudes suffer.

These dreadful troubles respect neither sex, age, class or rank; the victims are found at all times and in all places.

While it is a fact that thousands are laid on beds of suffering, it is also true that tens of thousands are barely able to drag along from day to day, being in such a half-dead state.

Soon—ah, too soon—will the ailing ones be numbered with those who are laid up from the sufferings, agonies and torments that nervous diseases generate.

In the midst of present sufferings, gloom and despair, there shines a great and glorious light of hope, comfort and assurance. A curing agent that the world has lauded, praised and extolled, lifts its mighty hand ready to deliver from the grave.

This life-saver and deliverer from disease and death—Paine's Celery Compound—never fails in its mission of curing and restoring to health and strength. Thousands have testified, and fresh testimonials pour in every week.

Mrs. Alfred Perry, wife of A. Perry, merchant and ship builder, gives important testimony as to the value of Paine's Celery Compound for nervous troubles and the results that flow from them. She was fully and completely cured. For the benefit of sufferers she writes as follows:—

"For two years my system was all run down, and I suffered more than I can describe from nervous prostration and insomnia; at times I almost lost my reason from severe pain at the base of the brain. My husband advised me to try Paine's Celery Compound, which I did and the effects were wonderful. I soon began to sleep well; the pain left my head; my whole system was strengthened, and I am now enjoying very good health.

"I would cheerfully recommend Paine's Celery Compound to any one suffering from like troubles. You have my best wishes for the future success of your excellent remedy."

THIRTY-NINE KILLED.

A TERRIBLE MINE DISASTER IN NEW MEXICO.

Eleven of the Men Rescued from a Frightful Death—Appropriation for the Homeless—A Brooklyn Trolley Victim.

Special to the Times.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., Feb. 28.—A terrific explosion of gas occurred in the White Ash mine of the Santa Fe Railway Co., three miles from Cerrillos, at 11 o'clock, causing the death of at least 39 miners. The first intimation of the disaster was a muffled roar and clouds of smoke and dust rolling from the mouth of the mine. Nearly 300 men are employed in the mine, but only 50 were at work when the explosion took place. Only 11 of them escaped alive and some of them may yet die. Twenty-nine dead bodies have been taken from the mine, and it is doubtful if those remaining are alive. Relays of men have been working heroically all day to reach those who are still imprisoned in the mine, but little progress can be made on account of the gas which prevailed in every shaft and overpowers the workers in a short time. Up to 4 yesterday evening those on the inside could be heard trying to work their way out of the

CAVED-IN MINE,

but as nothing has been heard since then the imprisoned men in all probabilty have succumbed to the deadly gas. The mine was know to be badly ventilated and full of bad air and gas, and a catastrophe of this kind has been frequently predicted. A bill was introduced in the New Mexico Legislature this evening to appropriate $5,000 for the relief of the widows and orphans. It will probably pass. The cause of the explosion is not yet known, and the facts are hard to get at. All the efforts of the men in the vicinity are being put for to liberate those imprisoned in the mine.

TROLLEY VICTIM.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 28.—Gustave Carlson, 11 years old, was killed this afternoon. The lad was returning to school when, as he attempted to cross Humboldt street, he was struck by a car of Meeker ave. trolley line and instantly killed. Thos. Dugan while assisting in lifting the car from the boy's body had his leg fractured. This is the 100th victim of trolley cars since their introduction here.

FATALLY BURNED.

BUFFALO, Feb. 28.—Josie Siehafske, aged 15, was fatally burned this afternoon. Her dress caught fire from a bon fire which had been built to thaw out a switch on the N.Y. Central R. R. tracks near her home.

Attempted Bigamy.

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. Feb. 28.—George Hood, a merchant tailor, was arrested here, charged with attempting to contract a bigamous marriage with Ethel, the daughter of Deputy Sheriff Leonard Chase, of this town. Mr. Hood came here a few months ago from Edmunston, in Victoria country, N. B. His wife is in the State of Maine, where she is proceeding against him for divorce. Hood is in gaol pending investigation.

FIRED ON THE YANKEE.

An Unknown British Man-of-War said to have Peppered an Unknown American

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—A dispatch from Colon Colombia, says:—The Faith, a coasting sloop, which arrived here yesterday from Bocas Del Toro, brought the news of the French conflict at Bluefields. The Faith met two British schooners, the Dauntless and the Brothers at Bocas Del Toro. The masters of the schooners reported that while they were at Bluefields, two weeks before, an American ship, whose name they did not know, arrived there.

The British Consul at Bluefields was informed that she had on board arms imported by Samuel Weil, The American ship left Bluefields for Cape Gracias Adios north of Bluefields. The British man-of-war followed her there and found her landing two boatloads of arms. The Britisher fired on her, carring away her mast.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The British Foreign Office has no information of the reported french trouble at Bluefields, or of alleged disabling of an American ship by a British man-of-war.

"CATHOLIC PRIESTHOOD."

An Ex-Priest Almost Mobbed in Georgia

Special to the Times.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 27.—Savannah escaped a riot tonight through the intervention of the militia. The trouble was started by ex Priest Joseph Slaters' lecture on "The Roman Catholic Priesthood." For several days efforts have been made by members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians to revoke the ex-priest's permit to deliver the lecture, but the Mayor, upon legal advice, replied that it could not be done. Threats were openly made against the lecturer, and the chief of police and a detail of officers were ordered on duty at the hall where the lecture was to be delivered. The militia had to be called out to preserve the peace.

A TEXAS PASTIME.

Seven Highwaymen Held Up a Train near a Big City.

Special to the Times.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 28.—At 8 o'clock last night the north bound Houston & Texas Central train as it stopped at the intersection of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, five miles north of here, was held up by seven highwaymen who covered the engineer with sixshooters. They forced a porter to uncouple the train from the engine, baggage and express car.

Three of the robbers stepped into the cab and forced the engineer to pull a distance of half a mile. There they compelled Express Messenger A. H. Harris, of Wells Fargo & Co., to open his door and safe and tear open packages. There was no money, but the robbers took the express messenger's pistol. They shot away the headlight and ordered the engineer to back his train. In doing so the engineer collided with the rest of the train bursting the bumpers.

On the train was a party of ladies returning from the Moody meeting being held here. They all went to praying, one of them leading off with "Oh Lord, thou who rescued Daniel from the lion's den, deliver us, we beseech Thee, from the hands of these bandits." The sheriff is out with bloodhounds trying to run down the robbers.

TO BOYCOTT THE G.T.R.

ANTI-CANADIAN CRUSADE STARTED BY TRANS-ATLANTIC STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

Grand Trunk Differential Passenger Rates in Favor of the St. Lawrence Route is the Cause of the Trouble.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The local managers of the Trans-Atlantic Steamship Company have sent a somewhat remarkable communication to the Trunk Line Association. In effect they call upon the railroads to boycott the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada and the Chicago and Grand Trunk, on immigration passenger business destined from New York to all points west.

If the trunk lines refuse to do this the steamship companies, although they do not so state in their letter, intend to break off relations with the Railroad Association and no longer allow immigrant passengers to be routed by the clearing house, as has been done for several years.

The grievance of the Steamship Companies is that the Grand Trunk, by paying a compensation of $6 apiece on all prepaid passengers routed via Montreal, while the trunk lines allow only $1.30, is diverting business away from New York to Canadian ports and hence the lines putting into New York are losing their legitimate share of the travel. There have been conferences about the matter for several days, and yesterday Secretary T. S. Sanford of the Trans-Atlantic Association obtained the signatures of all the leading companies doing business between this country and Europe. It is as follows:

New York, Feb. 26th, 1895.

"L. P. Farmer, Esq.,

"Commissioner Trunk Line Assn.

"Dear Sir.—The Grand Trunk Railway persists in discriminating against the port of New York by granting high commissions on immigrant business via Montreal which cannot be secured by us. We therefore request that until further notice you do not route any immigrant business by the Grand Trunk and Chicago and Grand Trunk."

CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

The steamship lines represented in this letter are: The North German Lloyd, the Hamburg American, the White Star, the Cunard, the International Navigation Company, the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, the Netherland American Steam Navigation Company, the Fabre line, the Thingvalla line and the Anchor line.

The steamship people feel very much aggrieved over the present condition of affairs, and they propose, if necessary, to take things into their own hands and make a deal with some one railway that is willing to allow the best commissions, leaving all the other railroads out in the cold. If this is done, the boycotted trunk railways will lose one of their best sources of revenue. The Grand Trunk allows six dollars apiece on all prepaid passengers routed via Montreal, while the trunk line roads allow but one dollar and a half, and this commission is on the basis of tickets sold to Chicago, the commissions to points beyond being proportional. The net difference between New York and Montreal and Quebec is still greater, since the open tariff rate to the public is $13 from New York to Chicago, while it is only $11.50 from Montreal to Chicago; in other words the G. T. R. carries passengers from Montreal to Chicago for a net rate of $5.50 each.

WHAT THE RATES ARE.

The local steamship managers at first made individual protests against this practice to several roads, demanding that the matter be taken up with the Western lines with a view to settling the controversy between the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific, with whom the trouble started. The trunk lines did nothing, and the steamship men became impatient. If their present demand is ignored they purpose taking some such action as that outlined, of sending all their immigration business over one line and boycotting the others.

Heretofore the steamship companies have allowed the immigrant clearing-house to route passengers over any route they saw fit, and the steamship lines paid the established fares; and, as the business originates with the steamship lines, they think they can convert it as they please. Immigrant passengers are now divided equally among the eight trunk lines, and these mostly send their immigrants over the Grand Trunk lines. So, too, the Grand Trunk eastern business in return is given to these lines in preference. Thus the Grand Trunk will have an offset should the railway companies or any of them fall in with the steamship companies' demand for a boycott of its line.

JOHN L. AND TEMPERANCE.

The Ex-Champion Pugilist's Next Fight May Be Against the Liquor Traffic.

Special to the Times.

JEFFERSON, Fla., Feb. 28.—Poor old John L. Sullivan, as a last resort, may become a temperance advocate. Not that he is a shining light in the fight against the liquor traffic, but he is broke financially and must get something to do at once. To-day the ex champion received the following note from Col. K. D. Chandler, editor of a temperance organ here:

"If you sign the temperance pledge I will contract with you to travel with me over the country in the temperance cause. There will be big money in it. Millions of people would go to see and hear Sullivan, the reformed drunkard, who have only abuse for him now as a pugilist or an actor."

Some of his friends say Sullivan is thinking very seriously of taking up Chandler's offer.

Sacrilegious Legislators.

JEFFERSON, City, Mo., Feb. 28.—The Senate and House have defeated bills prohibiting Sunday baseball, Sunday theaters and similar amusements. The bill prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors was killed, and a bill authorizing pool-selling and book-making on race courses during the race season on either home or foreign events has been passed.

More Canadians Deported.

BUFFALO, Feb. 27.—Inspector De Barry sent Daniel Near and Walter Gracy back to Canada yesterday. The men came to this city to get work, and the inspector decided there were enough Buffalonians out of employment to fill any vacant positions.

Killed His Mother and Himself.

ALFORD, MAINE, Feb. 28.—Leroy A. Fernald, who murdered his mother in their home in East Lebanon yesterday morning, and after setting the building on fire ran to an attic to await death in the flames, was found dead in his cell in the jail where he was brought last night. Leroy was insane.

Attempted Suicide.

KINGSTON, Feb. 28.—Driver Kennedy, a member of "A" battery, attempted to commit sucide yesterday by hacking his throat with a penknife. He was detected in the act, and, therefore, his injuries are slight. He was under arrest at the time. Kennedy was at one time a member of the Irish Fusiliers. He was discharged from the Battery this morning.

Common Sense Separates Chaff from Wheat

THIS SHOULD ALSO BE APPLIED BY THE SICK WHEN USING MEDICINES

Drugging the system while waiting for symptoms to develope is an abomination and causes much trouble.

Not all is Gold that Glitters
Neither are all Diseases caused by Microbes

Experience has proven that microbes are the causative factors in producing all zymotic or contagious diseases, and also give rise to many minor ailments of the system not contagious; but to claim that ALL DISEASES are caused by them is not only a fallacious idea, because the contrary can be proven, but should be a warning to the public to beware of such who advertise their crude wares to cure upon the strength of such misstatements. Only ignoramuses or humbugs will assert that such is probable. Not a single physician of any school anywhere would endorse such a ridiculous statement. Ask any medical man whether sunstroke, seasickness, delirium tremens, hernia prolapsus uteri, shaking palsy, sickness from smoking or chewing, writers' cramps, corns and many others too numerous to mention here are caused from or manifestations of microbes. No doubt that germs do play a role assigned to them by the Creator AFTER SUCH DISEASES have got started need exist; but they are not the cause. The sick owe it to themselves to just quietly read "Modern Progress of Medical Science," and if not able to do so those who have charge of them should do this and it will surely enable them to see how simple it is after all to understand the human system, with its wonderful but natural functions of life and death, health and disease, when the common sense with which an all-wise Creator has endowed all is fully exercised in seeking light.

Humanitarians, philanthropists, scientists and all whose paths midst life's uncertainties, are, fortunately for the common welfare of mankind, so placed, as to glean the kernels of truth from the nutshells of mystery surrounding our existence, at once place their discoveries before their lesser fortunate brothers, without price or hope of reward, but for the sake of doing well, and for the spreading of which great truths, that grandest of all modern discoveries exists, "the printing press." No living being of the present age should be without a knowledge of physiology and hygiene, pertaining to human existence, and where not able to have access to public libraries, or to purchase costly works, should subscribe for some good newspaper known to chronicle in detail any new discoveries from time to time upon the science of life. Best of all, however, send for a treatise of "Modern Progress of Medical Science," free to all who will mail their address to me. This treatise is a brief but concise description of modern discoveries, embracing the "importance of the microbe theory to the human race: Tyndall's first great discovery; the power of dogmatism; effects of bad air: Darwin's natural selection; how man grows hard with age; mineral waters and their fallacies; oxygen and oxgenator their definitious; and many minor, but equally important and interesting subjects. "Heaps of knowledge load our shelves; men know all things but themselves."

The author of this treatise is also the well known manufacturer of "Oxygenator," the greatest natural remedy ever produced. Many years have been spent by him in not only keeping up with all the latest discoveries emanating from the leading scientists of this modern age, but also much time and money in finally bringing to perfection from crude remedies the most perfect blood purifier ever known. "Oxygenator" is an oxydizing fluid; water chemically prepared, purified and surcharged with gaseous elements of an ozonous nature, which, when used as a medicine, at once acts upon the blood in a similar manner to cleanse it of its impurities or waste products as does the oxygen from the air when inhaled through the lungs. Disease germs, as well as impaired or weakened cells or tissues, are at once oxydized and rendered harmless by the way of the blood, which takes up the "Oxygenator" where so used and carries it to the seat of disease. It revitalizes all weakened cells and tissues by rendering inert those impurities or disease germs, whichever the cause may be, instead of destroying both the disease and diseased tissues also, as happens to be the fact in using certain crude remedies.

This remedy is only to be had from the manufacturer or his duly authorized agents, in order to guard the public against impositions.

WATTERS SENT TO GAOL.

EX-COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS SENTENCED FOR ONE YEAR.

A Plea of Technical Guilt Was Entered and the Charges Were Not Gone Into—Justice Sure and Swift.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—The case of the Crown against T. J. Watters, late assistant commissioner of customs, was called in the Police court this morning and adjourned until three, it being understood that Mr. Watters would then plead technically guilty to the five charges laid against him and elected to be tried summarily. At three o'clock the Police court was crowded. Messrs. D. O'Connor, Q.C., W. D. Hogg, Q.C., and J. H. Ritchie, Q.C., appeared for the Crown, and B. B. Osler, Q.C., and Alex. Ferguson for the defendant Watters. Mr. Osler stated that with great hesitation he had advised his client to plead guilty technically. A large amount of money passed through his hands and, morally speaking, the fact of funds remaining in his hands was only negligence. The books had been carefully gone over and every cent paid back. Mr. Watters had filled three offices and had had a promise of a parliamentary grant which had not passed. This left him a reasonable expectation of more funds and had made him use funds rightly belonging to the Crown and Mr. Watters by pleading guilty was entitled to consideration.

His Worship in giving sentence said that he had taken into consideration that Mr. Ritchie had been acting for the Minister of Justice, and as the matter had already been looked into it was not necessary for him to do so. As a warning for the future conduct of officers in a position of public trust he sentenced the prisoner to one year's imprisonment in the Carleton county gaol without labor.

HE IS A GAY DECEIVER.

PERCY P. GAUTHIER, ALIAS GOODRICH TOO MUCH MARRIED.

Wedded a 20-Year-Old Widow Although He Had a Wife and Two Daughters Living in Waterbury, Conn.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—It is the old story of a trusting woman and a wicked man.

A year ago there came to Toronto from the United States a man who went by the name of Percy P. Goodrich who worked at intervals for the Acme Silver Co. He passed as a bachelor and on Feb. 20, 1894, he was married by the Rev. Canon Sanson of Trinity Church to the 20 year old widow of Frederick Bietherwick, a machinist who died of consumption after two years wedded life. Mrs. Bietherwick had been a widow for a year and was living with her father James Legood, machinist, 517 Queen street east. Goodrich said his age was 25.

LEFT HER IN LESS THAN A MONTH.

Goodrich, as he called himself, took his bride to a Church street boarding house, and in less than a month left her, going to the States to look for work and promising to send for her. He gave her only enough money to pay a week's board. The young woman had letters from Goodrich dated Boston and Portland, the last being in July, but he ceased writing, and she never again saw him.

It now transpires that "Goodrich's" real name is Percy P. Gauthier, and that he is a bigamist. Strange rumors came to the ears of the young woman, and through Father La Marche, pastor of the French Roman Catholic church in King street east, it was learned that the gay deceiver had a wife in Waterbury, Conn.

A LETTER FROM HIS LEGAL WIFE.

She wrote to Waterbury and received a letter from Gauthier's first wife, who stated that she was married to him 22 years ago, when she was 20 years of age; that they had five children, of whom two girls, aged 16 and 14, are living.

Wife No. 1 gives Gauthier a bad reputation. She says he has not supported his family for years, and when he did live with them he was no good. She says that he is not a Protestant, as he represented here, but a Catholic, and she being of the same faith will not consent to a divorce. She expresses great pity for Mrs. Bietherwick in being deceived by the man who treated her and his children so badly.

Gauthier is now supposed to be in Philadelphia, where his mother lives.

WAS IT MURDER?

The Mangled Body of Robert Huson Found on the Railway Tracks at London—Suspicion of Foul Play—Was to Have Been Married Next Month.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 26.—The terribly mangled body of Robert Huson, who for some years was connected with the officers mess room at the military barracks here was found on the C.P.R. tracks, near Adelaide street, last night about eleven o'clock.

The victim's home is in Jarvis, Ont., and he was to have been married next month.

Suspicions of foul play are entertained and an inquest will be held at two o'clock this afternoon.

DR. BUCHANAN MUST DIE.

Court of Appeal Affirms His Conviction of Murder in the First Degree.

Special to the Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 26.—The Court of Appeals has affirmed the judgment in the lower court against Dr. Buchanan, in the latter's appeal in the celebrated murder to the court of last resort.

This was an appeal by Dr. Buchanan from a judgment of the Court of General Sessions of the county of New York, rendered Aug. 14, 1893, convicting him of murder in the first degree. The defendant was indicted June 9 in that year by the grand jury, charged with the crime of murder in the first degree in killing Anna Buchanan, his wife, by administering poison to her in the city of New York on April 22, 1892.

Buchanan came from Nova Scotia. He had procured a divorce from his wife. In New York, where he kept up his profession, he became acquainted with Mrs. Anna B. Sutherland, who was alleged to be a woman of questionable character. She kept a disorderly house in Newark, N. J. It was alleged that a few days prior to his marriage to the Sutherland woman she owned some property which she had disposed of in a will, leaving the entire estate to Buchanan.

After their marriage they went to live at No. 267 West Eleventh street, New York city. Mrs. Buchanan was taken ill, and Dr. McIntyre was called. He prescribed twice for her, and he and Dr. Watson held a consultation as to her disease. The woman died the following Saturday. The body was embalmed and interred in Greenwood cemetery, April 24, 1892, where it remained until June 5, 1892. It was then removed to the Carnegie laboratory.

Unmistakable signs of the presence of morphine were found in the stomach, and the expert opinion was that death was due to morphine. The trial attracted widespread attention, and continued for six weeks.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 2, 1895.

Good morning!

If it is true that our head policeman is in the employ of the Grand Trunk, he would be a very good official to remove.

Queen Victoria is thinking of creating a literary for England. It was an idea formed by the Prince Consort two years before his death.

Mayor Kendry does not like Mr. Sproule and a few others in the Council. The gentlemen referred to have an unpleasant habit of doing their duty.

Lent began on Wednesday last, and everybody is supposed to grovel in sackcloth and ashes and renounce the world the flesh and the devil for a time. That is what people are supposed to do. But there are precious few of them that do it.

It is pleasant to learn that our good old friend, Li Hung Chang was graciously received in his recent interviews with the Chinese emperor. But the nature of his reception from the other emperor when he goes to sue for peace will be more important.

There is a certain sentiment gathering in Peterborough that will compel the reorganization of the Town officials. Mayor Kendry may block the way for a brief time, but the feeling is becoming so strong that he or no other man or set of men can long stem the tide of popular discontent.

There seems to be some need of law reform in the State of New York! After a long-winded trial a murderer named Buchanan was, on the 1st of August, 1893, sentenced to death. Since that the murderer's counsel have been using every artifice of law to prevent the execution, and at length the decision of the court of last resort have been reached, and Buchanan must die. Had he had a sharper lawyer he might have died of old age.

The story is told of a German saloonkeeper in whose place the boys had a boistrous time. "Dey drank all mine seegars," complained Schneider, "und schmoked all mine peer. Dey trow mine pottles mit the vindow owat, und smashed mine vrow mit ein clob. I shtand dot; but ven dey kicked mine leetle dog I vas mat—mein gott, I vas mat!" Mayor Kendry is similarly pachydermatous. One may object to the wasting of a few odd thousands in useless litigation; or point out that Peterborough has more policemen than is necessary and more than its finances warrant; or insist that the service which costs the town so much money is no good; or advocate the overthrow of the Conservative party, he can "Shtand all dot." But when one ventures to utter a doubt as to the existence of a cotton or wollen combine, our worthy Mayor gets mad indeed.

The hearing of the appeal in the Manitoba schools case has been adjourned until Monday next, and if a further adjournment can be secured, it will not be gone on with then. It is freely predicted that the result will be that the Manitoba Legislature will be asked to pass an act legalizing stat aided Separate Schools, or relieving the Roman Catholics in some other way, although the Legislature has already declared officially that it will not change one jot from its present position. By following this course, however, the question of decisive legislation will be shelved for a time—long enough, probably to prevent it from coming to a boil until the elections are all over. This will be a great relief to the Ottawa politicians who have been on pins and needles ever since the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council was made public.

REALLY A CANADIAN LAKE.

A great deal of nonsense is being talked from time to time in connection with the various schemes for affording Hawaii cable connection with the outside world. It was proposed that the British cable from British Columbia to Australia ca there and give the commerce of these islands a chance; but the political cry was raised against the scheme and a lot of cheap folly talked about the fortresses with which Great Britain was striving to surround the United States. Now the American Congress is considering a proposal to lay a cable from San Francisco to the Islands, and the point is raised that the value of the commerce between the two countries would not justify the outlay. To this the New York Recorder loftily retorts that "these are the arguments of peanut politicians without the slightest appreciation of the immense national interests involved. The question of whether the cable will be commercially profitable is not worth one minute's consideration beside the vastly greater question whether the United States or great Britain shall hold the keys of the Pacific." They must made the petty fellow who thinks that in this Western world a cable is much more apt to be an instrument of trade than of war, feel pretty small. Continuing the Recorder says:

The control of the Pacific is certainly worth $500,000, whatever the cable may be worth as a commercial investment. The nation that becomes firmly established on the Hawaiian Islands will be ultimately the dominating power of the Pacific. That power will be either Great Britain or the United States. It must be the United States, for the Pacific is an American sea.

Now that is just where the Recorder is woefully astray. If it comes to a jingo jawing match, we shall feel compelled to remind our contemporary that the Pacific is in reality a Canadian lake! As for the cable, all concerned may depend upon it that the inexorable laws of trade will punish any kite-flying for glory's sake; and to refuse for political reasons to tap a cable going right by the gates of Honolulu is not in accord with the hard business sense of this age.

A NOBLE JUDGE.

As a prisoner on Thursday in Victoria B.C., was leaving the dock after having been sentenced to five years' imprisonment for robbery, he said, "Thank you, sir," which was interpreted as contempt of court. He was taken back and given three years additional for each word. So runs a news item which appeared in all the papers Saturday.

The judge capable of acting in such a petty, spoiled child fashion as that with a prisoner is better fitted to spend his life throwing bricks at the shadow of a black cat than in passing judgement on the erring. If the facts are substanitaly as stated in the despatch summarized above, there should be some head chopping done with as little delay as possible. An official inquiry should be made into the facts at once.

It is all very well to say that judges are human and are just as apt to let thier passions an feelings get the best of them as the rest of us. That is true. But not while they are on the bench. Judge Jones in private life and Judge Jones on the bench are different creatures or ought to be. If Judge Jones chooses to let his angry passions rise in private life, that is his own business and no one has the right to say a word. But when he does it on the bench he is guilty of an insult to the Majesty of the law, to the spirit of British fair play, to ordinary human intelligence. The course of the British Columbia judge in this matter affords a good ground for an investigation.

RETIREMENT OF SIR JOHN CARLING.

Sir John Carling's retirement as the member for London, at the close of the present parliament will terminate an active political career that has been as long continued and in many respects as notable as any in the history of our country. We agree with the London Free Press that it can be truly said that no public man in Canada has held for so long a period a larger measure of the respect, confidence and general esteem of his fellow citizens. Thus deservedly entrenched his election and re-election has been insured for a period extending over an average human lifetime, with only such interruption, from electoral misdoing on the other side, as the law was forced to take cognizance of. That this public respect and confidence is to-day as firmly rooted, and abiding as ever, was amply testified at the large and representative gathering on Friday night, in the standing vote and enthusiastic cheering accorded him, as well as in the expressions of loyal attachment which proceeded from every gentleman present, who was in any way to be regarded as eligible to be a party candidate in his stead That any other candidates were seriously thought of, in fact, was due to the knowledge that was widespread in the party ranks that Sir John had expressed his full determination to retire. He not only did not make any secret of his intention, but as long ago as the autumn months requested repeatedly to be given an opportunity to state his position publicly. There was a lingering hope, however, that the old, well-tried and trusted standard-bearer might be still open to persuasion and eventually induced to reverse that intention. But the decisive and emphatic declaration made by Sir John Carling from time to time to his friends and at occasional little meetings that were held, left no doubt of the entire sincerity of his purpose, and it was for this reason, and this alone, that other gentlemen allowed their names to be brought forward and put in nomination. When each in turn expressed a willingness to make way if Sir John should desire to stand for another term, we see no reason to believe that they were not equally sincere, or that there was hardly a man of them who would not have worked as zealously and heartily for his return as for any one else among them who should get the convention. Any man who may be chosen will be supported in the ensuing contest by a united and enthusiastic party, and there need be no fear of the result. The Conservative party was never stronger than it is at this moment in the cause that it has to uphold. In the past 15 years there has been no more urgent reason than there is to-dey for unity, in maintaining the trade policy that has been the country's mainstay amid universal depression, and when the Opposition is so fiercely pressing for measures both revolutionary and disastrous in tendency. It is a fight, when it comes, which will call forth the unity and strength of the Conservative party, as it should be evoked at a great and threatening crisis. The National Policy will be assailed with unexampled fury by those who will stick at no tariff resolution in hunger and thirst for office. And it will behoove every man who believes in the policy instituted by Sir John Macdonald, and maintained under each successive premiership since his time, to gird on his armor. Had Sir John Carling remained in the field, we have the fullest confidence that under his lead the campain would be victorious as so often of yore. There were special reasons why he should have been a candidate again, as referred to by several of the speakers at the meeting, namely, to teach his assailants that he had not been lessened in any degree in the regard of his former friends and supporters, and as a defiance to those who have sought to put a stain upon his character. But Sir John no doubt has felt that he has had that share of public honors with which a man ought to be content, and fully earned a respite from the field of action, which brings toil, anxiety and expense, along with honor and opportunity to serve his country and his fellow-citizens. He can point with just pride to a record unsurpassed in the history of the Canadian Parliament for creditable achievement in every branch of the work which he has had control of, and retires with unblemished fame as an honorable and upright politician.

POLITICAL UNCERTAINTY ACROSS THE LINES.

In default of any stiffening up of the old Democratic party, the leaders of thought across the border are begining to confess to a belief that the next Presidential election will be fought on quite new lines and by quite new organizations. The Boston Herald (Clevelandite) has a significant article on "the condition of the parties," in which it contends that "it is plain that there must be a new alignment of parties if there is to be any contest at all for the next presidency." It fully reviews the condition of the Democracy and argues that it was never so near annihilation as now—and this with nothing but disunion in its own ranks. Under present conditions, the Herald says, that the Republicans must "carry the next presidency, whatever they do;" and adds that there can be no genuine contest for the presidency until the parties are ranged against each other on the currency issue.

Simultaneously with this comes the news from Washington that a grand silver movement is on foot, which purposes to make the Presidental campaign in '96 a fight on the silver issue. Lecturers are to be sent out, we are told, and the country educated on the question. Mr. Bland, the silver leader in the present House of Representatives, is quoted as having said:

"It (the silver issue) ought to have been the principal issue two years ago, but we were then just emerging from the shadow of sectionalism and the Force Bill, and it was no time to divide on financial questions. But that time has now arrived, and the next contest will be waged between the free coinage men and those who oppose that proposition. Party lines will be obliterated, and this will be the one thing which will divide the voters of the country."

The significance of the simultaneous appearance of these two political conditions will not be lost on thinking men—one of the great parties in a state of disunion and collapse, and the rise of a new issue which offers a job to a new party. It may be that we in the gallery will have more to see on the stage of American politics in '96 than the rivalries between Republican leaders.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture, intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. dalé

THE LIME JUICE CLUB.

REGULAR WEEKLY MEETING OF THIS CHASE SOCIETY.

The Hall of Wisdom Once More the Scene of Elite and Fashion—The Spacious Building Crowded to the Doors—Important Matters Before the Club.

The President's table last night was decorated with several handsome boquets of flowers, a circumstance due to the thoughtfulness of the many lady admirers of Sir Richard. Long before eight o'clock the choicest seats had all been taken up, and when the triangle calling the meeting to order sounded, there was not a seat to be had in the spacious building. The visitors' gallery, as usual contained many well known faces, amongst whom might have been seen Messrs. T. E. Boddy, W. Bamford, Wm. Hayden, W. D. Parker, Dr. Yelland, Dr. Caldewell, Mayor Kendry, Rufus Stevenson, A. E. Peck, J. J. Lundy, G. W. Hatton, Alex. Elliott, John Nugent, J. J. McBain, Peter Hamilton, J. R. Stratton and many others.

HONESTY.

Talkaway Foulweather nearly upset the water pail in his haste to secure the floor to move the following resolution:

Whereas, honesty is the best policy, and

Whereas, the honest man is more certain of success than the dishonest one. Be it therefore

Resolved, that this club approves of honest measure, honest weight and honest size in man's transactions with man.

Whalelebone Hawker, of Lindsay, being asked for his experience, gave it as follows:

"I was the most honest man in Lindsay until a merchant in good standing in the church, sold me two cotton undershirts for all wool, and two of his cash boys beat me out of 20 cents change. On the same day my pound of coffee was short an ounce and a half, a peddler gave my wife a lead dollar, and the landlord lied me out of a week's rent, while Bro. Fortypercent Duncefort charged me two per cent a month for a small sum I owed him. The worm turned. I sat down and counted that I had started life with four hundred dollars, and had been reduced to about sixteen. I went out that night and stole a barrel of salt from a grocer, and before ten o'clock next day that very man had trusted me for four pounds of sugar—a thing he refused to do a thousand times before. From that date I have steadily gone up hill, sud to-day I would'nt surrender my property for less than three thousand dollars."

Fortypercent Duncefort, Anvil Davis, Henroost Bell, Jamfed Jones and Perforated Johnston all spoke to the same point, declaring that strict honesty was the highway to the poorhouse, and Sir Richard said:

"I am not a bit surprised. My own experience for the last forty years has taught me that the person who starts out to be strictly honest won't have potatoes on his table half the time. I don't counsel a man to be dishonest—far from it. I am down on a rogue first, last and all the time. But to what I desire is a course lying between stealing a red hot stove, and beating a street car out of a ride. If I go to the grocer and pay cash down, that grocer has no further use for me. (Wild cheers by mistake from Bro. Jack Cumming, of the Palace Grocery, who was promptly fined $300 and costs.) If I got trusted he keeps track of me and is anxious about my health and prospects. If I get trusted for thirty days, I can stand him off for 30 more, and he is just as ready and anxious to wait on me and deliver my goods as if I paid spot cash. Somedody stole my dog. (Sensation in the vicinity of the stove where Bro. Gus. Sawers sat) I have got to get even or I am so much the poorer. A merchant charges me for all wool and it turns out to be half cotton. I've got to even up somehow. If I pay $2 for shoes which give me only $1 worth of wear, I must make up that loss or I can't hold my own. As a matter of fact and daily practice it don't amount to shuckers. The Secretary will place the resolution under the table, and Bro. Talkaway is hereby fined $4,000 and costs for bringing such a ticklish subject before the meeting."

NOT SUSTAINED.

"I appeal from that decision," promptly replied Bro. Talkaway.

"Very, well, Sir. I will put the motion for an appeal."

It was put, and received only one vote.

"Bro. Talkaway," said the President, as the proceedings were finished "when this meeting adjourns I want you to walk part of the way home with me. I want to convince you of the error of your ways."

Talkaway didn't do it. When the time for adjournment came he seized his hat and slid down stairs like a man who had seen a ghost.

MUSIC.

The Harmony Club secured the floor, and rendered the following touching lines, written for the occasion by the club's own poet. The solo part was taken with effect by Bro. Fred Burritt, of the Rugby Minstrels:

The bloomers add no beauty to the female form divine,
But these new fashioned women will advance;
If emancipation notions ever strike that wife of mine
She is welcome to my Sunday broadcloth pants.
She can have my broadcloth breeches, she can have my coat and vest,
She can have my laundered linen and all that;
She can have my stand-up collars and new neck-tie and the rest.
But be darned if she can have my stovepipe hat.

During the excitement which followed Bro. Montgomery accidently shoved his elbow through the window, breaking a pane of glass. He narrowly escaped being fined $1300 and costs.

SEVERELY CENSURED.

The President slowly arose, and the wild look in his eye caused a feeling of uneasiness to manifest itself throughout the hall.

"Will Col. John Adlum please step this way," asked Sir Richard as he rubbed a cramp out of his left leg.

The Colonel advanced like a man expecting to receive a gold medal for some meritorious service, and the President continued:

"Colonel Adlum, look me in the left eye! For the last six weeks you have been loafing around and hating hard work. You haven't earned an honest nickel since last October. You are powerful handy with your excuses, but let me say to you if you don't start on Monday morning and look for work and start the sweat on your back, I shall call for you at the next meeting. That call will mean business! It will result in proceedings that will walk you downstairs four steps at a time!"

DECLINED.

Bro. Stoplog Dinwoodie, of Lakefield, Secretary of High Old Jinks branch in that burgh, informed the President by letter that on the 1st of April his society proposed to open a debate, free to the world, on the query: "What is the Hereafter of Animal Creation?" It was hoped that the parent club would send at least four leading orators to participate in the debate.

"While we are much obliged for the invitation," replied the President, "we shan't let the enquiry worry us a bit. While it is a sad thing to part from a dog which has stood by us for a dozen years, time spent in wondering where he will bring up is time wasted. (Loud sobs in the vicinity of the stove where sat Bros. John Mervin and Billy Gould) I reckon that such of us that get to the better land won't be looking round for horses, dogs and cats. We'll be too busy with our wings and harps, and it ain't likely we could whistle for a dog if we owned one. The hereafter of man, and particularly of members of this club, is of far more concern to us. The Janitor will now unbar the door, and the meeting will disrupt for one week."

FARMERS' MARKET.

March 1.—The receipts of grain on the street market here to-day were small. Oats were firmer. Other grains were steady.

Wheat—There was none offered. Prices are nominally unchanged.

Barley—Steady. 150 bushels selling at 48c.

Oats—Firmer, 300 bushels selling at 37c to 37½c.

Hay and Straw—The offerings were small and the market was unchanged, 6 loads of timothy selling at $11 to $13; clover was nominal at $9 to $10 and straw at $7 to $8.

Dressed Hogs—The offerings were fair, there was a good demand and the market was firm, with sales at $5 25 to $5 50.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

In Liverpool to-day heavy bacon was 6d cheaper. Colored cheese was 6d dearer. In Chicago the market closed easy. This market was higher for eggs and dressed hogs. There is a good demand for hog products, barrel pork and bacon and in fact all lines, and offerings were made to-day and refused for cars of product at a slight advance on the last prices quoted.

Butter—There is a fair demand for large rolls and the market is steady at 12c to 15c, the latter for baskets of choice. Dairy tub is slow and easy at 14c to 15c, and low grade is quoted at 8c. Creamery is in fair demand and steady at 21c to 23c for rolls and 20c to 21c for tubs.

Eggs—The offerings are much smaller, and there is some talk among those who have for a long time watched the situation very closely of an egg famine. Local stocks have been pretty well cleaned up, owing both to a good local demand and some inquiry this week for export, and the offerings from the country are small. Prices in Montreal for limed were advanced according to reports received here to day, from 15c to 20c. Prices here are quoted 2c to 3c higher by some firms than prices given yesterday, and limed are now held all the way from 15c to 18c. Held fresh are scarce, and there were very few offering, and it is said they would, if good, choice stock, command 18c to 20c to-day. New laid are scarce and firm at 22c to 24c.

Potatoes—The offerings are fair, the demand is rather slow and the market is steady. Cars on the track here are quoted at 50c to 55c. Potatoes out of store sell at 60c to 63c.

Poultry—The receipts are not large, there is a fair demand and the market is steady at 10c to 11c for turkeys, 6½c to 7c for geese and 50c to 60c for chickens.

MONTREAL.

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

March 1.—The East End Cattle Market this morning was worse than ever. There were about 650 butchers' cattle on the market, but the drovers say that 300 or more will not be sold. The ruling price was 3¼c per lb. live weight, for cattle, and for lambs and sheep about 4½c per lb. live weight. There were only 60 lambs and sheep on the market and the demand for these was very fair. Three hundred calves brought from $2 to $8, according to size and quality. The drovers are said to be feeling severely the demoralized state of the market, some of them losing from $50 to $75 a car. Very few milch cows were on offer. The prices realized were $35 to $60 each. Shippers were offered from $20 to $45 each, with no demand. This morning's market at the Horse Exchange, Point St. Charles, was exceedingly dull, as to prices. There was a large supply of good beasts, and both American and old country buyers were out in large numbers. Several animals were sold for export. The prices realised, which are about the same as have obtained for some time, were little better than given away free. Fair horses brought $30 to $50; good animals from $50 to $75, and the best from $75 to $100. These figures are away below what dealers say ought to be got, but there seems no likelihood of any improvement.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 2, 1895

THIRTY YEARS HENCE.

JOHN DUPONT GIVES A FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF THE GREAT CITY OF 1925.

A Most Accommodating Currency in Vogue—A Visit to the Crematory and the Ashes of Departed Citizens—Communication with Mars.

John Dupont, the man from away-back, who in a state of suspended animation reposed in an old dry well in Ashburnham from Feb. 1895 until Feb. 1925, and then regained consciousness, only to find that he was exactly 30 years behind the times, that Peterborough had developed into a city of 300,000 population and that the things of his day had been superceded by the marvellous inventions of the 20th century. Naturally, John was knocked "cold" by all that he saw and heard. Everything was new and strange. The friends and acquaintances of his day were either dead or had moved away. He was fortunate in finding an old acquaintance living in Toronto, and to his friend Gordon he immediately began a series of letters in which he described the many strange things and condition of things. His second letter is given below:

Peterborough, Feb. 26, 1925.

MY DEAR GORDON,—Some time has elapsed since my last letter. I have been so busily engaged taking in the sights and "seeing the tiger" of the new Peterborough, that this is the first opportunity I have had of again addressing you. Without any preliminaries I will launch forth from where my last descriptive letter left off.

Among other changes in this grand city is a remarkable one in regard to currency. Some ten years ago they became dissatisfied with paper money and collateral, and after devising many systems, "promises" in words were substituted for all other coin. You see the advantage at a glance. One can travel without pockets, or baggage, and still carry a million; the money cannot be counterfeited, nor can it be stolen or burned. If you remember, a good many people lived by "promises" in our time. They would "promise" to pay until the creditors' importunities compelled the delinquents to transfer their custom to some other house. Men would also issue "promissory" notes and become insolvent before they came due. Quite a lot of this was done in 1894. This grand Trent Valley Canal was likewise "promised" for many years, until, I am told, the electors enforced its completion upon the Government, in the face of a pending election. But this will never do!

I like this currency immensely myself, and have become reckless in money matters. For instance, in giving a dinner to a party of friends in the Snowden House, the day succeeding my first letter to you, I was asked for an advance. The following bill was presented:

To use of apartments, with meals and lights, as per agreement,
p. p., 300 per diem—one day.. p. p. 300
By cash advance..... 50

Balance due.......... p. p. 250

"This seems all right," I observed, "but what are these p. p. that I find noted in the bill—play or pay, hey!"

"Promises, of course, sir," replied the waiter.

"Oh! then you desire fifty promises in advance to provide our dinner!" "Nothing more, sir. With that sum you shall dine like noblemen—aye, sir, like councillors."

"Here, take a hundred;" I exclaimed, with the air of a parliamentary candidate. "In fact, I became reckless, and offered to buy out the whole concern, from garret to wine cellar—especially the wine cellar."

The aerial vehicles in use here are of light substances, not the least resembling our balloons of 1894, but rather our boats and pleasure vessels, with helm and rudder, with large wings as paddles, and a central machine worked by electricity. They are built by the Sam English Aerial Vehicle and Canoe Manufactory, which firm is at present under contract to build an aerial vessel of surpassing beauty and speed for the Emperor of France. I thought these vacillating and never satisfied frog-eaters would degenerate into a constitutional monarchy. Well, I made a trip in one of these air navigators the other day to a suburb of a city named Strattonville. Our place of embarkation was 18th station, on Water street. A figure was standing motionless at the threshold of the building. My guide touched it with his stick, whereupon it put itself into a rapid and gliding movement, skimming noiselessly over the floor, gazing on it, I saw it was no living form, but mechanical automation. The figure conducted us to an upholstered elevator, and we ascended to the aerial platform. Entering vehicle No. 278, we proceeded on our flight, rivalling even the birds in their native element. I was much struck with the skill of the elderly steersman, who proved to be no other than Clare Calcutt—you remember Clare, Gordon. Well we arrived at our destination in safety, for Clare, although in his movements apparently as reckless as the town Solicitor of 1894 in preparing his by-laws, did not prove quite so erratic. By the way, that gentleman's ashes are now preserved in the crematory—he died, I am informed, shortly after his expulsion from office in 1895. Now, during the whole of the trip to Strattonville, I was submerged in reverie; the name "Strattonville" worried me; it seemed familiar with events in our time. Upon mentioning the matter to my guide, he informed me that the place was formerly known as Ennismore, and he presumed it had been named after an ex-M. P. P., who had purchased the municipality with "promises," to say nothing of colonization roads.

With regards to the ladies, dear Gordon, it was a long time before I could recognise any, and I am positive you would not were you here. The "dress reform" has accomplished wonders. You will remember the stir the "Bloomer" costume made; well, they have gone one better, and now present, in raiment, a tolerably faithful duplicate of man, with their coats and vests and trousers, hats and closely cut hair—the latter has come in vogue once more—to say nothing of the walking cane and dog. Some of them used to make good attempts at imitating us in our time, but I never dreamt it would reach these extremes. The only distinguishing trait the ladies have now while promenading, is their inherited propensity for holding up their skirts, and the present mode being yet in its infancy, one frequently catches them making a futile dash in this direction. The ladies also enjoy smoking, football, baseball and rowing clubs, and indulge in all athletic exercises, and many etcs. They also claim the privilege, usurped by men, of proclaiming their love and urging their suit; in other words, of being the wooing party rather than the wooed. Such a phenomena as an old maid does not exist in Peterborough to-day. History records that the first steps in this direction were taken in 1895, when THE TIMES published a list of all "The Eligible Bachelors." Their argument for the reversal of the relationship of the sexes which the blind tyranny of man had established in 1894 appears cogent. They claim that of the two the female is by nature of a more loving disposition than the male—that love occupies a larger space in her thoughts, and is more essential to her happiness, and that therefore she ought to be the wooing party; that otherwise the male is a shy and dubiant creature (ahem!)—that he has often a selfish predilection for the single state—that he often pretends to misunderstand tender glances and delicate hints—that, in short, he must be resolutely pursued and captured—just so! However coy, reluctant, and prudish the male a lady of today courts may prove at first, yet her perseverance, her ardour and her persuasive powers are pretty sure to run down his neck into which is termed the "fatal noose." With the defunct generation this game was only practised once in four years, if my memory does not mislead me. I meandered into the Hall of Wisdom last evening. Above two thousand members were present, unusual interest being taken in the "Report of the Committee on Appointments," which embodies the discharge of Janitor Rossel, whose inability to eject a small and noisy boy from the preceding meeting has roused the ire of the committee. Some opposition, however was forthcoming, and Turncoat Mills moved that the report be referred back to the committee. The vote resulting in a tie, the president voted with the opposition. A good deal of dissatisfaction is felt at the president's action, for the janitor is certainly unpopular with the majority of the members, many of whom would not take decisive steps towards his dismissal, for fear of public disapproval. They need have no fear on this score, however. The club was honored this evening with the presence of Premier Dennistoun, whose legislative abilities were substantially recognized in the year 1896, when he was returned for the Dominion House with an overwhelming majority. Flying by the human species have at last been accomplished although yet in its infancy. The wings are very large and reach to the knee. They are composed from the feathers of a gigantic bird unknown in our time—the color mostly white, but sometimes with reddish streaks. They are fastened round the shoulders with light, but strong springs of steel, and when expanded the arms slide through loops for that purpose, forming a stout central membrance as the arms are raised, a tubular lining beneath the vest or tunic becomes, by a mechanical contrivance, inflated with air, increased or diminished at will by the movements of the arms, and serving to buoy the whole four as on bladders. The wings and the balloon like apparatus are highly charged with electricity, and when the body is thus wafted upward it seems to become singularly lightened of its weight. I found it easy enough to soar from the ground; indeed, when the wings were spread it is scarcely possible not to soar, but then comes the difficulty and danger. I utterly failed to use and direct the pinions, and could only make the most confused and blundering efforts at flight. I was the servant of the wings; the wings were not my servants—they were beyond my control; and when by a violent strain of muscle—and I must fairly win in that abnormal strength which is given by excessive fright—I curbed their gyrations and brought them near to the body, it seemed as if I lost the sustaining power stored in them and the connecting bladders, as when the air is let out of a balloon, and found myself precipitated again to earth; saved indeed from being dashed to pieces, by some spasmodic flutterings, but not saved from the bruises and the stun of a heavy fall.

My dear Gordon, you will remember the charming site of the once beautiful Little Lake Cemetery, where the citizens were wont to spend may pleasant hours in the city of the dead. Well, Peterboronians have overcome at last their antipathy to cremation; interment has been abolished, and expensive toombstones and monuments, on which were frequently engraved lying epitaphs, are supplanted by handsome transparent jars in which repose the ashes of those who have been gathered to their fathers. I was present the other day at a cremation. We entered the large and handsome hall of the crematory, which by the way, lacks the damp and chilly atmosphere of the old-time vaults, calculated to vividly remind one of their approaching dissolution, and to further in a measure the interests of the Cemetery Company—especially so with the thermometer registering 38 below zero. I noticed at the end of the hall a dark metallic substance about twenty feet in length, narrow in proportion, and all closed round, save near the roof, there were small round holes through which might be seen a red light. The roaring of flames was likewise heard, and from the interior emanated a sweet, rich perfume, by no means resembling the proverbial brimstone. While I was conjecturing what purpose the machine was to serve, a joyous melody permeated the building, but of a character subdued and tranquil. Then the corpse, covered by a long cerement was tenderly borne towards the things I have described. I passed forward to see what would happen next. A sliding panel was opened at one end, the corpse deposited on a shelf within—the door reclosed—a spring at the side touched, a sudden whishing, sighing sound heard from within; and lo! at the other end of the machine a lid fell down and a small handful of ashes dropped into a receptacle placed to receive it.

At the conclusion of the ceremony I curiously cast my eyes along the numerous shelves surrounding the building and noted the labels on some of the jars arranged thereon, conspicuous among which were the following: "Ex-Police Constable Stewart, who succumbed this life through over-exertion in his multitudinous duties. This official was exceedingly popular with the boys;" "Ex-Mayor Cahill, who succeeded to the mayoralty chair in 1896, which he efficiently filled for ten years of unprecedented prosperity to Peterborough;" "J. R. Stratton, ex-Premier of the Province of Ontario;" "H. Grundy, of Registration fame," "D. Belleghem" and many others of a similar nature.

I am now off to Carlisle's Hill. The three naked ensign poles originally designed to draw attention to the aforesaid gentleman's celebrated settlement, have now given place to a magnificent astronomical observatory and signal station between Mars and Earth. Communication by means of electrical illuminations is expected to be opened to-night with the former planet, unmistakable signs having been discovered that the Marsites are making strenuous efforts in this direction. The veteran councillor, G. B. Sproule, will be present with his newly invented photographing appliances, by means of which he is confident of producing as faithful duplicates of the astronomical phenomenons expected to accrue from this test, as he was in portraying humankind and nature in 1894. But I must away; the aerial boat is in waiting, and I have barely time to reach my hotel, dine and secure my seat at the observatory; for the place will undoubtedly be crowded to the doors, these people manifesting as much interest in those proceedings as they did in a Cabinet Minister mass meeting in 1893.

Yours,

JNO. DUPONT.

It is said that the people residing at Bush Point, in the township of Belmont, are considerably alarmed over what appears to be the outbreak of diphtheria in that locality. For several days past two children of Mr. Justice Alley, postmaster of that place, have been ill, and it is now reported that Drs. Ford and Jeffs, of Havelock, have pronounced their illness diphtheria. The township officials immediately called in session the Board of Health, to take proper steps for the safety of the community.

A dashing young deer hunter from the thrifty town of Galt, on his departure from an unsuccessful two weeks' outing in Lindsay recently, was the innocent object of a delightful sensation of appreciation, as it were. Among the passengers of the G.T.R. train on Tuesday evening last, going west on the same car our disappointed friend met an old acquaintance, a fair Belle of Port Hope, going on a business trip to the city. At the conductor's call of "all aboard," a fair fun loving Lindsay girl promptly produced a shower of rice and antiquated slippers that fairly covered the travellers, whose blushing surprise seemed to indicate to the onlooker that they "were in it."

A Tribute to Their Pastor.

The Quarterly Board of the George street Methodist church have passed the following complimentary resolution: This Quarterly Board rejoices in the fact that under the pastorate of the Rev. W. R. Young the church has enjoyed great peace and continual prosperity, financial and spiritual. At no time in the history of the congregation has there prevailed greater confidence and love between pastor and people, and at no time has there existed in the congregation a higher spiritual life. This Board gives thanks to the Great Head of the church and tenders to their beloved pastor their congratulations, and offer to him their continued sympathy and support.

A Painful Accident.

Mr. George Riddell met with an accident on Friday which will lay him aside from work for a few weeks. He was employed at the picker in the Messrs. Routh's woolen mill, and having occasion to stop the machine he threw off the belt, and soon afterwards put his hand into the opening to clean it out, thinking the cylinder had ceased revolving. He made a mistake, however, as the teeth of the cylinder, which was still moving, came into contact with his hand and tore the flesh into shreds, but fortunately no bones were broken. As soon as Mr. Riddell shouted, Robert Reynolds, who was in the room, ran to his assistance and stopped the cylinder. Dr. Carlaw dressed the wounds.—Campbellford Herald.

Waif on the Doorstep.

On Sunday evening last there was an increase in one of the families of Campbellford in an unexpected way. A fine, plump little baby boy was left upon the doorstep of the dwelling, and it is now being cared for by its alleged grandmother. The little waif who is about one year and six months old, has been tenderly cared for since birth by its mother who is said to reside in the neighborhood of Frankford. It was comfortably wrapped up, and was none the worse for having had a berth outside the building for a short time. Its mother who is not in good circumstances, claims that a certain member of the family where the little one was left, has a better right to its care than she has, and she took this means of settling the matter, it is said, after having failed in getting money from the proper source for its support. The child will continue to receive kind treatment.

A Clever Trick.

The Watchman says: On Saturday evening a sneak thief attempted to get in his fine work. While passing Messrs. Johnston & Sisson's boot and shoe establishment he attached a hook to a pair of rubbers and then carefully played out a long line of cord until he reached a hallway and carelessly threw the ball of string into the same, the intention being to return in a few minutes, haul in the line and gather unto himself the rubbers and any other merchandise that might be attached. Fortunately, the small boy in the store commenced just at this time to take in the display goods and he discovered the "hook and string," and following the latter to its termination gathered it up, and thus the sneak thief failed in his "catch" and lost his hook and line as well. The firm have lost a couple of pair of boots and think they went in a similar way. Merchants should keep a sharp lookout for similar schemes.

THE BELLE OF THE EVENING

HER LOVELY PINK SILK DRESSES

A few weeks ago a ball was given in a flourishing Ontario town. Youth and beauty was fully represented, and many of the ladies wore charming costumes. The belle of the evening was a young lady of twenty years; she was the personification of grace and beauty, and won the admiration of all who were present.

Her brother, an intimate friend of the writer, told the following secret: "My sister looked charmingly beautiful at Mrs. Y—'s ball last evening. From what I had heard about her ball dress at home, I fully expected chagrin and disappointment as far as I was concerned, because I understood she was to wear a dress that had been dyed with Diamond Dyes.

"For some time she had worn a cream silk, but it had become somewhat soiled, so mother and sister determined to dye it a light shade of Pink, and I fully expected a failure.

"Before going to the ball I was called to see my sister in her new dress, and I could hardly believe it was the old dress re-dyed. The lovely light pink was a marvellously rich shade, and the whole costume so becoming that I was fairly delighted. Young and old at the ball were charmed with sister's good taste, but of course they had no idea that Diamond Dyes played so important a part in the success of the costume."

MORAL.—When you re-dye any valuable material always use the Diamond Dyes, if you wish success; they never fail to give good results.

Central Exhibition Company Getting Ready for the Coming Season.

The Peterborough Central Exhibition Directors are preparing for the next exhibition. At a meeting held in the Morgan House, there were present President Elliott and directors Vance, Morgan, Hall, Braden, Garbutt, Davidson, Stothart, Hunter and Rutherford. The prize list was thoroughly revised, but no changes were made in butter, cheese, poultry horses or swine. The prizes for sheep were raised $37,000. The rose potatoes were struck off the list and Empire State and Maggie Murphy added. In fall apples the Gravenstein, Canada Red and Fall Genetting were added. Oil paintings, etc., in Class 31; fine arts, was given to Mr. D. A. Shaw, artist, to revise. The ladies' work was allotted to the Lady Superintendent to revise.

Fifty cents for single and 75 cents for double will be the charges for horse stall. The following committee of management was appointed:

EAST PETERBORO' RIDING.

Editor of the Times.

The Liberal-Conservatives of East Peterborough meet at Norwood next Tuesday to select a candidate for the Commons. In view of the rumored retirement of Mr. Burnham, who has definitely, we understand, declared that he will not again be a candidate, the selection of his successor is a matter of some importance to the party. Among the names mentioned is that of Mr. J. B. Pearce, reeve of Norwood, who has been a faithful and consistent Conservative for many years, and would make a good representative if elected. But Mr. Pearce does not seem to have any political aspirations, and so Dr. Brennan, of Peterborough is most favorably considered as a possible candidate. Dr. Brennan is a young man who takes a prominent part in Peterborough politics, and his long residence in Norwood and Hastings has made him as well known in the eastern part of the riding as in the the west, where he resides. He is active and energetic, and if he accepted the nomination he would no doubt make a strong fight in this important constituency.

A YOUNG NURSE GIRL CHARGED WITH MURDER BY POISON.

◆

Lulu Lacey, a 14-Year-Old Girl of St. Catharines Arrested for the Murder of Her Employer's Child—The Prisoner Remanded.

Special to the Times.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Feb. 25.—Lulu Lacey, a young girl about 14 years of age, is in jail here on the charge of "murder by poison." She was brought in by Constable Clark late on Friday night.

The girl lived with the family of Mr. T. Pierson, of South Grimsby, and she was employed to do light housework and to mind the baby, a child of 18 months. It is charged that Lulu killed the baby.

On Friday Mr. Pierson went to the barn to do the milking, leaving Lulu with the baby.

When she returned she found the child suffering greatly, and very soon it died, with all the symptoms of poison. Suspicion rested upon the hired girl, and she was placed under arrest.

There was in the house a bottle of medicine containing strychnine in sufficient quantity to kill a child. This bottle the baby got, the girl says, and drank the contents. The parents did not believe this and caused the hired girl's arrest.

THE PRISONER REMANDED.

She was taken before Magistrate Forbes and remanded for a week pending a rigid examination into all the circumstances.

A post mortem examination of the body of the dead child will be made. The prisoner maintains a wonderful degree of coolness and unconcern and stoutly denies the charge.

OCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

Volney Ashford Jailed.

Volney Ashford, a native of Cobourg, who was arrested in Hawaii for taking part in the recent rebellion has been sentenced to one year's imprisonment and $1,000 fine. On account of ill-health the hard labor was remitted.

Grand Association P. of I.

It is understood that the Patrons of Industry have reconsidered their determination not to hold the meeting of their Grand Association shortly, and the meeting will probably be held during the next week or ten days. It is expected delegates will be present from Manitoba and Quebec, and a Dominion Executive will be formed.

Both Were Fined.

In the Police Court Tuesday Charles Pogue and a man named Smythe were charged with being disorderly by fighting. Both were disfigured as the result of the encounter. The magistrate administered a soothing balm to each in the shape of a fine of $5 and costs, which was paid.

An "Old Hoss" Sale.

The Canadian Express Company will sell at auction in Toronto, next month, a large amount of unclaimed express freight. A long list of names of parties, to whom the goods were consigned has been published. The following parties in Peterborough are on the list: R. Drery, J. M. Green, W. Hunt, Micklestone & Co., Waller & Co., George Lochner.

Beer Flowed Freely.

In the Police Court, Monday morning, Martin Compass pleaded guilty to the charge of selling liquor without a license, and the Magistrate imposed a fine of $50 and costs. The Magistrate ordered that the contents of the 30-gallon keg be destroyed. After court it was taken out on the market square and emptied. The sight of so much going to waste caused many a pang among the motley group of onlookers.

Elves Gets Six Months.

The clothes wringer swindler, James Elves, was sent to the central prison for six months Tuesday morning by the police magistrate. Elves' mode of operations has been published. Three of his victims in Peterborough gave evidence against him in court, and a clear case of fraud was made out. As an excuse for his conduct Elves told the magistrate that he was unable to read or write and didn't know to whom to return the wringers.

Charged With Mal-Practice.

A writ has been issued in the High Court of Justice against Dr. Mallory, registrar of East Northumberland, for $20,000 for alleged mal-practice. The plaintiff Charles Remey, of the Township of Cramahe, had his fingers caught in the threshing machine in October last, and consulted Dr. Mallory for medical advice. The doctor amputated the hand, which operation the plaintiff claims was not necessary, and claims that several fingers and the hand could have been saved if proper medical treatment had been given. The action will come up for trial at the Spring Assizes next month. Mr. W. L. Payne, of Colborne, is acting for the plaintiff, McCarthy, Osler & Co., of Toronto, for defendant.

OUR "TORY MAYOR."

This is How the Toronto Globe Refers to Mayor Kendry.

The Toronto Globe takes up Mayor Kendry's assertion made at the McCarthy meeting, and comments on it as follows:

"The Tory Mayor of Peterborough has introduced the put-up-or shut-up mode of carrying on the tariff controversy, but so far has not been fortunate in selecting his ground. He offered to bet $100 with Mr. McCarthy and Col. O'Brien that cotton goods are as cheap or cheaper in Canada than in England, and they took him up. If Mr. Kendry had looked at the trade returns he would not have got into this scrape. In 1892 we imported dutiable cotton goods—raw cotton is free—of the value of $4,500,000, chiefly from England and the United States. The duty was $1,200,000, or 25 per cent. all round. Mr. Kendry would have us believe that if we had chosen to do so we could have got these goods as cheap at home as their cost abroad, and so have saved the $1,200,000—a proposition which reflects upon our sanity. If he says that these were classes of goods not manufactured by our mills he is mistaken. Here is one case in point out of many—dyed cotton sateens used for light dress goods and linings are manufactured in Canada. The duty on them is 30 per cent.; it used to be 32½. If anyone in Peterborough "wants to gamble on a sure thing" at Mr. Kendry's expense the Globe will send him two samples of sateen, one English, and the other Canadian; the English is 30 inches wide, the Canadian only 26; the English is as good, if not better, material than the Canadian, yet, while the English has to pay 30 per cent. duty and something more for freight and other charges, it is laid down in Toronto cheaper than the Canadian. In other lines, especially in bleached and unbleached cottons, the duty is heavy enough to enable the Canadian combine to sell as cheaply as British and American mills, but, of course, if it were repealed the Canadian manufacturer would have to bring the price of his cottons down to the competitive point. To put it differently, the prices of the big combine here are, speaking generally, higher than foreign prices by very nearly the amount of the duty. The last thing a sensible Tory would bring to notice is the so-called development of the cotton industry under the N. P. By his duties and clap-on-all-sail speech Sir Leonard Tilley induced an enormous lot of capital to rush into the business. The output soon exceeded the home demand, and the cost of production was too high to admit of profitable exporting on a large scale. Temporary agreements to regulate the supply and keep the home price up where established, which involved the closing down of mills, but these were frequently violated. At last a number of capitalists came on the scene and acquired the mills for less than the amount sunk in them, several millions of money being wiped out in this manner, and set up a permanent combine, which is "holding up" the consumer at the old stand in the way described.

CAN USE THE HOME.

Dr. Barnardo Willing to Accept the Childrens' Aid Society Proposition.

Mr. E. B. Edwards has received the following letter from Dr. Barnardo:

LONDON, E.,
February 2nd, 1895.

MY DEAR SIR—I have read with great pleasure the copy of the Children's Protection Act, which you sent me. I heartily congratulate all who had any share in bringing about this most desirable legislation on behalf of the children of Canada. I write now at the earliest possible moment to say that it will give me very great pleasure to offer our home at Peterborough, as a temporary shelter under the Act for the reception of girls who may be committed to us through it, and for the purpose of securing, after awhile, foster parents and homes in which the children can be boarded out. I understand from the Act that the municipality would pay for the support of those children at a fixed rate and I am quite satisfied if such expenses be paid to place my entire experienced staff and our institution at the disposal of the society for the purpose of rendering prompt and efficient aid in such cases. I, however, suggest that this arrangement should be in force only for a year; that at the end of the year we consider the position, for it is just possible from either one side or the other that we might not consider it desirable that the arrangement should be permanent. Of course, when the home is full of children who have come from England and are waiting to be placed out in homes, we could not receive those who may committed under the Act, and my offer is understood only, therefore, to obtain, if there is room. As to the class of children that would be offered to us by the Society under the Act, I hardly like now to lay down any hard and fast rule, but it would be obvious that certain children would be very desirable—that, for example, a very depraved or vicious child might injuriously affect others, and I imagine that such a case would be best be dealt with not by sending her to a home like ours, but by boarding her out at once in some family where there are no other children. But however it might be and without laying down too stringent a rule, I would wish by this letter to offer our institution at Peterborough for the purposes of the Act, and if you will convey this offer to the responsible parties, I shall be be very much obliged to you. Believe me to be, dear Mr. Edwards,

Very faithfully yours,
(Signed) THOMAS J. BARNARDO.

The New Directors Have $400 to Carry—Annual Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association the following officers were elected:

President—J. W. Bennett (re-elected.)
First Vice President—Mr. Alf. Parker.
Second Vice-President—Mr. Grover.
Treasurer—Mr. Madill (re-elected.)

The president, Messrs. Roger, Parker and Grover were appointed to act as Executive Committee.

The following gentlemen were appointed for directors: Messrs. Bennett, Parker, Moore, Madill, Crely, V. Best, P. H. Green, F. Mason, Sheriff Hall, W. F. Nelson, G. M. Roger, W. J. Green, B. F. Ackerman, R. J. Kidd, M. A. Morrison, F. Moore, T. H. Martin, F. W. Gladman, H. P. Kennedy, A. E. Dixon, J. S. Knapman, T. McFadden, E. A. Peck, Lamb, Stanley and M. W. Matchett.

During 1894 the Association was "on the down grade." Without a secretary or workers ground was lost, financial support failed, and it enters 1895's work with a burden of $400 debt, but a foundation is being laid for a good work among the young men of Peterborough. We are realizing, says the secretary, the true aim of the Young Men's Christian Association in saving men, and look forward to a grand work this year, closing with a balance on the right side.

At the close of the meeting the Board of Directors had a short conference. Twenty new members were received. With the exception of the finances the directors felt much encouraged with the present state of the work.

"Personal Purity."

A large audience listened to Dr. Hunter's lecture on "Personal Purity" in the Opera House last night. It was an able and forcible effort and no doubt will long be remembered by those present. The music rendered by the octettes and orchestra was a pleasing feature.

EAST RIDING NOMINATION.

Mr. John Lang, Ex-M. P. Unanimously Chosen by the Liberals.

The Reformers of East Peterborough met in convention at Norwood Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of nominating a candidate to contest that riding in the coming elections. It was a very large and representative gathering, fully 200 delegates being present from all parts of the riding. Mr. John Lang, Ex-M. P., of Otonabee, was the unanimous choice of the convention. The nominee made a brief speech in which he said he was confident of the results of the campaign.

Among the nominations made were Mr. Alex. Nevins, Haliburton; Messrs. James and William Drummond, Otonabee; Mr. John Brown, Belmont; Mr. E. Hawthorne, Reeve of Dummer, and Messrs. John Finlay and Thomas Rork, of Norwood.

LEFT ALL ALONE.

Husband and Daughters Leave Her in Solitude and Want.

Mrs. Deacon, who lives on Douro street, Ashburnham, thinks that fate has used her very, very cruelly, and she wants the public to know it.

At present she is living alone in a little brick house at the foot of the big hill that frowns down upon the village. Three or four large maple trees stand in front of the house, and bare of their leaves look like grim sentinels guarding the hearthstone and warding off invading monsters. Years ago little children played beneath the foliaged branches, but like the foliage they have disappeared. The warm sunshine of spring and the gentle rains of April will woo the bursting leaves back to the parent stem, but not so with the children. They have gone never to return and the old trees will bud with the freshness of spring and furnish roseate tints in the autumn sunlight, many a time, 'tis likely, before the shadows of the departed again fall athwart the threshold of this home.

For in September last, according to Mrs. Deacon's story, her husband and her three daughters picked up and got out. They took the furniture at night time, and hied themselves away to Toronto where they are now living at 122 McCaul street, leaving her, who for long years performed well the sacred duties of wife and mother, alone.

It is the old, old story, says the deserted wife. Twenty years ago, when the children were young, a dissension arose between her and Mr. Deacon. It was of such a nature that time could not efface it, and as the years rolled on it assumed larger dimensions, more serious aspects, and the breach widened into a gulf that all the ties of marriage could not bridge. As the children grew older they took part in it, and finally sided with their father. Still they lived on in outward peace, but with inward discord, until the culminating point was reached, when daughters and father went to Toronto.

And now Mrs. Deacon is left alone. She says no provision, whatever, was made for her support. She has the house and the land, but both are heavily mortgaged. There is very little furniture left, and what there is is disappearing piece by piece to buy bread for the board and coal for the hearth.

And what is to become of her she does not know. She has done nothing wrong, she says, and why should she be deserted, alone and penniless? A sad case, surely, but one of thousands in this cruel, unfeeling world.

HOW THEY PLAYED.

The Peterboro's Put Up the Best Game the Queen City Has Seen.

The simplest, closest and most exciting game of hockey that has been played in Toronto this year was that which took place last night at the Granite Rink between the Granite II. and the Peterboroughs, the respective champions of the western and eastern groups of the junior O.H.A. series. From the time the signal was given for the game to commence until the same sibilant sound announced its termination the 800 spectators were kept keyed up to a fever heat of excitement.

The Granite supporters were out in force and there was a large contingent of Peterborough rooters on hand to cheer their boys to victory. The best hockey was seen in the first half, the game towards the close degenerating into an exhibition of the Donnybrook kind. Peterborough's combination play was exceptionally good and was far superior to that of the Toronto team, which was a little ragged. In the initial half, the teams scored alternately and at the intermission the score was 5 all. Peterborough did not do any dallying on the resumption of play, but rushed the gypsum down on the Granite goal, where it stayed for a few moments but not for long as the Granite defence was doing some strong work. The play was soon transferred to the other end, but nothing resulted. Adams, the cover point of the Peterborough team, made a long lift down the rink at this juncture, straight on the goal, and caught Livingstone, the Granite goalkeeper, napping, and the eastern team added one to their score. During the progress of the twelfth game no less than three of the Granite players and one of the visitors were sent to the fence for foul play. The Granites had all the best of the game, and after eight minutes' play evened up the score on a shot by Dixon. The last game was the longest of the match, and it was scored just at the call of time by Phelan of the Peterboroughs, who made a fine rush down the centre of the rink. There some talk after the game, on the part of the Granite team, of protesting the match on the ground that the full time was not played, but it is probable that nothing will be done in the matter. Johnsing and Ewing for home team scintillated brilliantly, while Adams at cover point and Phelan and King on the rush line were the bright particular stars of the Peterboroughs.—Globe.

Death of Mrs W. J. Paterson.

Mrs. Walter J. Paterson, of Ashburnham, died very suddenly yesterday morning. The preceeding day she was apparently enjoying excellent health, and only on that night complained of feeling unwell. A physician was called in, but did not think Mrs. Paterson was seriously indisposed. Yesterday morning she felt just about the same. Mr. Paterson called on the doctor, who still thought nothing serious was the matter. At noon Mrs. Paterson was dead, the immediate cause being heart failure. It was a terrible shock to the grief stricken husband and relatives, who have the sympathy of the community. Deceased was a daughter of Mr. Frank Hamilton, of Ashburnham. In 1886 she was married to Mr. Paterson. She was 32 years of age and a consistent member of Mark street Methodist church. Three little children are left motherless by the sad event. The funeral will take place tomorrow at 3 o'clock p.m. to the Little Lake cemetery.

Dominion Grange Officers.

The Dominion Grange have elected the following officers: Worthy Master, Mr. Dawson Kennedy, Peterborough; Worthy Secretary Mr. R. Wilkie, Blenheim; Worthy Overseer, Mr. George E. Fisher, Freeman; Worthy Treasurer, Mr. P. Hepinstal, Fordwich; Worthy Lecturer, Mr. W. F. W. Fisher, Wellington; Worthy Chaplain, Mr. J. M. Syme, Dalton; Worthy Steward, Mr. Peter McDuffie, Omagh; Gatekeeper, Lyman Henry, Sombra; Executive Committee, Mr. Henry Glendenning, Manilla; Mr. J. Robinson, Middlemarch; J. Fallis, Newbridge; and R. J. Mowbray, Kinsale. London was fixed upon as the place of the next annual meeting.

WOULD BE A BOON.

Howry & Sons Will Erect Mills Here if Proper Inducements Are Offered.

The J. W. Howry & Sons Lumbering Company, of Fenelon Falls, propose to erect immediately a large saw mill with double band saws and a large gang. In connection with this they will also build, equip and operate a large box factory and planing mill. The two will afford lucrative employment for 600 hands.

It is proposed to use steam power to operate these large concerns, the advantage of this motive power to them, existing in the fact that huge quantities of waste and refuse can thus be utilized as fuel, which otherwise would go to waste. While water power is plenty it would not, consequently be any advantage or inducement as far as location is concerned.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is very anxious to have the company erect these mills in Peterborough. The company is prepared to do so, providing some encouragement is offered them by the town.

The advantage to Peterborough of having these mills in operation here is inestimable. The concern is large, influential and wealthy and it would take them years to exhaust their immense timber limits. Six hundred men would be given employment, which would mean much to the business interests of the town and be a boon to trade.

The Lumber Business.

The Campbellford Herald says: Everything promises well for brisk "driving" on the Trent waters during the coming spring and summer. Gilmour's drive at Healey Falls, we understand, will be pushed through as soon as the ice clears the river; and their drive at Lakefield will follow it up shortly afterwards. These in addition to the new drives to be moved by both the Gilmour Co. and Rathburn Co. will make business active the greater part of the summer. The outlook for extensive lumbering operations is the best for a number of years.

That Kallaher Fortune.

The chief of police has received another letter regarding the Kallaher fortune, the particulars of which are known. The letter reads as follows:

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 22nd, 1895.

Chief Roszel:

DEAR SIR,—Having noticed an item in THE TIMES Feb. 1st, concerning John Kallaher, who died in Guthrie, Oklahama, I wish to inform you that I had a brother of that name, who left Peterborough about 20 years ago for the States. Have not heard from him since. If living would be forty-seven years of age; height five feet eight inches, dark hair and whiskers light.

MICHAEL KALLAHER.

Death of Miss Flood.

The death of Miss Ellen Elizabeth Flood, fifth daughter of Mr. John Flood, of Ennismore, occurred on Tuesday. Deceased young lady was attacked with influenza about a year ago, and never fully recovered from it. No immediate serious results were feared until a few weeks ago when most alarming symptoms set in. The best medical aid was called in, but despite all that could be done she passed away quietly to rest. Deceased was known and beloved by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who will sympathize with the bereaved family in their sad affliction. The funeral will leave the family residence at 8.30 this morning and proceed to the Roman Catholic church, Ennismore, thence to the Chemong cemetery where interment will take place.

INTERESTING TO LADIES
SOMETHING FOR NOTHING
CAN YOU GET IT?

Many who should know whether, are well pleased to get a good sized glass jar or tin of bulky alum, ammonia or other powerful but injurious mixture, for use as Baking Powder, at much less, perhaps even half the price, of the really good article, overlooking the fact that the amount thus APPARENTLY saved is of small moment in comparison with the real but not always immediately observed inevitable injury following the use of these articles. If in addition to the seemingly low prices, there is attached some showy gift or prize to give the impression of extra value, the inferior or hurtful nature of the powder is lost sight of in the expectation (a vain one) of getting "something for nothing."

"LADIES' HOME" and "HAPPY THOUGHT" on the other hand, can always be depended on as articles of first class quality, and such as can be AND ARE guaranteed not only free from everything in the slightest degree injurious, but invariably sure, satisfactory and economical.

Funeral of Mrs. Paterson.

The funeral of Mrs. Walter Paterson, of Ashburnham, took place yesterday afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery. A large cortege of friends and relatives followed the remains to the burial ground.

Did Not Come.

Two rinks of Lindsay curlers were to have played in Peterborough last night in the Lindsay-Peterborough cup contest, but owing to the condition of the ice the game was postponed and the Lindsay rinks notified not to come.

Good Horses Wanted.

Mr. W. J. Pearson, the well-known horse buyer, of Montreal, will visit this district next week for the purpose of purchasing a car load of good sound horses, for which the highest prices will be paid. He is billed for the following dates: Cavanagh's hotel, Peterborough, Wednesday and Saturday, March 6th and 9th; Bradburn House, Omemee, Thursday, March 7th; Crocker's Hotel, Millbrooke, Friday, March 8th.

A Unique Work.

Capt. George S. Thompson, of Toronto, is in town on business in connection with his new book entitled, "Up to Date; or the Life of a Lumberman," an exceedingly interesting, unique and original narrative, which is now in press. The work will embody some 200 or 300 pages and will contain a number of handsomely illustrated lumbering scenes. It has already been highly spoken of by several eminent litterateurs, who bespeak for it a large and popular sale. The book will be referred to in another issue at more length.

A Blaze in Verulam.

On Sunday morning last the residence of Mr. James Long, on the 8th con. of Verulam, about six miles east of Dunsford caught fire about eight o'clock, and despite the efforts of Mr. Long, and family, assisted by several neighbors, the flames spread and the house was burned to the ground. The contents were saved with the exception of the winter's stock of flour and potatoes. The family took refuge with Mr. Fred Steele, their nearest neighbor, where they will likely remain till Mr. Long can make arrangements for rebuilding.

A Sensational Case.

Lots of sensational evidence will likely be given at a case which will come up for trial at the assizes which open on Tuesday next before Chancellor Boyd, Belleville. Mr. Simpson, of Trenton, has entered an action against Dr. Stevenson, of the same town, for $25,000 damages for alienating his wife's affections and harboring her. The peculiarity of the case lies in the fact that the defendant is the mother of the plaintiff's wife. The young wife is described as of prepossessing appearance and moves in the best society in the town. The case has caused a sensation both in Belleville and Trenton, as the parties are well known there and also in Peterboro'.

A Farmer Victimized.

Its the old story of the oily tongued agent and man's greed to get something for nothing. A despatch from Cornwall on February 28th says: "A few days ago a glib tongued rogue called upon a poor old farmer, Isiah Gillard, near Chesterville, and represented himself as appointing agents for the sale of a new patent washing machine, which he alleged was manufactured by a firm in Ottawa. He was offered the agency at $75 a month and it was to make no difference whether he sold any machines or not. Mr. Gillard is sixty-three years of age and having a large family to support on a small farm, bit at the tempting bait and signed what he thought was an acceptance of the agency. For a few days the old man was jubilant over his good fortune and was astonished to receive notice from a bank that his note was held for $640. It will take all or nearly all his worldly possessions to pay this note."

Twenty Thousand Roses.

There are nearly 20,000 rose trees in bloom now at Dunlop's conservatories Bloor-st. west, Toronto. Visitors are always welcome. Mr. Dunlop is proud of his establishment and takes pleasure in speaking of his beauties. He ships them by mail and express to all parts of Canada, and as these orders are filled direct from the trees, he guarantees them to arrive in good condition. Sale room, 445 Yonge-st., and 5 King street west.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

Market day.

Snow is fast disappearing.

A number of important meetings will be held next week.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade will be held this month.

On Monday night a large number of Peterborough Oddfellows will pay a fraternal visit to their brethren of Lindsay. A special train has been arranged for to leave the G.T.R. station at 7 o'clock.

While coming home from Peterborough one night last week, with a load of gentlemen, the sleigh upset and Mr. T. Z. Webster was thrown out on his shoulder and received severe injuries. He will be able to be around again in a short time.—Lakefield News.

During a recent warm discussion at a meeting of the Peterborough town council Mayor Kendry is said to have restored order by vigorously pounding upon the desk with a gavel. Here's another glaring proof of Lindsay's old fogeyism—the town does not supply Mayor Walters with any such insignia of authority, hence he is compelled to call out the police force when members become obstreperous.—Lindsay Post.

The meanest man on record is said to live in Port Hope. He sold his sister-in-law one half interest in a cow, and then refused to divide the milk, maintaining that he sold only the front half. The buyer was also required to provide the feed the cow consumed, and was compelled to carry water to her three times a day. Recently the cow hooked the old man, and he is suing his son-in-law for damages.

A rally of the Christian Endeavor Societies of the township of Smith will be held in North Smith Presbyterian church, on Thursday, March 7th, commencing at 7.30 o'clock. A splendid programme is in course of preparation, including many interesting papers. The Rev. A. R. McDonald, Rev. A. C. Reeves, and others from Lakefield and Peterborough will attend.

Orillia Packet:—While the representatives of the Grand Trunk in Orillia are capable and obliging officials, few will deny that the general management of the road is wretched. The Toronto Telegram thinks the trouble must be with the English management, which limits the power and paralyzes the intelligence of the officials, so that they do not know what to do in an emergency. "Men who have sense haven't power, while the men who have power haven't sense."

PETERBORO' CHEESE BOARD.

Annual Meeting This Afternoon Week—New Board Probable.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board will be held in Peterborough today. This meeting, in view of action tending to separating an important section of the Board by the establishment of a new Board, will be an important one. One would think that the larger the Board, and the consequently larger offerings, the greater the certainty of keener competition among buyers, and, consequently, better bids. Take the case of a small Board that only offers a carload or so of cheese, it will be seen by the few buyers who will be attracted that there is only a shipment for one buyer, and there will not be the active competition that would prevail with a large offering.

There would also be less chance for selections, and superior cheese would have to take its chances with the lower grades of inferior factories. There would be a less incentive to factories to improve or keep up the quality of their make, and the tendency would be to lessen the vigilance of factories in the direction of the production of the best possible article of cheese. Canadian cheese stands first in the markets of the world, and no action that would in the least degree trend to conditions favoring the production of an inferior article should be encouraged. Under all the circumstances a full meeting of the members of the Peterborough Cheese Board should take place in the council chamber today.

DR. BRENNAN SUGGESTED

As the Candidate For East Peterborough Should Mr. Burnham Retire.

The communication in yesterday's TIMES from an "East Peterborough Farmer" in reference to the coming election is worthy of comment in that it suggests the selection of a young man as prospective representative. The trend of the times in the direction of younger men than have heretofore presented themselves, and the presence in the Cabinet of such men as Montague, Daly and Tapper has shewn the people that a man's best fighting days, politically, are not after the vigor and energy of life is beginning to wane and he has become so engrossed in other business as to be practically unfit to learn the art of legislation. Other countries have set us the example. Cleveland was the youngest president the United States ever selected and one of the best. Rosebery is very young politically when compared with his colleagues and no one will deny that the youth of Sir John Thompson was a strong element in his favor. So in speaking of our townsman, Dr. Brennan, the modern idea is but being carried out. Personally, we think no better candidate could be selected if, as stated, Mr. Burnham decides to retire.

Dr. Brennan is not new to Peterborough politics; his work in the last election proved him to be of use on the hustings, and a natural taste for public life will render him the more attentive to the duties of a parliamentarian, if he ever became one. His long connection with the militia, and service in the Northwest will not be forgotten by his comrades, and his association with public affairs here has kept his name well before his fellow citizens. As teacher and physician he has been brought into contact with the inhabitants of every part of the riding, and is especially popular among the young men of the county—and the young men in this election will be a greater power than ever before. We believe, therefore, that if the Doctor should be the choice of the convention the Conservatives will have an active and able candidate to carry their banner, and the riding a faithful representative, if his candidature be successful.

Comets in 1895.

During the year we are promised "return visits" from two periodical comets, both of short periods. One of these is, in point of fact, already in view, and, according to Dr. Backlund's calculation of the ephemeris, it will pass its perihelion on the 4th of March. Encke's comet (as this well-known wanderer of the skies is called) was discovered in 1786 by Mechain at Paris, and it has the shortest period of all the known comets, being only about 3¼ years. Even that period is gradually shortening, leading to the inference that its orbit is by slow degrees closing in. The outer comet, due in the ensuing summer, is the one originally discovered by Professor Barnard on the 16th of July, 1889, having a period of about 5½ years. It was expected to return, therefore, in the winter of 1892, but was not then visible, probably owing to its position being unfavorable for its identification. On this account the comet's expected return this year will be eagerly looked for. Its perihelion passage is due to take place about the 3rd of June.

LET THEM COME.

Peterborough on the Eve of a Substantial Manufacturing Boom.

The outlook for a manufacturing boom in Peterborough is very bright. At present a number of wealthy and influential manufacturing companies are looking this way with a view of locating here. The probabilities are that within the next six months there will be started in either Peterborough or Ashburnham, industries that will give employment to nearly 1,000 hands.

At a meeting of the council of the Board of Trade in the council chambers last night, Secretary Hay laid before that body communications from several large manufacturing concerns that are anxious to locate in Peterborough and will do so if proper inducements are held forth. One Company in particular, which would give employment to 200 hands, is very likely to come to Peterborough.

At last night's meeting the matter of offering inducements to the Howry & Sons Lumber Company, of Fenelon Falls, to locate here was discussed. It was the opinion of several of the members that the building of the proposed mills would be a boon to the town.

At the same time the Manufacturers' Committee of the Town Council met in the clerk's office to consider some proposal to offer the Howry Company. The Council of the Board of Trade appointed the following deputation to confer with this Committee: Messrs. Fair, Dumble, Manson, Hay, Davis, Mulholland and D. H. Moore.

It is understood that as a result of the conference the Committee will send on to the Council a recommendation to offer the Howry Company certain inducements that will likely tend to secure their location here.

HE FOOLED MANY.

This Scotchman Looks Honest But He Isn't—A Letter.

Some time ago THE TIMES published an item regarding a man named Thompson, who had been imposing on some clergymen. This man's operations seems to have been extensive as will be seen by the following letter:

PORT HOPE, March 1.

Editor of the Times.

DEAR SIR,—By a paragraph from the PETERBOROUGH TIMES, just handed me, I learn that the kindness of the Rev. A. MacWilliams, of that town had been imposed upon last Saturday by a Scotchman by the name of Thompson, whose tale was that he had been robbed in Port Hope, and had no money to take him to his home at Keswick, near Lake Simcoe. I had the pleasure of a call from the same Scotchman last Saturday in Port Hope. He looked a rough but honest man. I could detect no smell of whiskey about him. His tale to me was a trifle modified. He said that he came from Orillia to Peterborough the previous evening, and that in the darkness near the station there he was attacked by two powerful men, who made him hold up his hands, and robbed him of nearly $40. He stated that he had called upon the Rev. Dr. Torrance, of Peterborough, in the early morning, and received from him two dollars and seventy-five cents, and that my good ministerial brother had given him my name as one on whom he might call for sympathy. He wanted three or four dollars to pay his way on to Kingston, near which city he said he owned a fine farm of over three hundred acres. He said that he would send me twice what I might give him. I somewhat doubted, yet he seemed a sober though rather rough Scotchman. I now believe him to be an imposter, and write this to put others on their guard.

Yours truly,
J. K. SMITH.

A LABORER KICKS.

He Says Corporation Work is Not Equally Divided.

Alfred Cooney, a laborer, and a resident of the town, complained to THE TIMES that he has not been treated fairly by those who have the giving out of the stone breaking for the corporation. Cooney claims that favoritism is exercised in the distribution of the work, and a favored few are getting the lion's share.

In a period covering six weeks, Cooney says that he and two others were given five and a half cords to break. They were promised two and a half cords more, but when they were through they didn't get it, but it was given to a man named Harrison who had had two cords to himself, and was not through when the additional two cords and a half were given him.

A man named Bell, according to Cooney's story, who owns property in the town and who has money in the bank, was given 11½ cords to break during the same period that Cooney and two companions only had 5½ cords. Bell has no family to support, while Cooney has a wife and three children.

Cooney named other instances, which, if true, would lead to the conclusion that some men are being given more corporation work to do than others.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

AWFUL FIRE.

A Million Dollar Blaze In Toronto.

THE HEART OF THE CITY

Four Corners of Queen and Yonge Streets in Ashes—Simpson's New Building, Knox Church, Imperial Bank, Government Building and Many Others Completely Destroyed.

Special to the Times.

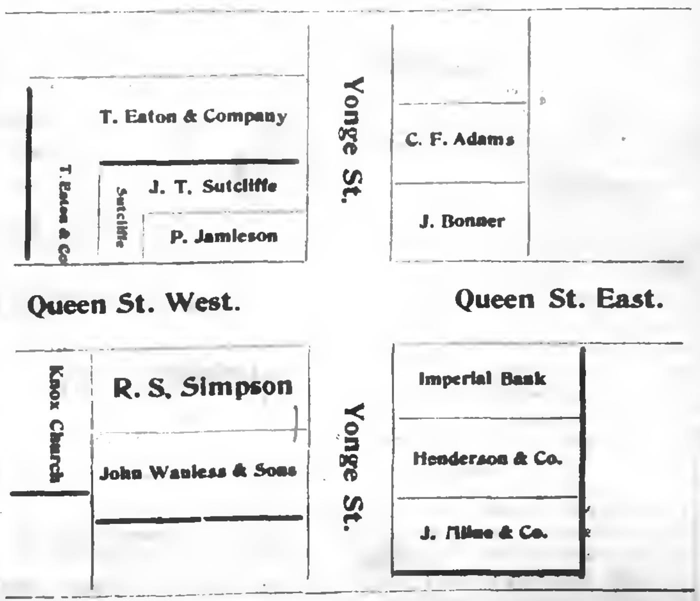
TORONTO, March 3.—Another disastrous fire has visited this city and razed to the ground some of the most costly and substantial business buildings. The path of the flames was in the heart of the retail business portion of Toronto, and under less favorable circumstances, Toronto's largest and wealthiest stores, in fact the main business portion, would have been swept away. As it is, the conflagration assumed an immensity never equalled before, and the loss of property is greater than in the two previous fires. What were yesterday the handsomest four business corners in the city, are now huge heaps of blackened ruins, and where imposing structures stood, only crumbling, smoking walls remain.

THE BEGINNING.

ROBERT SIMPSON'S LARGE AND COSTLY NEW STORE THE FIRST TO GO.

This morning shortly before one o'clock a tremendous fire broke out in Robert Simpson's large departmental store located at the corner of Yonge and Queen streets. This building, recently erected and one of the largest and most costly of its kind in Canada, is wholly destroyed. The building cost about two hundred thousand dollars and the stock is an enormous one.

THE BURNED DISTRICT.



Note:—The burned district and the business houses destroyed are shown in the above diagram. The heavy rules denote the boundaries in which the fire was confined. Only the Queen street wing of T. Eaton & Co.'s store was damaged.

At 1.30 a. m. a high wind from the west caused the fire to spread rapidly. The flames completely enveloped the structure and the wind carried them across the street, where they ignited several buildings. In a few minutes there were half a dozen buildings ablaze and the firemen were confronted with an almost hopeless task. Simpson's store was doomed, and the firemen directed their combined efforts to stay the galloping flames which were extending in all directions with a rapidity at once appalling and frightening.

At 1.45, or less than an hour after its origin Simpson's building collapsed with a roar that could be heard for miles and scattering burning brands and sparks that lighted up the sky as brightly as day. The collapse was anticipated and with the terrible fatalities of the Globe fire fresh in mind, the police forwarned spectators and firemen, who were well out of the way when the ponderous walls and heavy iron columns tottered and then crashed into the roaring abyss.

FLAMES SPREAD.

PHILLIP JAMIESON'S LARGE STORE IN THE GOVERNMENT BUILDING WIPED OUT.

At 2 o'clock the fire crossed Queen street to the north and the flames wound around and quickly enveloped the handsome front of Phillip Jamieson's large clothing and tailoring establishment. The south and east fronts of this store was of plate glass, and this breaking on account of the heat a wide passage was opened to the interior through which the flames were carried by the wind. The building was soon entirely gutted. In the third storey were the offices of the Ontario Agricultural and Arts department. The flames continued northward and next enveloped J. Sutcliffe's big departmental establishment. This store has an entrance both on Yonge street and Queen street west, running back of Jamieson's, and it in turn is adjoined on the north side and west end by the mammoth establishment of T. Eaton & Company. The entire fire brigade was working on this building, and by heroic work stopped the northward progress of the flames, but not before Sutcliffe's store was completely destroyed, and the Queen street branch of T. Eaton & Company was badly damaged. More by luck, than anything else, the latter establishment was saved from total destruction.

KNOX CHURCH, TOO.

THE HISTORIC STEEPLE FELL WITH A CRASH AT 3 A.M.

At 3 o'clock the fire had exceeded in magnitude the two big conflagrations of a few weeks ago. The fire brigade worked with a will, but were greatly hampered by falling wires and the fire showed no signs of diminishing.

West of Robert Simpson's on Queen and a little back from the kerbing, for many years had stood the historic Knox Presbyterian church. This edifice was ablaze shortly after the first outbreak, and as the city clock struck 3 the high steeple swayed and then fell with a crash. West of this is a brick structure known as the Shakespear restaurant. A space intervenes and checked the westward course of the fire.

YONGE STREET EAST.

BONNER'S, THE IMPERIAL BANK, C. F. ADAMS & CO., MILNE & CO., FALL A PREY.

By this time thousands of citizens had reached the vicinity of the burning district and the lurid light shone upon a vast gathering of excited and upturned faces. While the firemen were stopping the north advance of the fire, it leaped across Yonge street to the east and in a few minutes Bonner's gents' furnishing store on the northeast corner of Queen and Yonge and the large stone structure of the Imperial Bank were seething in a maelstrom of fire. North of Bonners' are Duffield's store and C. F. Adams & Company's large furniture emporium. These were gutted in less than 30 minutes. South of the Imperial Bank on the east side of Yonge, are John Milne & Co., house furnishings, etc., and C. M. Henderson's auction rooms. These and the bank building were completely devasted.

South of Simpson's on the west side of Yonge is John Wanless & Company, Jewellers. This establishment was almost totally destroyed at the time that Simpson's succumbed to the flames.

At 4 a.m. the immense bell tower of Knox church fell crashing through the roof. This gave the flames a free passageway. At this time the fire was practically under control.

As near as can be estimated the losses are: R. Simpson, building, $200,000, stock about $300,000; P. Jamieson, building and stock, $100,000; J. Sutcliffe & Sons, building and stock, $125,000; John Milne & Co., house furnishings, $40,000. Damage to Knox church and other buildings will probably average $50,000 additional, making the total loss of about three quarters of a million dollars. Insurances are probably two thirds.

A LATER ACCOUNT.

THE FIRE ORIGINATED IN ROBERT SIMPSON'S PACKING ROOMS.

The fire originated in the packing rooms of Robert Simpson's and, the flames rushing up the elevator shaft, communicated almost instantly to every flat so that when the firemen arrived on the scene smoke and flames were coming out of nearly every window. Hose was got into position as quickly as possible but by the time the first jet of water was thrown on the huge structure, it was felt to be a foregone conclusion that the building was doomed.

Stream after stream was thrown against the walls, but the water turned to steam and added rather than checked the flames. It was a fact that had to be confessed from the first that the fire department was utterly inadequate to cope with such a conflagration. The pressure from the mains was insufficient to throw the water either high enough or a sufficient quantity to check the raging furnace caused by the consumption of the inflammable material with which the store was filled. The heat was so intense that the firemen worked in deadly peril. As floor after floor fell the flames mounted higher and looked like a volcano at once magnificent and destructive.

Fanned by a slight breeze from the southwest the fire was driven like an arch across Queen street to the north side and Jamieson's large tailoring establishment was soon a victim from this. The flames extended to a portion of the Eaton dry goods establishment, but by the exertion of the firemen aided by a private hose in the establishment, the flames were prevented entering the main building. From Jamieson's the fire extended north to Sutcliffe's dry goods house and burned it to the ground.

NEARLY A MILLION.

THE ESTIMATED LOSS PLACED AT $875,000—LOSS AND INSURANCE.

The following are the estimated losses and insurances of the heaviest losers:—

Robert Simpson on building and stock	$500,000
J. T. Sutcliffe	75,000
Peter Jamieson	60,000
J. Bonners	50,000
C. F. Adams & Co	20,000
Duffield	10,000
John Milne & Co	25,000
J. Wanless, jeweller	25,000
Ontario Government building	40,000
Imperial Bank	20,000
Henderson	50,000
Total	$875,000

Robert Simpson had $100,000 insurance on building and $220,000 on stock. The other insurances are unknown.

SHOT DOWN!

Terrible Double Murder and Shooting.

TWO KILLED, TWO HURT.

Two Employees of the Montreal Cotton Company Killed and Two Seriously Wounded by the Manager's Private Secretary Shortis.

Special to the Times.

VALLEYFIELD, Que., March 2.—This town had a sensation last night that the members of the present generation will never forget.

The paymaster of the Montreal Cotton Company, John Lowe, assisted by two of the office clerks, J. Loy and Hugh Wilson, were making up the pay ready for Monday when Mr. Shortis, who was lately the private secretary of the manager of the mill, entered the office about eleven o'clock.

HIS FIRST VICTIM.

When the clerks had about finished making up the pay, Shortis reached over the counter and managed to get the revolver, which Mr. Lowe always keeps close at hand. He first shot Wilson over the left side.

Messrs. Loy and Lowe thought it was an accident. The former made for the telephone to get a doctor, whilst the latter went to Wilson's assistance. Before Loy reached the telephone, however, Shortis, took deliberate aim shooting Loy dead right through the heart. He then fired at Lowe but missed, hitting Wilson again over the forehead and cheek.

Lowe, seeing how matters were, grabbed the payboxes which contained $25,000 and ran into the vault with them pulling the massive door after him.

A PERMISSIBLE FIB.

Shortis followed him to the door and asked Lowe to come out as he did not wish to injure him. Lowe replied that he was locked in and could not get out, though such was not the case, the door being simply shut.

Shortis said, "Give me the combination, Jack, and I will let you out."

The latter replied, "Just give the knob a sharp turn and it will open." The murderer did so and locked the safe.

While this was going on, Wilson by a superhuman effort managed to crawl out of the office to the fire-hole, where a couple of men were at work. Before these men, however, managed to reach the office, Max Lebeouf, night watchman, entered the office. On reaching the door, however, he was met by Shortis and shot dead. The latter threw the body down stairs. He then proceeded to cut the wires of the telephone so as to shut off all communication outside. He then made another attempt to get into the safe, and while engaged in this the foreman and others entered. His revolver was empty, and they had no trouble in overcoming him.

John Loy, his first victim, was one of the prominent young men in the community. He was eldest son of G. M. Loy, the present Mayor of the town, and a general favorite with all who knew him.

TWO MORE MAY DIE.

Mr. Wilson is lying in a critical condition, and grave fears are entertained as to the result of his injuries.

Mr. Lowe, who was enclosed in the vault for three hours, is in a bad way. He was seriously ill about New Year's with a paralytic brain attack, and the present severe strain may cause him serious trouble. He is laid up this morning in such a state that it will be no surprise if a third or even fourth death takes place over the affair.

ROBBERY WAS THE MOTIVE.

VALLEYFIELD, March 2.—Further inquiry reveals that robbery and not revenge was the supreme motive which animated Charles Shortis to commit the two murders. He was somewhat of a sport and drank heavily. He is about 25 years of age and is English. He came here five or six months ago and was discharged about six weeks ago. An inquest is in progress.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 4, 1895.

Good morning!

March came in like a lamb. Which probably means that the cold weather is not all over yet.

The Spiritualists of Massachusetts, in a recent convention, passed resolutions against the Medical laws of the State, and against any extension of the laws relating to contagious and other dangerous diseases. They believe people ought to be allowed to die without State interference.

In obtaining the serum for the antitoxine treatment about 10 quarts is the amount drawn from each horse at one time on the average. The animals suffer no perceptible exhaustion, and are not made useless for other purposes. Among the twenty-five horses now owned by the British Institute is a grandson of Blair Athol.

The most conclusive evidence that the TIMES is the best advertising medium in Eastern Ontario, is the fact that its columns are used by the well-known wholesale house of John Macdonald & Co., Toronto and Montreal, who are known throughout Canada as the leading dry-goods importers in the Dominion.

The Conservatives of East Peterborough will meet in convention at Norwood to-morrow to bring out a candidate to contest the riding at the approaching elections. Mr. John Burnham is understood to have definitely declined to accept the nomination. The chances are that Dr. Brennan, Mr. J. B. Pearce or Mr. John Maloney, Reeve of Douro, will be the candidate. The first named gentleman has been brought up in the riding, and stands well with the people.

Treasurer Harcourt presented his budget speech the other day and succeeded in satisfying everybody that the affairs of the province are in good shape, and that government is exercising careful economy in its administration, expenditures being reduced in many instances despite the increase of population. It is a question if there is any local government on earth that is more careful and economical in its administration of affairs than is the Government of Ontario. Treasurer Harcourt is not a brilliant speaker, but he has a way of making his financial statements interesting, and it is a fine thing for the province that he is not only able to make them interesting, but gratifying as well.

The proposal to offer the Howry firm substantial inducements to locate in Peterborough is being favorably entertained THE TIMES is authorized by the firm to state that if they receive sufficient encouragement there is a strong probability of their erecting large mills here. Our idea is that the old Ludgate mill site on the shore of the Little Lake be offered the firm free, together with exemption from taxes for a number of years. The property need not be purchased, as the firm intend to operate the mills until the timber limits are exhausted, a matter of 15 or 18 years. The village will cheerfully exempt the works from taxation, so that the town would only have to secure the property, which could no doubt be done for a very moderate yearly rental.

THE HYAMS CASE.

The trial of the twin Hyams, who are accused of the murder of a young man in their employ in order that they might get their hands on his life insurance, began in Toronto a few days ago, and nothing of a startling nature was developed. If the crown has no stronger evidence than has been brought out so far, there is not much chance of a conviction. At present it looks as if it had nothing but a few suspicious circumstances to go upon, and these may be capable of being explained away.

Such a length of time has elapsed since the tragic death of young Wells that it is not an easy task now to get at the facts. Memory plays many tricks with men in the course of a few years. The nice sense of proportion is lost, suspicions grow by brooding, some circumstances are forgotten while others become distorted. This may not be true in regard to the broad, general outlines of any given question, but it is undoubtedly true of matters of nice detail which must nesessarily play an important part in cases of the nature of this one.

But it may be that the evidence yet to be brought out will shew that the crown did not act hastily in causing the arrest of the Hyams. At its best, however, the evidence against them can only be of a circumstantial nature, which so far as one may judge from what has already transpired, is neither clear nor direct. The case has elements which go to make it a remarkable and singularly interesting one, and the accounts of the progress of the trial will be closely followed all over the country.

THE HUNGER FOR GOLD.

There are many who find it difficult to understand why it is that there is such an ado in the States about gold. A good deal, they say, is heard here now and then about the scarcity of money; but no one seems to complain that gold is scarce In the United States there seems to be plenty of money but the people are all the time crying out for gold and declaring that there will be another business collapse if gold is not poured into the treasury and that soon. These people say further: we know that the expenditure of the government in the United States is greater than the revenue, but that has happened in Canada and other countries before now and a deficit has not been productive of any very terrible consequences A rich country like the United States ought to pe able to easily tide over a time of temporary stringency.

And so it would if it had only the deficiency of the revenue to provide against. But it must be remembered that the United States government is liable for every dollar in greenbacks, in treasury notes, in gold certificates, and silver certificates now in circulation. These are liabilities payable on demand and there must be gold enough in the Treasury to meet every note that may be presented for redemption. It is this that renders it necessary for the Government of the United States to have on hand a large supply of gold. If the supply should at any time run out and the Government could not redeem its notes with gold there would be a dreadful panic in every city and town and village in every State of the Union. People would lose confidence in the money of the United States. It would then be no longer in their estimation "as good as gold." This loss of confidence would produce many and great evils, and would effect the ruin of thousands who are now rich in comfortable circumstances. It was merely the fear that the United States might be at some time, not far off, unable to redeem its paper with gold that caused the last fearful panic in the United States, in which banks went crashing in every direction and in which business houses beleived to be as firm as rocks crumbled like piles of sand. If only the fear of such a catastrophe produced these dire results, what would be the effects of the catastrophe itself?

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING
CAN YOU GET IT?

Many who should kno wbetter, are well pleased to get a good sized glass jar or tin of bulky alum, ammonia or other powerful but injurious mixture, for use as Baking Powder, at much less, perhaps even half the price, of the really good article, overlooking the fact that the amount thus APPARENTLY saved is of small moment in comparison with the real but not always immediately observed inevitable injury following the use of these articles. If in addition to the seemingly low prices, there is attached some showy gift or prize to give the impression of extra value, the inferior or hurtful nature of the powder is lost sight of in the expectation (a vain one) of getting "something for nothing."
"LADIES' HOME" and "HAPPY THOUGHT" on the other hand, can always be depended on as articles of first class quality, and such as can be AND ARE guaranteed not only free from everything in the slightest degree injurious, but invariably sure, satisfactory and economical.

A JURY WILL DECIDE

Whether or not Luella Lacey Poisoned an 18-Months-Old Baby.

Special to the Times.

HAMILTON, March 1.—The Grimsby poisoning case was put through its preliminary stages yesterday, when Luella Lacey, the 13-year-old servant-girl of Thomas Pearson, South Grimsby, was arraigned before Magistrate Forbes on a charge of administering carbolic acid to the 18-months-old boy, causing its death.

The girl was defended by Mr. Lancaster, and pleaded not guilty. Mr. Brennen, of St. Catharines, conducted the prosecution.

Testimony was offered to show that no one but the prisoner was in the house with the child at the time of the poisoning, and that the bottle could not possibly be reached by the infant.

The prisoner was committed for trial at the Assizes, which open in St. Catharines next week.

A PUZZLE FOR DOCTORS.

Over Fifteen Hours Unconscious After Inhaling Gas, with Pulse Normal.

Special to the Times.

TERRA HAUTE, Ind., March 1.—Samuel Backus went to bed last night and accidently left a light burning in his room. The odor of escaping gas was noticed today. The door was burst open and Backus was found unconscious.

A physician worked over him all day, but failed to rouse him from a comatose state. His pulse is normal and his breathing regular. The medical men who have seen him are completely baffled by his condition.

Only two cases are on record of persons overcome by gas who have remained unconscious for over fifteen hours and recoveree. Backus has passed the fifteenth hour and is still alive.

DIED AT BELLEVILLE.

Henry McCarthy, a Popular Young Man, Passes Away.

Special to the Times.

BELLEVILLE, March 1.—Henry McCarthy a popular young man of this city, died at nine o'clock this morning after an illness of eighteen months from consumption.

He had been employed with Wallbridge & Clarke, grocers and wine merchants, until taken ill. He was 26 years of age and unmarried. He was a member of Moira Lodge of Masons and Court Quinte, A.O.F. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon.

COUNTY CONSTABLES

Forming a Provincial Association at Hamilton.

Special to The Times.

HAMILTON, March 1.—The Dominion county constables met here today for the purpose of organization. About 75 were in attendance this morning. Constable Thomas Wasson, of Toronto, president of the York County Constables' Association, is the likely candidate for president.

The association will apply to the Dominion and Provincial Parliaments for a return to the old scale of constables fees.

Manitoba Stands Firm.

WINNIPEG, March 1.—The Fisher amendment in the Manitoba Legislature was defeated by the Greenway Government by 22 to 10. On the same division Attorney-General Sifton's resolution declaring that Manitoba would tolerate no interference in its school affairs was carried.

A COMPARISON.

On o'er the pastures, where the mountain flowers
  Starring the sward trim garden beds outshow!
  On through sweet pine woods, cross the torrents' flow.
On o'er vast bowlder mounds, while still the hours
Make labor lightsome! For above thee towers
  Unseen as yet, the peak, on o'er the snow!
  Nor heedless tread its smoother plain, for, lo!
The blue abysses yawn, the avalanche lowers!

Scale yonder beetling cliffs, where now the sun
  Beats fiercely, how sure steps in walls of ice.
    What though with toil worn limb and laboring breath,
Hold bravely on until the height be won.
  So runs life's tale—childhood, youth's paradise,
    Hard manhood, weary age, the goal of death.

GAMBLING ORIENTALS.

Games of Chance Are as the Breath of Life to Them.

There appear to be three races of men—the Chinese, the Malays and the natives of Manilla, to whom in every grade and under all conditions of life gambling in some form or other is as the breath of their nostrils. The love of it is inborn. They seem unable to live contented lives without the pleasurable excitement that is to be found in games of mingled chance and skill, but among Chinamen generally, and certainly among Chinamen abroad, the gambling is of a very mild type indeed. In most cities where there is a considerable alien Chinese population to be dealt with the necessity for licensing and regulating or at least winking at the existence of their gaming houses is recognized. It is the one pastime in a life of continuous toil, the denial of which would be intolerable and practically impossible.

But the evil never assumes proportions of any more seriousness than our own domestic hand of "Napoleon" or the club rubber of whist or nominal points so long as the authorities confine the games strictly to the Chinamen themselves, a course followed in such cities as Calcutta and Sydney. It is only when the riffraff of other races are allowed to "take a hand" and to utilize the Chinese games, tables and banks for the gratification of their own gambling propensities that anything like widespread mischief is wrought. A Chinaman may, in rare instances, lose his all when gaming among his own countrymen, but if this result does happen he goes next day contentedly back to work and is not, like most ruined gamblers of European stock, permanently incapacitated for honest toil.

If white men lose money in a Chinese gambling house, they are at once illogical, dishonest and contemptible in denouncing the Chinese as the cause of their misfortune. The bush workers inveigh against their Chinese competitors for their habit of gambling, yet it is notorious that the shearers and the roustabouts' huts on the sheep stations are frequently scenes where men are, in colonial phraseology, "lambed down" and fleeced of all their season's earnings by quasiprofessional gamblers, who find the evening game at cards far more profitable and to their taste than the day's work on or around the shearing board. Similarly in the cities the poor Chinaman is denounced for his fondness for fantan or pakapu, played for coppers, while the very men who throw the stone openly frequent race courses and card clubs.—Nineteenth Century.

Childhood's Simple Pleasures.

The exultation which Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin feels over her real childhood, with its copper toed shoes and rag doll, in her chapter on training children, will find an echo in the breasts of many city mothers. It is what many of them fight for for their children as they fight for health in the city's microbe and bacillus laden air.

"How can a real child keep her happy enjoyment in simple pleasures?" said a woman, discussing this point recently, "when every influence to which she is subject is against it? My little girl had a birthday lately, her tenth, and she was thrown into an ecstasy of delight over a little silver pin an aunt sent her.

"She rushed over to show it to her other self, the little neighbor over the way, and returned in a few minutes with the serpent in her Eden. I saw the cloud and soon found its cause.

"'Mamma,' she whispered, coming close to me, 'Kitty thinks my pin isn't sterling. What is sterling, mamma?'

"That's the whole thing in a nutshell. Everything today must represent so many dollars, or it has no value. The atmosphere of life is so surcharged with this strife for the high priced that even the babies absorb it, and childhood, with no discrimination, is tormented by it. It makes my heart ache to think that the birthright of my little ones—the capacity to enjoy without knowing—is being stolen from them, and I must stand by powerless to prevent it."—New York Times.

Would Blow Himself.

The ideas of men who have been living a rough frontier life for years with reference to what constitutes a big spread and what luxury is become strangely modified.

Several miners who had been in the mining districts of Colorado for years were discussing what they would do if they were to become rich or strike it lucky.

"Well," said one, "I know what I'll do. I'll go to New York as straight as the cars will take me, and when I get there I'll make a bee line for Delmonico's, and I'll get the biggest dinner money can buy. I don't care if it costs me $50 or more, I'll have it."

"Now, what do you think you would order if you were to go to Delmonico's for a $50 dinner?"

"Well, I dunno, but I guess I'd have some ham and eggs—yes, I'd just have some ham and eggs."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Duck's Death From Grief.

Mr. E. C. Lanier of Waynesboro tells a pathetic duck story. He owned a pair of ducks, one of which was seriously injured and was put in a pen for protection. The old drake was faithful to his better half and sat around the pen with all the patience of one anxious for the recovery of some dear one. The injured duck died within a few days, and the old drake refused to eat and finally died from grief, for he was apparently in the best of health and was fed regularly. Is there any lover whose eyes fall upon this pathetic love story who would stick to his "duck" so faithfully?—Atlanta Constitution.

The people of tropical countries almost invariably use some form of capsicum with maize as a stimulant to the stomach, maize being more difficult of digestion than some other grains.

Oskaloosa, the name of a Kansas town, is said to be a compound of Oska, the name of a noted Indian chief, and Loosa, his wife.

THE WALLED HERD.

STRANGE STORY OF AN INACCESSIBLE BAND OF CATTLE.

A Pyramid of Bones Marks the Spot Where Their Ancestors Fell Over a Precipice Twenty Years Ago—Dwell In Safety Where Man Has Never Trod.

In the wildest portion of the west, 71 miles northwest of Meeker, where, in 1879, the Utes massacred the Meeker family and every one at the agency, is the most wonderful cattle ranch in the world. Within a space of five miles in length and three miles in width roams a herd upon whose sides the branding iron has never been placed and around whose horns the lariat has never tightened. But a score or even fewer of them have ever seen a man or horse or other animal of their kind, and, in fact, their kin except at a distance of nearly 600 feet high above them. Ute Indians call them "p'check-up," or red buffalo. And yet if an Indian who has seen them should be asked about it he would laugh and shake his head, and all the information obtainable would be, "P'check-up; 'em red; no ketch 'em." There are more than 1,000 of this herd, and yet no man owns them, nor is there a man, white or black or copper colored, who has ever been able to possess a single hoof of these fat and tempting beeves.

The cattle are in a prison. Out of it there is one method of escape, but to travel that road means death to the adventurous one. There is no way to get in except it be by use of a rope 1,000 feet in length. As the Indians say: "Heap see 'em; no ketch 'em; no come away." On the two long sides of the oblong space in which these cattle roam rise precipitous and even concave rocks for 500 or 600 feet—yawning, black and insurmountable. At either end seethes and rushes the Yampa or Bear river. For miles above and miles below it plunges and stumbles on in its headlong haste to reach the arms of its parent, the scarcely less tumultuous but deeper Green river. Like the wonderful flat top mountain of Colorado, this home of the imprisoned herd has no likeness in the world. It recalls in its inaccessibility the marvelous stories of the valley of verdure, into which Mayne Reid's adventurers only found their way by the assistance of the balloon.

The story of the way in which these cattle came there is as strange as their existence is curious. Over 20 years ago, when the government troops were pursuing the Mormon murderers of the innocent victims of the Mountain Meadow massacre, the Danites, or Avenging Angels of the Mormons, fled for their lives into what was then literally the wilderness. A few of those who had been the blindest followers of Lee, the Mormon fiend incarnate, whose hands were red with the blood of women and children, found in their wanderings a pretty valley or stream, which flows from the Wasatch range into the Green river. They stuck their stakes, built their campfires and during the night their sagacious leader had a vision, which told him there to stay. They could hardly have chosen in all Utah a more fertile or more isolated spot. They called it Ashley, and about them have since gathered more of their sect until where the refugees posted their pickets on the lonely nights of the first summer has grown a thriving village. It is 140 miles from the Union Pacific railroad south and 145 miles north of the Rio Grande Western. Until within a few years past it has been isolated entirely, but now it is but 80 miles from the Ute reservation, and furnishing supplies for the agency forms quite a business for the community.

It is a tenet of the Danites that robbing or theft from a gentile is no crime. So it was thought to be only a cunning trick when John Wyckliffe, one of the Mormon settlers of the new town, and his three sons made a night sortie on Henry's ford in Wyoming and carried away 800 head of cattle ranging there. This was in 1874. The owners of the cattle discovered their loss a few days after they were gone and started in pursuit.

The thieves and the stolen herd had reached a mesa of inviting grass at sundown one day and halted to camp for the night. A terrific storm arose. The lightning flashed incessantly, and the thunder pealed and cracked with intermitting fury. The four men desperately held the terror stricken cattle by riding around them constantly and chanting some weird tune. But the wild fearfulness of the furious storm excited the brutes beyond measure. They surged and ground, every moment growing less subject to control. All at once, as if by one mad impulse, they stampeded.

John Wyckliffe and his sons met their fate amid the lightning's glare and the thunder's roar. They endeavored to head off the stampeding herd. Instead they and their horses were swept on and driven in the terror to escape the charge of the maddened animals over the brink of the awful precipice which frowns up from the waters of the Bear. After them plunged the whole fright crazed herd, and down to the bottom of the fearful fall went horses, riders and horned creatures. Out of this strange plunge of life to what was seemingly certain death to all a few of the herd were not killed. Those which had gone ahead formed a cushion of death. Maimed, stunned, but still invested with a spark of life, when the dread storm was over the living cattle crawled out from the mass beneath them and formed a nucleus for the herd which now roams at will within its rocky confines. On the bank of the river, stretching back a few hundred yards, grow succulent grasses, and upon this the cattle have propagated and thrived. In looking over the edge of the precipice one can see that they are small and as wild and agile as deer. They have been shot at to see the effect and have learned to regard the appearance of a man, whether Indian or white, as a menace from which they flee, clambering over rocks and through underbrush in the chase to a point of concealment.

The place where the thieves and their horses and the herd fell is plainly marked by a pyramid of bones, which rises to the height of 30 feet. The ghastly reminder and relics of the human and animal victims of the terrible leap shine forth white and glistening when the sun is high and reaches that spot with its full glare. The progeny of the surviving animals from the fall are fat and sleek, though, and have their sunny beds, deerlike, where they lie for warmth in the winter, and to them the monument of skeletons is no source of disquietude. There is no fierce mountain lion or more dangerous bear, nor, in fact, any other animate thing within this cow garden of Eden. As yet, too, no man has been able to reach or disturb them.—San Francisco Examiner.

JAPS RETREATING

From Their Advanced Position at Wei-Hai-Wei—China Must Give Up.

Special to the Times.

CHEFOO, March 1.—The Japanese are evacuating their advanced position at Wei-Hai-Wei. Ninghai, a town lying about midway between Wei-Hai-Wei and this city, has been abandoned. The greater part of the Japanese army which has been operating on the Shan-Tung peninsula has re-embarked upon transports, which have left Wei-Hai-Wei for Talien Wan, on the Liau-Tung peninsula, almost directly across the Gulf of Pe-Chi-Li from Wei-Hai-Wei.

KING OF CANAL STREET DEAD.

He Died from Pneumonia Contracted at a Cock Fight in Canada.

Special to the Times.

BUFFALO, March 1.—Hank Kilcourse, the "King of Canal street," and the greatest dog and cock fighter of Buffalo, died last night at a hospital from pneumonia contracted at a cocking main which he attended about four weeks ago in Canada.

A Fire at Markham.

MARKHAM, March 1.—Fire destroyed H. C. Clendenning's stable early this morning. It was insured in the Royal for $100.

DeBarry Still at It.

BUFFALO, March, 1.—Inspector DeBarry yesterday deported William Nichols, a farm hand from Niagara Falls, Ont, who had been engaged by Frank Randall, of Ripley, Chautuqua county. He was to receive $100 for nine months' labor, besides his board, lodging and washing, and at the end of the nine months he intended to return home again.

New Mexico Mine Dead.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., March. 1.—Advices today from the scene of the mime explosion at Cerrilos, place the number of dead positively at 25. One man is still missing. All the rest of the miners are accounted for. The superintendent of the mine said today that the explosion was caused by the carelessness of two miners who passed the danger line with unprotected lamps against orders. A coroner's jury was empannelled today and will begin taking evidence tomorrow. The danger to the mine is small.

A Catholic Church Burned.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., March 1.—St. Joseph's Catholic church was burned last night; cause unknown. Loss $80,000, with $20,000 insurance. Levis Farr and George Folts were seriously injured by the fall of brick while they were examining the ruins.

China Must Cede Territory.

BERLIN, March 1.—Viscount Aoki, Japanese Minister to Germany, said today: "Without a cessation of territory China cannot reckon on the termination of the war. While it is fully understood that China must indemnify us for our expenses in war, I am aware that the European powers may interfere to prevent a cession of territory, but it is to be hoped that the Japanese Government will maintain its position that the conclusion of the peace equally with the conflict concerns Japan and China alone."

POPPY LAND LIMITED EXPRESS.

The first train leaves at 6 p.m.
For the land where the poppy blows;
And mother dear is the engineer,
And each passenger laughs and crows.

The palace car is the mother's arms,
The whistle a low, sweet strain,
The passengers wink and nod and blink,
And go fast asleep in the train.

At 8 p.m. the next train starts
For the poppy land afar;
The summons clear falls on the ear—
"All aboard for the sleeping car."

What is the fare to poppy land?
I hope it is not too dear,
The fare is this, a hug and a kiss,
And is paid to the engineer.

So I ask of Him, whom children took,
In His arms, in kindness great,
Take charge, I pray, of the trains each day
That leave at 6 and 8.

"Keep watch of the passengers, thus I pray,
For to me they are very dear;
And special care, O gracious Lord,
Over the gentle engineer."

PENNED UNDER A WRECK

THE THRILLING FATE OF MANY PILGRIMS IN MEXICO.

Crushed in a Shapeless Mass—Women Virtually Torn From the Entangled Débris by the Rescuers—A Father Sees His Wife and Children Killed.

Special to the Times.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 2.—A wrecking train arrived here early this morning from the scene of yesterday's accident on the Inter-Ocean railway. It brought forty persons who had been injured in the crash and Dr. Atfield Bray, Dr. Francis Crossen and two other surgeons who were sent out yesterday afternoon soon after news of the disaster was received here. Sixty-five persons were left dead near the spot where the train left the rails, and of those who were brought back ten or twelve cannot possibly recover. The crew of the wrecking train told the first detailed story of the accident. The train consisted of ten coaches. It was chartered by pilgrims from Amecameca, and the engineer was under orders to run carefully. It was filled with pilgrims, many of them women and children. At the city station, shortly before 1 o'clock, the fated train started. It proceeded slowly at first, but after stopping for water the engineer began running at the rate of 20 miles an hour. About 28 miles from the capital and midway between Temamatla and Tenango there is a steep down-grade. On one side of the track the blasted rock forms a high wall, on the other is a steep descent. At a point where descent is about 20 feet the track makes a curve. The train swerved round it at half speed, but for a reason not yet known the engine of the pilgrim train failed to take it without slowing down. Either the rails spread or the engine

JUMPED THE TRACK.

The engine and tender broke loose from the coaches and rolled down the embankment. The rear coaches crashed down against the engine and tender and the rest went to pieces at the foot of the embankment near by. Five coaches were smashed so as to be little more than piles of splintered boards and beams and twisted iron. About 20 passengers were able to extricate themselves without severe injury, and they began rescuing those who were pinned under the wreck. Four women were found with their arms crushed and immovable, under beams and twisted axles. They lay near the engine and were screaming for fear of the flames. After all efforts to clear them had proved in vain they were torn loose, one of them losing her arm from the shoulder, another her arm from the elbow and each of the other two having both arms crushed and legs terribly mutilated. Three of the four will die. Three children of one family were found dead together under an upset car truck. Their mother lay near by with her skull crushed and one leg gone. The father escaped with only a broken shoulder although he was on the same seat as the three children who were killed. Fragments of arms and legs were strewn through the wreckage and several of the bodies were so mutilated that no attempt to identify them was made. When the doctors arrived on the wreckage train they found near the wreck. The doctors worked for five hours to get the injured in condition to make the journey back. Six men had lost half of their scalps, four had fractured skulls, six women were so badly injured in the abdomen that it was feared they would die before reaching the city. All the doctors agree that the scenes at the wreck and in the coaches during their journey home were the most horrible in their experience. The train arrived at the curve where the wreck occurred at 4 o'clock and it did not start back until near midnight. All the pilgrims were Mexicans. The engineer and conductor of the train are supposed to have escaped serious injury and to have fled to the woods.

SIXTY DEAD PILGRIMS

A Black Flag on a Church.

ROCHESTER, March 2.—Rev. Mr. Turner of the Protestant Episcopal church of the Good Shepherd has been forbidden by Bishop Coxe to officiate anywhere in the Diocese of Western New York because of his extremely high church practices. The congregation has run up a black flag on the church as an emblem of alleged persecution.

HYAMS' MURDER TRIAL.

THE PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION NEARLY OVER.

There is no Evidence Against Dallas Hyams and He Will Likely be Acquitted—A Bogus Telegram Put in as Evidence.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 2.—There were a few unimportant cases disposed of before Magistrate Denison at the Police Court this morning, and then the Hyams twins were again brought into the prisoner's dock.

James Rankin, who was foreman at the Colborne street warehouse before the Hyams occupied it, said that it would be impossible for the weight to come off the hook.

GOING TO BUY A FARM.

Uriah J. Jones, of Pickering, uncle of the victim, testified that Wells was intending to buy a farm from him, and was to pay $1,000 down on the $2,400 farm on January 6th, 1893.

A telegram which read: "Cannot come until tomorrow morning; will wire when coming," signed "Willie," was shown to witness, who swore that this was a copy of a telegram received by him on January 10th. At that time witness was expecting Wells down to make the first deposit of $1,000 on the farm.

Crown Attorney Curry wanted to put in an agreement between Wells and Jones which would show that it was binding upon Wells to get this $1,000 from Hyams.

A STARTLING STATEMENT.

"I warn my learned friend," said Mr. Johnston, "that if this agreement is allowed to go in. I will expose a swindle right here which is that Jones was attempting to sell this farm which was worth only $500 to his nephew Wells for $2,450."

The agreement did not go in and Jones said, "I never owned a $300 farm; that farm cost me $3,000."

T. W. Horn, one of the counsel for the defence was called as a witness but objections were raised and decision was reserved till Monday.

BLOOD ON BOXES ON THE SECOND FLOOR.

A wholesale jobber named Wm. H. Riches swore that on January 19, 20 and 21, of 1893, he removed a quantity of groceries from the Hyams' warehouse. On the second floor he found a sugar barrel and a number of pearline boxes stained with blood. The stain on the barrel was the size of his two hands.

BARRISTER SMOKE IN THE BOX.

Barrister S. C. Smoke was then sworn. He was Marthe Wells' solicitor in the spring of 1893.

Mr. Johnston objected to this evidence and Mr. Smoke explained that he had not been released as solicitor for Mrs. Harry P. Hyams. He further understood that Mrs. Hyams did not desire him to make any disclosures.

The evidence was allowed to go in.

In the course of his practice he had a transaction with H. P. Hyams. He had a conversation with the prisoner in the presence of Mr. Horn but witness could tell no more than the substance of it. An admission was certainly made by either H. P. Hyams or Mr. Horn on that occasion that a certain amount of money was received by Harry Hyams from Miss Wells. Witness thought that $9,000 of Miss Wells' money was admitted to be in Harry Hyams' hands at that time, March 30, 1893. Of this amount Miss Wells only got security for about $1,000.

LITTLE EVIDENCE AGAINST DALLAS.

The case in chief for the Crown is almost completed, and so far little or no evidence has been submitted which could in any way inculpate Dallas Hyams in the crime, if such it was. The fact that Dallas was in the warehouse at the time Wells was killed might lead some to suspect that he was associated with his brother in the commission of the deed, if a murder had been perpetrated, but these suspicions are not, so far, borne out by facts. There being a conspicuous absence of motive on the part of Dallas Hyams has been quite evident throughout the investigation.

The other witnesses examined were Charles Hackney, a carpenter; Bookkeeper Dart, of the New York Life, and Albert Fryer, another carpenter. The last witness was cross-examined by Lawyer Murdoch, who took his first active part in the preliminary investigation.

WAS IT BOGUS?

NEW YORK, March 2.—Mrs. Cosarana, of 100 East 16th street, was seen this morning and she denied ever having received a telegram from Mrs. Dallas T. Hyams, of Toronto. In fact she states that she does not know Mrs. Hyams or any person by that name.

The telegram produced at the Hyams' murder trial and perporting to have been sent by Mrs. Dallas Hyams to Mrs. Cosaraun must have been a canard.

To Escape From the Central Prison—The Nerve of Two Prisoners.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, March 2.—William H. Wilkinson of Belleville, aged 31, and Robert Wilson, of Barrie, ten years younger, made an attempt to escape from the Central Prison in which they were serving lengthy sentences.

They secreted themselves in a space between the ceiling and the roof above a small dry kiln Thursday afternoon although the entire prison staff had been looking for them.

They had provided themselves with a bag full of bread, a pail of water, several large chisels, a mallet, two formidable batons and a quantity of clothing. They had removed two slates from the roof and had a good view along the south wall and the space of the yard between that and the adjoining shop.

We'll murmur, "—the heat!"

The anniversary services of the Murray street Baptist church were held yesterday. Rev. Prof. Goodspeed, D.D., of the Toronto Baptist University preached eloquent sermons.

The new whips in the Ontario Legislature are: Liberal, Wood, (South Brant), and Dana (Brockville); Conservative, Willoughby (East Northumberland,) and St. John (West York); Patron, Curry (West Simcoe).

The Evening Review issued on Saturday in a new and much improved form, having changed from a four to an eight-page paper. In appearance it is typographically perfect, while its reading and advertising matter is neatly and very conveniently arranged. The change is a decided improvement and one that will be appreciated by its large circle of readers.

THE NEW OFFICERS

Of the County S. S. Association Elected at Havelock.

At the County Sunday School Convention, held in Havelock last week, the following officers were elected:

President—W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood.

First Vice-President—Rev. L. Williams, Havelock.

Second Vice-President—All co-operating ministers.

Secretary—Dr. Harrison, Keene.

Treasurer—S. R. Armstrong, Peterborough.

Statistical Secretary—Dr. Scott, Peterborough.

Minutes Secretary—Miss Pettigrew, Norwood.

Superintendent Normal Work—Dr. Harrison.

Superintendent Primary Work—Miss L. Kennedy, Hastings.

Executive Committee, as follows:

Peterborough—Sheriff Hall, Mr. J. Jeffries and Miss Code.

Norwood—A. R. Anderson.

Lakefield—W. M. Graham.

Havelock—Wm. Mathieson and Miss Vance.

Hastings—Dr. J. D. Berry and B. F. Doxsee.

Ashburnham—Miss E. Smith.

Otonabee—Geo. Stewart.

Asphodel—W. Thistlewaithe.

Belmont—E. Hawthorne and J. L. Aunger.

South Smith—J. Soucie.

North Smith—Mrs. Manning.

Harvey—David Weir.

The presidents of all township associations are also placed on the committee.

Business Committee—Messrs. E. R. Armstrong, A. Watts, W. Matheson, Rev. C. H. Coon, Rev. Dr. Thompson, Miss Cameron and Miss Pettigrew.

It was decided that the next meeting of the association be held in Hastings.

THE CHEESE BOARD.

Annual Meeting and Election of Officers on Saturday.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held on Saturday afternoon and it was largely attended. President J. M. Drummond presided.

A number of very important changes were made in the constitution, chief of which was the abolition of the allowance to makers of the half pound up beam weight at place of shipment. The following officers were elected:

President—J. M. Drummond.

Vice-President—George Stewart.

Second Vice-President—G. J. Garvin.

Secretary—James Middleton.

Treasurer—Samuel Edwards.

Mr. Samuel Rogers presented the financial statement, which was a very satisfactory one.

A resolution of condolence to the widow of the late J. T. Warrington was passed.

The Board drafted a memorial to the Government, asking that legislation providing for the branding of cheese with the date and place of manufacture be granted.

A CANDIDATE

Will be Put Forward by the McCarthyites of the County.

It is learned from a very reliable source that the McCarthy League of West Peterborough will hold a convention at an early date and nominate a candidate to contest the riding in the coming elections.

Two well known citizens are mentioned in connection with the nominations. Both are popular and influential men, and should either be selected a strong fight would ensue, and a creditable vote would be polled.

The date of the convention has not yet been fixed, but it will be within the next two weeks. Quite a stir has been created in political circles over the matter.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. W. S. Bain, of Winnipeg, is in town.

Rev. John McEwen, Toronto, is stopping at the Snowden House.

Mr. Alex Calder, of Toronto, is visiting friends in town.

Rev. G. A. Rix, of Hamilton, is registered at the Snowden.

Mr. H. Mulligan, of Millbrook, was in town on Saturday.

Mr. J. E. Spellman, of Hastings, made Peterborough a flying visit on Saturday.

A Runaway.

Dr. Thos. Johnston, veterinary, was driving down George street last night, when his horse stumbled in a pitch hole opposite Howden's butcher shop. The horse immediately took fright and ran away. Dr. Johnston was thrown out, but not hurt. The animal ran to its stable, breaking the whiffletree of the cutter and numerous straps enroute.

Fire at Bobcaygeon.

Wednesday morning smoke was observed issuing from the store of Mrs. Ross, of Bobcaygeon, and the alarm was sounded. Some shelving near the stove had caught fire, and for the quantity of fire kicked up a tremendous amount of smoke. A few persons carried out the burning material, chiefly corsets, and a pail or two of water, fortunately squelched out what might have been a serious conflagration. The damage to the building is covered by insurance, but there was no insurance on the stock.

FROM PREMIER BOWELL.

A Letter Denying Certain Charges Made by W. H. G. Armstrong.

Premier Bowell has sent the following letter to Mr. C. W. Sawers, which explains itself:

PRIVY COUNCIL OFFICE, OTTAWA,
Feb. 28th, 1895.

MY DEAR MR. SAWERS,—There is an old adage which declares that "A lie will travel thousands of miles before the truth can get on its boots." I was never more convinced of its correctness than after reading a letter published in THE MORNING TIMES, over the signature of "W. H. G. Armstrong," dated Feb. 16, 1895, which some friend had sent me.

Mr. Armstrong, after giving his reasons for moving the appointment of a committee at a meeting of the County Orange Lodge of Peterborough, to draft a resolution of congratulation to myself, and the Orangemen of Canada, upon an Orangeman being called to the Premiership of the Dominion and on recognition of his sovereign's favor on the ground of services rendered, adds:

"That though I did that, I most certainly decline to support politically a Government which has squandered the people's money by paying for requiem masses, and endeavoring to force Separate Schools on the Protestant population of Manitoba and the Northwest, and an Orange Premier who voted against the Orange Incorporation Bill in the House of Commons, when introduced by the late Brother John White, against every Protestant measure brought forward by D'Alton McCarthy, and voted for the incorporation and endowment of the Jesuits and Home Rule for Ireland."

If this Mr. Armstrong is not a lineal descendant of that typical Hibernian immortalized in song, who "meets a friend and for love knocks him down," he ought to be.

It is a marvel how a man, unless he is demented, could possibly pen such a paragraph without the slightest basis of truth. Let me analyze this paragraph and see what it contains:

1. That "the Government paid money for requiem masses." This is not true, and has been denied publicly over my own signature.

2. That "the Government endeavored to force Separate schools on the Protestant population of Manitoba and Northwest." The best evidence of the incorrectness of this charge is that the Government refused to disallow the Manitoba Act abolishing Separate schools, but left the question of its constitutionality to be decided by the courts.

3. That "the Orange Premier voted against the Orange Incorporation Bill in the House of Commons introduced by the late Brother White." This is utterly false; the "Orange Premier" never gave such a vote.

4. That I "voted against every Protestant measure brought forward by Mr. D'Alton McCarty." No such votes can be found recorded upon the journals of the House of Commons or anywhere else.

5. That "I voted for the incorporation and endowment of the Jesuits." No such proposition was made in the Commons, and, therefore, I could not have voted for it.

6. That I "voted for Home Rule for Ireland." I voted for no motion having reference to Home Rule that was not supported by Mr. Armstrong's recent Patron Saint, D'Alton McCarthy.

I cannot help thinking that every man, whose moral perceptions are not blinded and whose mind is not seared by party prejudices or the result of evil associations, will ask himself how it is possible that a man believing, as I suppose Mr. Armstrong does, the charges contained in his indictment could have been a party to the complimentary resolution to which his name is affixed, and which contains the following laudatory paragraph:

"Be assured that your brethren have every confidence that you will in the future, as in the past, maintain not only the true and noble principles of their Order, but uphold the honor and dignity of your exalted position in the Councils of Canada and of the Empire; and, in accordance with the aims and principles of the Orange Association, do justice to all classes and creeds in our fair Dominion."

How do these sentiments, to which I find Mr. Armstrong's name attached, accord with the charges that I tried to force Separate schools upon Manitoba and the Northwest, which, by the by, Mr. McCarthy declared in the House of Commons he preferred to what he called "Godless schools;" that I squandered the people's money by paying for requiem masses; that I voted against an Orange Incorporation Bill; that I voted to incorporate and endow the Jesuits, and that I voted against every Protestant measure brought forward by Mr. D'Alton McCarthy! I shall not attempt to reconcile this gentleman's position further than to add that were I guilty of the political sins of which he accuses me, it certainly would be no compliment to the "brethren" to have such a member of their flock promoted to the Premiership, and receive Imperial honors from his Sovereign.

I shall, notwithstanding this condemnation of Mr. Armstrong, endeavor "in the future, as in the past," as expressed in the resolution of congratulation, which Mr. Armstrong assisted in framing, act in accordance "with the aims and principles of the Orange Association, do justice to all classes and creeds in our fair Dominion."

Yours truly,
MACKENZIE BOWELL.

C. W. Sawers, Esq., Peterborough.

SEALED TENDERS, ADDRESSED TO THE undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Severn River Work," will be received at this office until FRIDAY, THE 15TH DAY OF MARCH NEXT, inclusively, for work to be done in widening the outlet of Lake Couchiching, Ontario, according to a plan and specification to be seen at the post-office, Washago, and at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on form supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

An accepted bank cheque, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to five per cent. of amount of tender, must accompany each tender. This cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract, or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order.
E. F. E. ROY,
Secretary.

Department of Public works, Ottawa, 19th February, 1895.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

THE BIG TORONTO FIRE.

UNDERWRITERS MAY CANCEL ALL POLICIES FORTHWITH.

Better Fire Protection Would Have Averted Half the Loss—The Theory of Incendiarism Growing Stronger.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—It is certain that unless fire engines are procured, and at once, Torontonians may not be able to obtain a red cent if the whole town is burned down.

In other words the insurance men are talking of cancelling every policy in the city if engines are not procured at once and the feeling among them is that such a course would be perfectly justifiable.

The matter came up at the special meeting this morning of the representatives of those companies interested in the losses of Sunday morning's fire. Some thirty gentlemen were present, some coming from Montreal, Vice President Wright was in the chair. A committee was appointed to enquire into the actual losses and to report at an adjourned meeting to be held in the afternoon.

TALK OF CANCELLING POLICIES.

Feeling ran very high and the consensus of opinion was that very strong steps should be taken at once with the object of forcing the city to obtain better appliances.

Two representatives spokely openly in favor of cancelling all policies and although this was not openly endorse it was evident that the members considered their position one that requires stern action.

The Board of Fire Underwriters are holding another session this afternoon.

THE PRICE OF INEFFICIENCY.

What Chief Graham had to say of the need of improved fire appliances is especially important.

"The pressure was good enough for ordinary purposes," he said in reply to a question; "but our equipment was insufficient. We could not reach within forty feet of the top of the tower on Knox church neither could we play with effect on the top story of the Simpson block. If we had been supplied with a fire tower we could, I believe, have drowned the flames out in the building where they first started and prevented any injury to the others whatever."

THE IMMEDIATE PURCHASE.

The Fire and Light Committee has been called for 1 o'clock this afternoon to consider the immediate purchase of proper fire appliances.

The Executive Committee will meet at 7.30 and the Council at 8.

It is the intention to dispose of the matter at this sitting of the Council.

HEARD GLASS BREAK.

The belief that an incendiary's torch originated the fire is somewhat confirmed by the story of Louis Rosenthal, of the firm of A. H. Dewdney & Co., Colborne street.

"I spent Saturday evening with some friends down town," he said to a newspaper man. "I started for my home, 206 Queen street west, before midnight. At the corner of Queen and Yonge streets I looked at my watch and it was then three minutes to 12. I remembered that I had not yet been shaved, and started to hurry westward, on the south side of Queen, in order to reach Green's barber shop before 12 o'clock.

"When opposite Knox church I heard a crash of broken glass. I stopped on the sidewalk for fully a minute, looking into the grounds between the church and Simpson's, for I thought something was wrong. However, there was no further sound.

"It was intensely dark and I could discern no object nor could I see a policeman. I thought of going into the church grounds to investigate but concluded I had better not as I might get my head broken. Besides, I wanted to reach the barber shop before 12, else I could not get shaved for Sunday. I was shaved and had just got home when the fire bells rang. That was about 35 minutes after I had heard the crash of glass.

"Had the breaking of glass been caused by fire from within at the time I passed I would have noticed the fire or smoke. The fire had certainly not commenced at the time I passed. An incendiary had evidently smashed a window."

TO HOLD AN INQUEST.

There will be an inquest to find out if possible the cause of the big fire.

Crown Attorney Dewart is closeted with the Mayor on the subject.

The Crown Attorney said that he considered the investigation to be in the interests of the city.

"PRONOUNCED BRUNETTE."

He Had Pledged His Word, so Hannah's Complexion Was Nothing to Him.

Special to the Times.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., March 4.—Theodore Welin, second gunner on the cruiser Columbia, advertised in a matrimonial paper. Miss Hannah Lott, of this city, answered him. Miss Lott described herself as a "pronounced brunette" and sent her photograph. Welin proposed and was accepted.

He came here yesterday and went to his sweetheart's house. She let him in. For a moment Welin was almost stunned. Miss Lott, the "pronounced brunett," is a mulatto with a coffee-and-milk complexion.

But Welin found her pretty and vivacious. So they were married today at the Trinity Catholic Church and went to New York for their honeymoon.

THE HYAMS' MURDER CASE.

A Week's Adjournment to Allow Medical Witnesses to go to St. Thomas.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—The preliminary hearing of the Hyams murder case has been adjourned for a week at the request of the Crown, as a number of expert medical witnesses are required to give evidence in the Hendershott murder trial, which opens at St. Thomas today.

It is probable that the case will not be resumed before a week from next Thursday, when it is expected Attorney Wellman who returned to New York on Saturday, will be able to be present. There are still about a dozen Crown witnesses to be heard and the Magistrate will scarcely be able to sum up the evidence before next Saturday week.

Jewish Colony for Buenos Ayres.

NEW YORK, March 4.—The Herald's Buenos Ayres special says:—The attempt of an emissary of Admiral Da Gama to introduce the Brazilian squadron at Matta Grosso to revolt has failed. Baron Hirsch has just purchased a very large tract of land in the Province of Buenos Ayres upon which he intends to establish a new Hebrew colony.

"MAIL-EMPIRE'S" RIVAL.

The Conservatives will have a Party Organ Very Soon.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—When, three weeks ago the Empire newspaper bade farewell to its subscribers and readers, the Mail and the junior Conservative organ were overjoyed. They saw in the reduction of the number of newspapers a chance of bettering their condition. No it is certain that there is going to be another sensation in newspaper circles. There are many members of the Conservative party in Toronto who believe that the Mail's faithlessness to the party in years gone by can not be atoned for by any action it may take.

These gentlemen have held a meeting, and it is settled that letters of incorporation will be asked for in a few days. The application will be lodged at Ottawa. A gentleman who is concerned in the matter went so far today as to say that the name of the new paper would be the Standard and the managing editor Mr. David Creighton.

STORM IN SICILY.

Vessels Wrecked, Houses Shattered and General Havoc.

Special to The Times.

LONDON, March 4.—The Central News correspondent in Palmero reports a violent storm along the Sicilian coast and in the western part of the island. Several vessels have been wrecked and many buildings have collapsed. The municipal offices at Marsala were laid in ruins. Five persons in Marsala died of injuries received from falling walls and trees.

ROSEBERY MAY RESIGN.

SERIOUS POLITICAL COMPLICATIONS AT WESTMINSTER.

The Premier Is a Sick Man—His Health Shattered by Insomnia and His Nerves Irritated by Criticism of His Adherents.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Mr. Ballard Smith cables from London to the World: The speedy retirement of Mr. Gladstone from the post of Prime Minister, which was predicted about 14 months ago, as well as the certain succession of Lord Rosebery, especially the possibility of the latter event, was scouted at that time by every prominent English newspaper of both parties and by all the English correspondents of New York newspapers. Now we can assert the very strong probability of the speedy resignation of Lord Rosebery for personal reasons, even while the present majority in the House of Commons remains assured to him. He is still suffering from a severe attack of influenza, but that would give little concern to his friends and physicians if it were not complicated by insomnia, which has been almost chronic for a year or more. The sleeplessness began after an attack of scarlatin about seven years ago but it has increased lately to such an extent that for several months he has found it impossible to sleep in London, going nearly every night to one of his two country seats near London, to Brighton or to the residence of one of his Rothschild connections.

The depression which is the invariable consequence of influenza has so affected him, I have authority for saying that only the influence of Lord Tweedmouth, a man of strong will, robust courage and highly trained political knowledge, has prevented the Prime Minister's resignation within the past two days. Lord Tweedmouth and other intimate friends fear that no influence can prevent it within the next 48 hours unless Lord Rosebery's present temper changes.

LABBY'S ATTACKS.

The renewed bitter attacks of Mr. Labouchere and Sir Charles Dilke in the House of Commons the other day, both being members of his own party, have, in his present condition, affected the Prime Minister greatly. On the other hand, it is well known that Lord Rosebery is intensely ambitious and has worked unceasingly for the Premiership ever since his entry into public life, and therefore would not throw it away lightly. Nevertheless, his highly excited and nervous physical condition makes him obstinate in his present purpose.

OPIUM FADDISTS.

LONDON, March 4.—The opium faddists have just succeeded in committing Great Britain to a very heavy item of expenditure. Though the opium commission has not yet reported it is known that the results of their labors will tell very heavily against the views of the anti-opium party. In order to appease that party the government permitted the commission to be established and it undertook a very expensive tour round India. The government had abundant evidence that there was no justification for the outcry against opium, but they had not the courage to refuse the demands of the opium faddists, all of whom sit on the ministerial side of the House. The government shirked their responsibility by appointing a commission, and they have now recognized the injustice of asking India to bear the cost by announcing that the entire charge will be met by the English Exchequer.

Seventy Deaths from the Wreck.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 4.—Six more passengers injured in the wreck in the railway disaster on Friday have died, making the total number of deaths so far 70. At least five more are expected to die. The statement that 104 passengers were killed in the accident is an error, arising from the mistake of the Universal in counting some of the injured among the dead. The damage to the railway property is $20,000. All of the dead and injured belong to the poorer classes. The engineer in charge of the wrecked train has not been found, but the chief conductor has turned up all right. The accident was caused by the trucks of the tender slipping out of place.

Cause of the Brooklyn Strike.

BROOKLYN, March 4.—The Kings County Grand Jury handed up a presentment today, which finds the cause of the recent trolley strike to have been primarily a dispute about violation of the ten-hour law. It recommends that the Attorney prosecute the President of the street railways for it.

Interceding for Lil.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—Correspondence from Honolulu states that Mrs. Dole is interceding strongly for the ex queen and that President Dole is reported to be wavering between granting her a full pardon or letting the sentence stand.

Louise Michel, the female anarchist, ill at Paris, is now out of danger.

ANOTHER STRANGE CASE.

A WOMAN MYSTERIOUSLY BURNED TO DEATH.

Heavy Insurance on Her Life—The Husband's Doubtful Story—He States that the Furnace Was too Near the Woodwork.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—Fire broke out in the house of Mr. A. Dick, upholsterer and manufacturer. 226 St. Helens avenue, shortly after one o'clock yesterday morning. The fire spread rapidly and in a short time the building was enveloped in flames

The occupants of the house at the time were Mr. Dick, his wife and four children. Mrs. Dick was burned to death.

The Dick premises, which rent at $3 per month, were located in a lonely spot at St. Helens avenue and Dora street. When the firemen arrived, Dick and his children were outside the house. According to his story the fire originated in the basement and was caused by the furnace which was set too near the woodwork and evidently took fire on account of being overheated. "We were awakened shortly after 1 o'clock," said Dick, "by the cries of the baby. The house was filled with smoke and I awoke my wife and the three children in the next room and made for the rear of the house, where there appeared to be the least fire. I went first with the children, my wife following me, carrying the lamp. She turned down the stairs and I threw a mattress out of the window and dropped the children to the ground, a distance of about 15 feet, and none of them were hurt. I became alarmed when my wife did not appear below, and not receiving any reply to my repeated calls, crawled on my hands and knees to the stairway, down which she had gone, but could not get down, and escaped from the building by jumping."

After the fire had been subdued the firemen discovered the body of Mrs. Dick lying in the storeroom on the ground floor.

There was not much furniture in the house, owing to the family having rented premises at 1164 College street, and most of their effects were taken there on Friday, and the family intended taking possession on Saturday. The remains of the dead woman were removed to the Morgue, where an inquest will be held by Coroner Johnson on Monday afternoon.

When the inquest opens some starting developments may transpire. Mrs. Dick's life was insured in the Covenant Mutual Insurance Company for $5,000, the policy having been taken out within a year.

Dick claims that the furnace was too near the woodwork, and that he had repeatedly asked the landlord to remove it, but he declined to do so.

About a year ago Dick and his wife applied to the Covenant Mutual Insurance Company, of Galesburg, Ill., for policies of $5,000 each on their lives. Both man and wife seemed entirely in accord, and the policies were made in trust for the benefit of the children in each case. After inquiry the agents of the company reported the risks good, Dr. Little examined the applicants on Jan. 19, 1894, and the policies were granted. At the same time the first six months' premiums were paid upon both policies, and in due course the second premium, which would fall due about the middle of 1894, so that the third instalment will be about due at the present time.

On Jan. 22, 1895, Dick took out an additional policy for $1,000 on his own life and paid six months' premium.

When Dick and his wife applied to the company Dick seemed to think some explanation necessary for seeking the policies canvassed, and said that he had read some literature of the company, and was pleased with it. He also said that application had been made to another company, which was considering the matter.

QUARRELED AND TOOK POISON.

Annie Howard Takes Carbolic Acid Because of a Tiff with Her Lover.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—Miss Annie Howard, 18 years of age, Logan avenue, attempted to commit suicide last evening in a small store at 801 Queen street west, occupied by Thomas Hudson, weaver. Miss Howard had been spending the evening at Hudson's house, in company with her lover, Robert Huptina, 41 Claremont street, and a young girl friend. It is supposed a jealous quarrel arose between Miss Howard, her lover and the second girl, and finally ended by the former snatching up a small bottle of a carbolic acid which standing on a table near at hand. Her companions quickly sprang up to intercept the deadly draught, one of them striking the bottle as its contents were being emptied into the girl's mouth. The greater portion of the acid had not passed her lips, and was thrown over her face and arms, seriously injuring the sight of her right eye

The young man rushed from the house, and meeting Sergeant Mulhall and P. C. Bastard he informed them that a young girl had accidentally poisoned herself. He then summoned Drs. T. S. Webster and H. Hamilton who administered antidotes successfully. Efforts to induce her to induce her to consent to being taken to the hospital, where the injured eye might be attended to, proved futile, and Miss Howard was driven away in a closed cab by her lover. His version of the occurrence was that the girl was playing with the bottle containing the poison and accidentally it spilled over her face and arms.

BARLOW GETS THE "CAT."

A Toronto Convict Flogged at the Central Prison this Morning.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—Up at the Central Prison this morning Henry W. Barlow, 27 years of age, was flogged. Barlow was convicted in October last at the General Sessions of committing an indecent assault on a 12 year-old girl named Martha Ellison. Judge McDougall sentenced him to six months' imprisonment and 12 lashes within one month of the expiration of his sentence. The flagellation was administered this morning, the "cat" being wielded by a muscular guard. Barlow winced under the first blow, and thereafter kept up a dismal wailing, twice roaring outright for mercy. He was pretty badly punished.

Assassin Foiled.

BERLIN, March 4.—The Neueste Nachrichten says that an Austrian Anarchist, went to Cape Martin recently to assassinate Emperor Franz Josef, but was arrested soon after his arrival by the French police acting upon information received from Vienna.

A despatch to the London Globe says a battle was fought near Ta Ping Shan on February 24, in which the Chinese suffered defeat.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 5, 1895.

Good morning!

Some people use religion as they do their silver spoons; only when they have company.

A remarkable and totally unprecedented accident is reported from Paris. A French editor has been killed in a duel.

The principal object of the County Constables' Association seems to be the creation of several more fat offices.

In the United States there is an iron blast furnace for every 300,000 of the population. In Ontario there are 2,000,000 people and no blast furnace.

Yesterday the demand for THE TIMES was so great that we were obliged to go to press with a second edition of the paper. This is not by any means an uncommon occurrence with this journal.

The Harvard faculty has voted to abolish football. It is better to abolish it if it cannot be reformed, but the friends of the game still believe that the objectionable features can easily be eliminated.

A bill is before the provincial legislature which provides for the abolition of the right of municipalities to charge market fees. To allow such a bill to become law would be an outrage on the rights of the municipalities.

The constantly increasing demand for THE MORNING TIMES is the best possible proof that the course of the paper on public questions is the correct one. It is pleasing to be able to state that our circulation was never greater than it is today, and whe a newspaper is backed by the people, it becomes a power for good in the community.

The Conservative convention for East Peterborough takes place to-day in the village of Norwood, Hon. J. C. Patterson Minister of the Militia, is expected, and every effort will be made to induce Mr. John Burnham to again stand. Mr. B. has said no, and when he says a thing he generally means it. A report of the proceedings will appear to-morrow.

Toronto is having hard luck just now. The fire which consumed the splendid Simpson block and several other valuable places of business, is the third great conflagration which has fallen on the Queen city within a very brief period. There is an old saying that "it is an ill wind that blows nobody good," and the wind that fanned the small blaze into a fierce volcano on Sunday morning will be the means of creating a building boom in the early spring and summer, much to the advantage of the labouring man.

That the pay of women is less than that of men who do exactly the same work may be due partly to the greater number of woman applicants and partly to the advantage in having persons who are not qualified by physical weakness from occasional rough and muscular work. Of course the chief reason is that there is never a lack of women who are willing to work for less than men will demand.

The captain of one of the American warships in the East says, after visiting a Japanese war hospital near Nagasaki; "The hospital was the admiration of the French and English surgeons, as well as our own. The medical staff was all Japanese, who had graduated in medicine and surgery either in America or England then taken a post-graduate surgical course in clinics at the Paris and Berlin hospitals. They had the best modern instruments an systems, the newest antiseptics everything a hospital on modern lines should have. And all this is the work of a generation.

WHY FARMING DON'T PAY.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman gives his version of why farming does not pay. He says in a ride of two and a-half miles he saw a mowing machine, a horse rake, a hay tedder standing outdoors protected by the "canopy of heaven." They had thus stood exposed to the gentle dews, the balmy breezes, the soft showers and the joyous sunshine since used in July—and this was January. The owner has plenty of room in which to store them, but it was less work to leave them where last used than to put them under cover, and no doubt next summer he will spend no end of time—right in the busy season—running to the blacksmith for repairs

If you should ask him if farming paid he would answer:—"Farming pay? No! Just manage to scrape along, get enough to eat and a few clothes to wear. Have been on this farm for 25 years, and ain't worth a red cent more than I was then. No, sir, farmin' don't yay." Reader, can you guess the reason why?

A half mile further on this correspondent saw a barn with cracks half a foot wide, shingles of the roof in patches a foot square, a lot of old plows, harrows and wagons stored out of doors, and back of the barn twenty-five or thirty hens going to roost in an apple tree—this being the only hen house on the farm. Not an egg do they get from November until March, and no wonder; for between frozen combs and toes it is strange that they live, much less lay. Ask the owner if farming pays; he will answer:—"A man had better be in the pooor-house! He would have better livin'. Look at them hens eatin' their pesky heads off, but the old woman will keep 'em. Don't get an egg all winter; scratch up the garden every summer, faster than I can plant it." The garden was protected by single strand of barb wire. "No farmin' don't pay."

Just beyond the correspondent saw a man followed by two dogs, one a bird dog and the other a huge mastiff He soon came to a field where some 12 or 15 fine-looking cows were gathered near the bars contentedly chewing their cuds and waiting to be driven home. The man let down the bars and turned to the mastiff said: "Sick 'em." With a bound he was among them. With a voice like a fog horn, hair bristling and fangs bared, he dashed at the frightened herd, who with tails in air rushed for the opening, crowded through, three or four at a time, one or two falling in a heap, and away they went up the road like the wind, with the "fog horn" voice ringing out until a bend in the road hid them from view.

If you ask him if farming pays, ten to one he will say:—"No; we keep a dozen or fifteen cows, have to buy so much grain that it takes all the profit, and then they don't pan out as they ought to. Feeding them as we do, don't know what is the matter with them. Guess I will sell every mother's daughter of them. They don't pay. No, farming does not pay nowadays." Reader, it is strange, isn't it?

A half mile further on the writer further testifies that he saw a fine, large farmhouse, nicely painted and blinded; large barns and plenty of out-buildings, all painted and in the best of repair. All the tools and farm machinery under cover, the surrounding fields smooth and under a high state of cultivation. A large windmill supplied plenty of water to house and barns. A neat poultry-house and pig-pen, and last but not least, a wood-house near the kitchen door filled with wood, dry and neatly piled. The owner is on the best of terms with his stock, and gives each a kind word and a gentle pat when he comes near them. Ask him if farming pays; he will reply in a modest way:—"I have been able to lay up a little for a rainy day, besides putting the farm and buildings in fair shape—building a new house, &c. Yes, I think I can say that farming pays me."

BEFORE THE DAYBREAK.

Before the daybreak shines a star
That in the day's full glory fades;
Too fiercely bright is the great light
That her pale-gleaming lamp upbraids.

Before the daybreak sings a bird
That stills her song at morning light,
Too loud for her is the days stir,
The woodland's thousand tongued delight.

Ah! great the honor is to shine
A light wherein no traveller errs;
And rich the prize, to rank divine
Among the world's loud choristers.

But I would be that paler star,
And I would be that lonelier bird,
To shine with hope while hope's afar,
And sing of love when love's unheard.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING
CAN YOU GET IT?

Many who should know better, are well pleased to get a good sized glass jar or tin of bulky alum, ammonia or other powerful but injurious mixture, for use as Baking Powder, at much less, perhaps even half the price, of the really good article, overlooking the fact that the amount thus APPARENTLY saved is of small moment in comparison with the real but not always immediately observed inevitable injury following the use of these articles. If in addition to the seemingly low prices, there is attached some showy gift or prize to give the impression of extra value, the inferior or hurtful nature of the powder is lost sight of in the expectation (a vain one) of getting "something for nothing."

"LADIES' HOME" and "HAPPY THOUGHT" on the other hand, can always be depended on as articles of first class quality, and such as can be AND ARE guaranteed not only free from everything in the slightest degree injurious, but invariably sure, satisfactory and economical.

HARRY GREEN'S WAY

HE PLAYED HIS FAVORITE GAME ON MR. SMITH OF CHICAGO.

Four Aces Will Always Beat Four Kings, but In This Case There Was Another Hand, Held by an "Outsider," That Was In at the Showdown.

Do you know how to play poker? If you do and chance to meet an old man who looks like a stockman from Montana, with money to burn, just looking for a good time, don't. If you do, you will be sorry.

A well known business man, who at one time kept a furniture store on State street and has retired from business, paid $1,400 for his experience with the Montana stockman.

As every one knows the furniture man, he may as well be called Smith. Mr. Smith, since he is not engaged actively in business, has been spending a share of his time in a down town bucket shop every day. One morning while Mr. Smith was watching the market and listening to the voice of the caller a stranger who "happened" to sit next him engaged him in conversation.

"Wheat is dull today, isn't it?" said the stranger.

"Yes," drawled Mr. Smith.

The ice had been broken, and the stranger, whose appearance indicated that he was a westerner, became communicative. He told Mr. Smith he had just come from Montana and was taking a little rest. He declared he had enough money to have some fun and pulled a big roll of fifties and hundreds out of his pocket to prove it.

"By gosh, I will have a good time, and if I don't it won't be no fault o' mine," said the Montana man as he got up to take a walk about the room.

Mr. Smith paid little attention to the incident until a man who had just entered and was leaning against the wall, and who had seen the stockman display his money, stepped up to him. He asked Mr. Smith if he knew the "old fellow." Mr. Smith said he did not, but the man had told him he was from Montana and had a good deal of money.

"Yes, I saw it," said stranger No. 2. "And do you know I think I could get it if we could get him into a poker game?"

After considerable persuasion Mr. Smith condescended to ask the stockman if he would play a little poker.

"Well, I don't mind," said the stockman, and arrangements were made to play in a down town hotel in the evening.

In the meantime the stranger had a quiet talk with Mr. Smith. He told him he was a professional gambler and knew how to "fix" the cards. They were to get the old man's money and divide the spoils. The plan was as follows: A deck was to be fixed up in which were two hands. Mr. Smith was to get four aces and the stockman four kings. The hands were to be sprung in the stockman's own deal. Stranger No. 2 fixed the cards and said: "Now, you keep the cards on your lap, and when it is the granger's deal I will attract his attention when he gives the cards to you to cut, and at that moment you substitute this deck for the one he hands you. But we must have another man. We can't play three handed."

Mr. Smith knew a great many men, he said, but they were all business men, and all of them were too busy to play. At the stranger's suggestion they started out together to look for the fourth man. They dropped into the Saratoga hotel, and stranger No. 2 saw a man who appeared much bored sitting near the window.

"Perhaps he will play. Shall I ask him?"

"Go ahead," said Mr. Smith.

Stranger No. 3 said he played poker, but not for money or with strangers.

No. 3 produced the card of an Iowa firm. "That's my card," said he.

"You're all right, then," said the stranger.

Mr. Smith then said, "I'm Mr. Smith, and every one around here knows me."

The stranger was still a little shy, but finally yielded to Mr. Smith's persuasions and agreed to sit in the game. The stockman was found in the barroom of the hotel. The quartet went around to a Monroe street hotel, and the game began.

The game dragged along for awhile without incident. After an hour or so it came the stockman's deal. He shuffled the cards clumsily and handed them to Mr. Smith to cut. At that moment the stockman was seized with a fit of "sneezing," and stranger No. 2 gave Mr. Smith a signal to run in the "cold deck." He did it successfully. In the deal Mr. Smith got four aces, according to programme. He made a good bet, and the stockman, as he expected, raised him handsomely. But to Mr. Smith's surprise and gratification the Saratoga hotel stranger also staid. No. 2 dropped out, of course.

He bet with confidence, and so did the stockman, and, to Mr. Smith's continued delight, the stranger kept coming in. He didn't raise any bets, but just staid.

The betting was lively and lasted until Mr. Smith came to the end of his pile and had $1,400 on the table. He was kicking because he didn't have more, but had to call for a show.

"Well, I am sorry for you, my friend," said the stockman, "but I have four big kings," and he started to rake in the pot.

"You needn't feel sorry, old man," exclaimed Mr. Smith triumphantly. "I have four aces. The money is mine. Did you think I was bluffing?" and he started to grab the money and checks.

"Hold on, hold on!" spoke up No. 3. "Ain't I in this? I've got a straight flush."

It was like a voice from the tombs to Mr. Smith, and the game broke up.

An adjournment was taken to the bar, but the straight flush man and the stockman got away as quickly as possible, leaving Mr. Smith and his friend. His friend proceeded to give Mr. Smith a terrible roasting.

"Confound you," said he, "I thought you said you knew how to play poker. You've made a nice mess of it. Here we are broke, and the makeshift that we picked up gets all the money. We might just as well have had all that stockman's money and the other fellow's too!"

Mr. Smith's friend talked in this strain until Mr. Smith was convinced that he was a double distilled idiot and knew nothing about the noble American game. Then Mr. Smith's friend bade him a sorrowful and indignant good night and left, leaving him to wonder how the outsider got the straight flush.

If Mr. Smith had only known that the stockman was Harry Green, one of the smoothest confidence men and gamblers in the world, all would have been different. He has played that same kind of a game for 20 years and in that time has caught many a fish. Stranger No. 2 was his Baltimore partner, Fred Porter. He and Harry Green made barrels of money years ago on the big Atlantic liners, and stranger No. 3 was a well known Chicago gambler who came in for a share of the "divvy."—Chicago Tribune.

AN M. P.'S WIFE

Extracts from Her Letter.

Men and Women May Profit by Her Experience.

She Strongly Urges the Use of Paine's Celery Compound.

"In April of 1893 my whole system was run-down, I was weak, nervous, sleepless, and despondent, and at times suffered agonies from headaches. As my doctor was doing little for my relief, I was urged by a friend to try your Paine's Celery Compound. Your wonderful medicine in less than five weeks made me a new woman. I am stronger, sleep better and enjoy life better than ever before. Your medicine is worthy of all the praise it receives, and I strongly advise all sufferers to use it."

No medicine to day is so generally used in Spring as Paine's Celery Compound. It is popular because it always cures. Do not allow dealers to induce you to buy some other medicine that pays them a larger profit. See that you are given Paine's Celery Compound.

HYAMS' MURDER TRIAL.

THE PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION NEARLY OVER.

There is no Evidence Against Dallas Hyams and He Will Likely be Acquitted—A Bogus Telegram Put in as Evidence.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 2.—There were a few unimportant cases disposed of before Magistrate Denison at the Police Court this morning, and then the Hyams twins were again brought into the prisoner's dock.

James Rankin, who was foreman at the Colborne street warehouse before the Hyams occupied it, said that it would be impossible for the weight to come off the hook.

GOING TO BUY A FARM.

Uriah J. Jones, of Pickering, uncle of the victim, testified that Wells was intending to buy a farm from him, and was to pay $1,000 down on the $2,400 farm on January 6th, 1893.

A telegram which read: "Cannot come until tomorrow morning; will wire when coming," signed "Willie," was shown to witness, who swore that this was a copy of a telegram received by him on January 10th. At that time witness was expecting Wells down to make the first deposit of $1,000 on the farm.

Crown Attorney Curry wanted to put in an agreement between Wells and Jones which would show that it was binding upon Wells to get this $1,000 from Hyams.

A STARTLING STATEMENT.

"I warn my learned friend," said Mr. Johnston, "that if this agreement is allowed to go in. I will expose a swindle right here which is that Jones was attempting to sell this farm which was worth only $500 to his nephew Wells for $2,450."

The agreement did not go in and Jones said, "I never owned a $500 farm; that farm cost me $3,000."

T. W. Horn, one of the counsel for the defence was called as a witness but objections were raised and decision was reserved till Monday.

BLOOD ON BOXES ON THE SECOND FLOOR.

A wholesale jobber named Wm. H. Riches swore that on January 19, 20 and 21, of 1893, he removed a quantity of groceries from the Hyams' warehouse. On the second floor he found a sugar barrel and a number of pearline boxes stained with blood. The stain on the barrel was the size of his two hands.

BARRISTER SMOKE IN THE BOX.

Barrister S. C. Smoke was then sworn. He was Martha Wells' solicitor in the spring of 1893.

Mr. Johnston objected to this evidence and Mr. Smoke explained that he had not been released as solicitor for Mrs. Harry P. Hyams. He further understood that Mrs. Hyams did not desire him to make any disclosures.

The evidence was allowed to go in.

In the course of his practice he had a transaction with H. P. Hyams. He had a conversation with the prisoner in the presence of Mr. Horn but witness could tell no more than the substance of it. An admission was certainly made by either H. P. Hyams or Mr. Horn on that occasion that a certain amount of money was received by Harry Hyams from Miss Wells. Witness thought that $9,000 of Miss Wells' money was admitted to be in Harry Hyams' hands at that time, March 30, 1893. Of this amount Miss Wells only got security for about $1,000.

LITTLE EVIDENCE AGAINST DALLAS.

The case in chief for the Crown is almost completed, and so far little or no evidence has been submitted which could in any way inculpate Dallas Hyams in the crime, if such it was. The fact that Dallas was in the warehouse at the time Wells was killed might lead some to suspect that he was associated with his brother in the commission of the deed, if a murder had been perpetrated, but these suspicions are not, so far, borne out by facts. There being a conspicuous absence of motive on the part of Dallas Hyams has been quite evident throughout the investigation.

The other witnesses examined were Charles Hackney, a carpenter; Bookkeeper Dart, of the New York Life, and Albert Fryer, another carpenter. The last witness was cross-examined by Lawyer Murdoch, who took his first active part in the preliminary investigation.

WAS IT BOGUS?

NEW YORK, March 2.—Mrs. Cozaraun, of 100 East 1sth street, was seen this morning and she denied ever having received a telegram from Mrs. Dallas T. Hyams, of Toronto. In fact she states that she does not know Mrs. Hyams or any person by that name.

The telegram produced at the Hyams' murder trial and purporting to have been sent by Mrs. Dallas Hyams to Mrs. Cozaraun must have been a canard.

LONG-SOUGHT SLEEP AT LAST.

Farmer Jones Goes 150 Days and Nights Without Enjoying Needed Rest.

ELWOOD, Ind., March 2.—David Jones, a wealthy farmer residing near here, failed on the night of Sept. 23 last to sleep, and from that time on, night after night, could not get any rest. He lost a few pounds of flesh, but was able to continue work.

Noted medical men vainly tried to afford him relief. Last Friday he began to feel drowsy and that night slept a half an hour. He has since been sleeping a little each night, and it is now thought that he soon will be all right again. He went 150 days and nights without sleep. Three years ago he went 90 days and nights. He has lost only ten pounds during the long, sleepless period now apparently at an end.

A PLUCKY WOMAN.

Drove a Burglar Into a Corner—Fired a Revolver.

SHARON, Pa., March 2.—Mrs. J. H. Bushman, of Greenville, found a burglar in her room last night and braced herself against the door. The burglar tried to escape, but she drove him into a corner with a revolver and blew a whistle which brought Policeman Braden to her assistance.

The burglar, hearing him coming upstairs jumped from the second story window to the ground and escaped. Mrs. Bushman fired several shots at him, but without effect.

Ismail No More.

LONDON, March 2.—A despatch to the Central News from Constantinople says Ismail Pasha, ex-Khedive of Egypt, died this morning.

Lord Rosebery Improving.

LONDON, March 2.—Lord Rosebery is improving, but Hon. A. J. Balfour is progressing slowly.

John Stuart Blackie Dead.

LONDON, March 2.—Prof. John Stuart Blackie, the well known author and Greek and Latin scholar, is dead at the age of 86 years.

Alexis is Dead.

LONDON, March 2.—The Grand Duke Alexis of Russia is dead at San Remo.

White Winged Peace.

LONDON, March 2.—A Central News despatch from Pekin says the prospects that peace with Japan will be speedily concluded are exceedingly good.

William Henry Wellesley, second Earl of Cowley, is dead.

Prince Lobanoff Rostovski, Russian Ambassador to Austria, will be appointed Russian Foreign Minister, to succeed the late M. De Giers.

A Daily Use of Lactated Food Saves Life and Promotes Health and Strength.

Mothers who have weak, sickly, cross and fretful babies, can save themselves nights of weary watching and days of trouble and sorrow, with, perhaps, after-years of sad remembrances, if they only make Lactated Food baby's regular diet. The life of a weak baby cannot be trifled with. It requires a food that will stay on the stomach and that will be easily assimilated and perfectly digested. Lactated Food will produce all these results, and give such constitutional strength and vigor that the little one becomes a joy and pleasure in the home.

PENNED UNDER A WRECK

THE THRILLING FATE OF MANY PILGRIMS IN MEXICO.

Crushed in a Shapeless Mass Women Virtually Torn From the Entangled Debris by the Rescuers—A Father Sees His Wife and Children Killed.

Special to the Times.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 2.—A wrecking train arrived here early this morning from the scene of yesterday's accident on the Inter-Ocean railway. It brought forty persons who had been injured in the crash and Dr. Atfield Bray, Dr. Francis Crossen and two other surgeons who were sent out yesterday afternoon soon after news of the disaster was received here. Sixty five persons were left dead near the spot where the train left the rails, and of those who were brought back ten or twelve cannot possibly recover. The crew of the wrecking train told the first detailed story of the accident. The train consisted of ten coaches. It was chartered by pilgrims from Amecameca, and the engineer was under orders to run carefully. It was filled with pilgrims, many of them women and children. At the city station, shortly before 1 o'clock, the fated train started. It proceeded slowly at first, but after stopping for water the engineer began running at the rate of 30 miles an hour. About 28 miles from the capital and midway between Temamatla and Tenango there is a steep down grade. On one side of the track the blasted rock forms a high wall, on the other is a steep descent. At a point where descent is about 30 feet the track makes a curve. The train swerved round it at half speed, but for a reason not yet known the engine of the pilgrim train failed to take it without slowing down. Either the rails spread or the engine

JUMPED THE TRACK.

The engine and tender broke loose from the coaches and rolled down the embankment. The rear coaches crashed down against the engine and tender and the rest went to pieces at the foot of the embankment near by. Five coaches were smashed so as to be little more than piles of splintered boards and beams and twisted iron. About 20 passengers were able to extricate themselves without severe injury, and they began rescuing those who were pinned under the wreck. Four women were found with their arms crushed and immovable, under beams and twisted axles. They lay near the engine and were screaming for fear of the flames. After all efforts to clear them had proved in vain they were torn loose, one of them losing her arm from the shoulder, another her arm from the elbow and each of the other two having both arms crushed and legs terribly mutilated. Three of the four will die. Three children of one family were found dead together under an upset car truck. Their mother lay near by with her skull crushed and one leg gone. The father escaped with only a broken shoulder although he was on the same seat as the three children who were killed. Fragments of arms and legs were strewn through the wreckage and several of the bodies were so mutilated that no attempt to identify them was made. When the doctors arrived on the wreckage train they found near the wreck. The doctors worked for five hours to get the injured in condition to make the journey back. Six men had lost half of their scalps, four had fractured skulls, six women were so badly injured in the abdomen that it was feared they would die before reaching the city. All the doctors agree that the scenes at the wreck and in the coaches during their journey home were the most horrible in their experience. The train arrived at the curve where the wreck occurred at 4 o'clock and it did not start back until near midnight. All the pilgrims were Mexicans. The engineer and conductor of the train are supposed to have escaped serious injury and to have fled to the woods.

SIXTY DEAD PILGRIMS

A WELL-PLANNED ATTEMPT.

To Escape From the Central Prison—The Nerve of Two Prisoners.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, March 2.—William H. Wilkinson of Belleville, aged 31, and Robert Wilson, of Barrie, ten years younger, made an attempt to escape from the Central Prison in which they were serving lengthy sentences.

They secreted themselves in a space between the ceiling and the roof above a small dry kiln Thursday afternoon although the entire prison staff had been looking for them.

They had provided themselves with a bag full of bread, a pail of water, several large chisels, a mallet, two formidable batons and a quantity of clothing. They had removed two slates from the roof and had a good view along the south wall and the space of the yard between that and the adjoining shop.

A MARYLAND HOME.

FAMOUS WYE MANSION, WITH ITS GRACIOUS MEMORIES.

A Sturdy Domicile and its Outbuildings and "Quarters"—A Land of Mint Juleps and Winsome Maidens—Fred Douglass Visits His Boyhood's Home.

If one might be frisked by the mere magic of a wish away from the vulgar scrambling and the din and all the heartless impertinence of this impatient time back to those ways of pleasantness and paths of peace which were the familiar conditions of old Maryland, he might choose to find himself trundling in an antiquated gig through the long, dim stretch of woods and the double colonnade of locusts and beeches which formed the approach to the "great house" and ended in the graveled drive that belted the noble lawn—from five to seven acres of close, clean sward, dotted with firs and cedars and terraced from end to end. Here stood the sturdy domicile, broad and square, built of bricks brought over from England in the ships that came for tobacco. It was flanked on each hand with offices and strung out to the very edge of the woods with outbuildings—kitchen, dairy, icehouse, overseer's lodge and the "quarter" for the dusky colony of slaves. This latter might be either a group of cabins or a single spacious tenement of logs or stone, affording one big sitting room below, floored with earth and rude dormitories, bunked and blanketed above. On the ground floor the negroes loved to lie around the great hearth, with their feet to the fire, and to sleep that sleep of insouciant beatitude which was broken only by the familiar cry of warning, "Some fool nigger's heel a-burning!"

In the distance was the clumsy windmill for the grinding of the maize which was presently to find itself transformed and famous in coquetries of johnny cake and pone, and flapjacks flattered with golden butter, and beyond, between the willows by the creek, glimpsed and glanced the rippling silver of the bay, with its sleepy coves and inlets dotted with canoes and barges, and with the slender spars of pungies in among the cuddling little isles, where Sambo tonged for "eyeshsters" in the sun and the larger fisher took his finny treasures from the weir.

Here was a land flowing with mint juleps and blooming with delectable damsels. Mistress Rebecca Lloyd, beautiful and gracious, greeted the newcomer with a winsome courtesy on the broad piazza, and the grizzled butler, who had "toted" his young missus around so long that there were still times when he forgot himself and called her "honey," brought you the beguiling beverage on a silver salver engraved with the family arms and was distressed if your straw refused to draw. That broad piazza was burned, with the rest of the noble house of Wye, on March 18, 1781, when a British marauding party looted the plantation and the mansion and carried off plate, jewelry and watches, swords, spurs, sashes and cocked beavers, muffs, turbans and tippets, wigs and embroidered waistcoats, plumed hats and cardinals, the whole splendid plunder of brave apparel and dainty bedeckings. The fair Rebecca has long since been choired among the angels, and the grizzled butler sleeps with his toes turned up to the mint, but when I crossed the lawn one kindly day in December I was greeted as graciously by Rebecca's later kinswoman and conducted into the great hall, which never yet, whether in the parent house or in this, was big enough for the hospitalities it has harbored. The grand old manor house gave its body to the flames, but its soul survives in the later mansion, where its traditions of courtesy and kindness are piously cherished.

Near the site of the historic domicile, a fragment of which still remains, stands the beautiful structure, impressive by its proud simplicity, which invites the wayfarer today in the name of eight generations of Maryland worthies who have kept house there since Edward Lloyd I, the Puritan, in 1668, set up his son Philemon to be lord of the manor of Wye and master of Wye House—incunabula majorum. The main building of two lofty stories, including the ball, drawing room, parlor, dining room and chambers, all of noble proportions, is connected by corridors with one storied wings, which are the library on one side and the domestic offices on the other, presenting a pleasing facade of 200 feet, looking out upon the lawn and the leafy avenue, and over the woods to Wye river and the bay.

In Governor Lloyd's time there was a certain steward, or bailiff, at Wye, one Captain Anthony of St. Michael's, at one time master of a bay craft in the service of the governor. This man was the owner of a likely negro boy who escaped from bondage, and by his remarkable powers, acquirements and address became known to the world as Frederick Douglass. In 1881 Mr. Douglass, being then marshal of the District of Columbia, was moved to revisit the scenes of his childhood and his thrall, and one day found himself on the porch of Wye House, where he was received by the sons of Colonel Lloyd, their father being absent, with that courtesy which is extended to every stranger who finds his way thither. When he had made known the motive of his visit, he was conducted over the estate, from spot to spot that he remembered and described with all their childish associations—here a spring, there a hedge, a lane, a field, a tree. He called them by their names or recalled them by some simple incident, and all the glowing heart of the man seemed to go out to the place as he passed from ghost to ghost as in a dream. And then a strange thing happened. Standing mute and musing for awhile, he said slowly and low, as one who talks in his sleep, "Over in them woods was whar me and Mars Dan useter trap rabbits." "Mars Dan" was the governor's son. Was it the man's half playful, half pathetic sense of the grotesque incongruity of the situation, or was it glamour—all the tremendous significance of a phenomenal life compacted into the homely reflection and phrase of a barefoot "darky?"

He plucked flowers from the graves of dead Lloyds he had known and at the table drank to the health of the master of the old house and of his children, "that they and their descendants may worthily maintain the character and the fame of their ancestors."—Dr. John W. Palmer in Century.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

of the machine is $125 with 5 per cent. less for cash.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ADAM DAWSON,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

MANUFACTURERS' COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Manufacturers' Committee beg leave to report that they have under consideration proposals with a view to securing the location of several large industries in Peterborough. Nothing definite has been arranged as yet, and your Committee recommend they be authorised to send a deputation to interview the companies in the question, the said deputation to consist of Messrs. Best and the Mayor.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOMAS CAHILL,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

CHARITY COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Charity Committee beg leave to report as follows.

1. In reference to the account of John McNaughton, as the account was not contracted by any of the officers of the town and as the Relief Officer did not refuse to send the wood, your committee cannot recommend that it be paid, for, to pay it would create an undesirable precedent.

2. In regard to the letter for the Hon. Secretary of the Children's Aid Society, enclosing a letter from Dr. Barnardo, your committee feel that the offer of Dr. Barnardo is a kind one, but owing to the uncertainty of the Home being able to receive children when a temporary shelter was needed and other conditions connected with the offer, your committee cannot recommend that it be accepted.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN SAWERS,
Chairman.

Councillor Dawson moved in amendment to the adoption of the report that the account of John McNaughton be paid.

At this point Mr. McNaughton was given five minutes in which to lay his case before the Council. The ex-councillor created a great deal of merriment.

Although the report of the Charity Committee was considered to be right in principle, in this instance the councillors thought Mr. McNaughton should have the amount be expended and it was so ordered.

At this jencture an unpleasant and unseemingly incident occurred. The five minutes' time allotted Mr. McNaughton had expired and the matter was disposed of, but he persisted in interrupting the meeting. The interruptions were taken good naturedly until the ex-councillor referred insultingly to Councillor Sproule. He repeated the epithet. The remarks went unrebuked by the Mayor as it was made amidst considerable confusion.

Councillor Sproule, at the first opportunity rose to a question of privilege, and asked the protection of the Mayor against such attacks. He characterised the scene and confusion created by Mr. McNaughton as disgraceful, and not befitting the dignity of the Council which was being converted into a beer garden. It was a disgrace that such men as McNaughton could come up into the Council and insult one of the members as he had done.

The Mayor endorsed the speaker's remarks. The confusion prevailing at the time prevented him from rebuking the man. He had no doubt Mr. McNaughton would withdraw the remark.

"If he doesn't, I'll make him," exclaimed Councillor Sproule.

McNaughton edged towards the door, and before going out reiterated the insult.

COUNCIL OF REVISION.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Court of Revision to which the application of the Peterborough Carbon and Porcelain Company was referred, beg leave to report as follows:

That as it appears that it was understood by the company and by the Council that the exemption from taxation granted to the Powell & Jones Stove Co. which had occupied the same premises, would apply to this company, and this understanding was carried out until last year when it was found that, technically, the Powell & Jones bylaw did not apply to the present company, and they were assessed, and as the term of exemption in the bylaw referring to the Powell & Jones Company did not expire until the end of last year, this Court recommends to the Council that the taxes of the Peterborough Carbon and Porcelain Company for the year 1894 be remitted.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

E. H. BROWN,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

After submitting the above report, Councillor Stone stated that he wished to bring up the report of a committee of which he was chairman. He wished to state emphatically that he didn't flunk nor he was bribed, and it ill became any councillor to refer to him in that manner. He thanked God that it was the first time such a charge had been laid at his door. He knew full well the evil that could be caused by the foul and slimy tongue of slander. He didn't intend this as a reference to Councillor Sproule, as he don't think he meant it that way.

Councillor Sproule: "No, I didn't."

"I couldn't get to that meeting," continued Mr. Stone, "and as Councillor Mills says 'I didn't flunk,' nor I don't hold my hands behind my back for a bribe. I would like to have the report that wasn't acted on in my absence be brought up again."

As soon as Councillor Stone took his seat, Councillor Mills arose and apologised openly for the remark he had made on the spur of the moment.

Councillor Sproule also explained his statement.

Councillor Stone then asked what had been done with the report.

The Mayor replied that the report and motion and amendments in connection with it had all fallen through. He ruled that way. The only shape in which the report could again come up was for reconsideration.

Considerable discussion ensued on this point. Finally Councillor Sproule moved that the report be reconsidered and disposed of. The motion was carried and the report came up.

Councillor Stone then took the report and moved that the date March 5, 1895, be changed to March 15, 1895. Councillor Sawers seconded this and it was carried.

Councillor Stone then moved, seconded by Councillor Clinkscale, that the report come up clause by clause.

Councillor Cahill thought the motion was out of order, inasmuch as the report was one clause and it had been voted on to consider it as a whole.

Councillor Stone explained that he wanted to take up the report clause by clause so that he could vote against the men he wanted to see dismissed. He didn't believe in dismissing the whole body in order to get at a certain few. He wouldn't vote on the report as a whole.

The Mayor held that the report could come up only as a whole report.

Councillor Sproule stated his position on the matter.

Councillor Dawson, pointing his finger at Councillor Stone, said that he hadn't the backbone to name the officials he wanted discharged. He thought they were aiming to discharge the town solicitor. He gave two reasons why the solicitor should not be discharged at the present time.

There was a good deal of discussion on this line. Councillor Sawers wanted to move that Chief Roszel be reappointed for 1895. Councillor Clinkscale moved that the Town Solicitor be discharged. The Mayor ruled both motions out of order.

Councillor Sproule then moved that the report be adopted. It was put to a vote and defeated on the following division:

Yeas—Sproule, Best, Denne, Phelan, Sawers.

Nays—Cahill, Mills, Dawson, Clinkscale, Stone, Mason, Brady.

A memorial to the local house asking that legislation be granted enabling the Council to pass a by-law providing for the collection of taxes from the owners of property instead of the tenants, was passed.

A FRANCHISE GRANTED.

A by-law giving Messrs. Carnegie and Dennistoun the right to erect poles and wires on the streets of the town was read a first, second and third time and became law.

OXYGENATOR

HOW USED IN CONSUMPTION

Consumption, be it of the lung or throat, or afflicting any other part of the body, depends upon a germ or microbe, the bacillus of tuberculosis. It is the poroliferation of this germ, the changes produced by its presence in the tissues, and the absorption of its secretions or ptomaines that cause the various symptoms of this dreadful disease, loss of appetite, emaciation, fever, night-sweats, cough and expectoration.

In what way does oxygenator act to produce the beneficial results that follow its use?

1st. As a constitutional tonic and alterative;

2nd. As a direct inhalant and sterilizer.

Both, as a constitutional and an inhalant, the remedy through its anti-septic and germicidal qualities, causes the tissues in which the bacillus has found lodgment, to become unsuitable for its further growth, just as soon as thorough saturation has taken place therein. The results are noticed in this way: The fever diminishes, usually after the 3rd or 4th day of treatment, and finally subsides altogether. The cough gets easier, night-sweats cease, expectoration increases for the first, consolidated portions of the lungs re-open and renew their functions, appetite returns, in short convalescence follows. If the treatment be continued, directions properly followed, there can be no reason why a permanent cure should not be had.

Of course, in the nature of things, if there has been such necrosis as to leave insufficient lung tissue to meet the requirements of blood oxygenation, no cure can be expected. But even in advanced cases, the use of oxygenator will check the growth of the bacillus, life be prolonged, and much more accomplished for the patient than with former methods of treatment. Many patients are pronounced in the last stages of consumption, from a mistaken diagnosis, therefore even all such can surely learn from our method of treatment after a short time of using it whether or not their case is as hopeless as they are led to believe, and were this so, still life would be considerably prolonged for them, and existence rendered more cheerful and content. There is no question but what at least eighty per cent. of so-called consumptive cases can be cured by our rational method of treatment, if adopted by such just as soon as they find other methods of treatment, first used, to show no gain. To use a professed consumption cure for months and months, hoping, watching and waiting vainly, for a gain for the better, is like chasing a "Will o' the Wisp." Don't do it. Improvement should not only follow within a week from beginning with a good remedy, but such should continue right along as time passes, if proper conditions are looked after, until a cure is effected. This of course applies to all such cases as are not entirely collapsed. The Oxygenator, as an inhalant is most remarkably successful, because by its use every portion of respiratory tract is reached, and thus the diseased areas become thoroughly oxidized or sterilized. Precise directions are given to all purchasers of oxygenator, how to prepare it as an inhalant. All sufferers of lung troubles should avail themselves of the use of this remedy for a trial and then learn how good it is. It is nearer a specific for this dreaded disease, than any other method of treatment known. It has been quietly used and tried with success in thousands of cases. Cost of treatment does not amount to over three dollars monthly.

The remedy is only purchsed direct from the manufacturer to the consumer; not for sale at chemists.

MURDERER SHORTISS

Was Well Known in Belleville—Came from Ireland.

Special to the Times.

BELLEVILLE, March 4.—Shortiss, the Valleyfield murderer, came to this city from Waterford, Ireland in June, 1893, and stayed for some weeks at the Queen's hotel. He had letters of introduction from prominent people in England and Ireland to friends in Canada.

A gentleman in this city, who knew some of his people in Liverpool, got him a situation and gave him money, but the young man was so thoroughly worthless that the gentleman had to give him up as uncontrollable.

Rescued the Crew of a British Ship.

NEW YORK, March 4.—The Anchor Line steamer Anchoria, which arrived this morning from Glasgow, rescued at sea on February 28, the crew of the British brigantine Confederate, which was in a sinking condition. The Confederate sailed from St. John's, Nf., Jan. 5, for Bristol, with a cargo of fish oil.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 5, 1895.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

The Weather.

PROBS.—Fine northeasterly to northwesterly winds; continued cold weather with a fall of snow.

Vital Statistics.

There were registered at the town clerk's office during February, 17 births, 2 marriages and 9 deaths.

Oddfellows at Lindsay.

A large number of Oddfellows left at 7 o'clock last night via a special train to Lindsay on a fraternal visit to the brethren of that town.

Convention Today.

At Norwood today the Conservatives of the East Peterborough riding will meet in convention for the purpose of nominating a candidate to contest that riding in the coming general elections.

An Injured Husband.

THE TIMES has been requested to publish a letter from a former resident of this town, who claims that a certain young business man alienated his wife's affections, and caused her to separate from him and remove to Toronto where she now resides, and where she is regularly visited by the party referred to. The facts as related to us would, if published, cause a huge sensation. We are making enquiries and should the facts appear as stated, we will deem it our duty in the interests of morality to publish the entire facts of the case, giving the names of the parties implicated.

"Harry B" Sold.

Mr. H. LeBrun sold his trotter, "Harry B," yesterday to J. J. Burns, of Toronto, the consideration being $400. Since this speedy animal developed into a trotter it has not lost a race, having taken first money in every event in which it was entered. The remarkable record of the trotter is partly due to the excellent care and training it received at the hands of its trainer, Mr. William Sherin, who is a capital trainer and one who knows how to bring out a horse's fine points and speeding qualities. "Harry B" will be taken to Toronto this morning. The sale deprives Peterborough of a fast horse and one that has a future on the race track.

Newspaper Thieves.

Elsewhere will be found a notice of a reward which we propose to offer for the conviction of those contemptible sneak thieves who make it a business of stealing THE MORNING TIMES from the porches and doorways of our subscribers in the early morning. We have complained several times to the police, but it would appear that there is little hope of action from that quarter, although the detective ability required to secure the prompt arrest of some of these thieves, would not bother a ten year old school boy. The loss is a serious one to us, entailing as it does not only the subscription price of the paper (for we cannot expect a subscriber to pay for a paper he seldom receives) but it keeps others from becoming subscribers. While it is complimentary to know that THE TIMES is so much in demand that people will have it, if at the risk of being "jugged," we prefer that they should call at the office and take it in the regular way. Our subscribers will oblige us by promptly advising us of any irregularity in the delivery of the papers.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

MANY IMPORTANT MATTERS LEGISLATED UPON LAST NIGHT.

Messrs. Carnegie and Dennistoun Granted a Franchise—A Report Reconsidered and Lost—A Councillor Insulted by an Outsider.

At the meeting of the Town Council last night there were present: Mayor Kendry in the chair and Councillors Sproule, Best, Denne, Mills, Phelan, Dawson, Clinkscale, Sawers, Stone, Mason, Cahill and Brady.

After the minutes were read and before they were approved of Councillor Stone rose to ask whether or not it was the understanding of the Council that the police should enforce the cartage by-law without cost to the complainant in case the charge was dismissed. The point provoked some discussion.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Under the head of communications the auditors' report was received and referred to the Finance Committee.

From Geo. M. S. Burney, applying for position of Bridge Inspector. Referred to Committee on Appointments.

From J. A. Harper, asking, on behalf of the Fire Brigade band, for a grant equal to that of last year. Referred to Finance Committee.

From J. H. Yelland, secretary of the Fire Brigade, asking that the Council repair the firemen's meeting room. Referred to Property Committee.

From Daniel Knox, stating that he was about to start a vinegar and soda factory on Queen street and needed a drain, which he asked the town to put in for him. Street and Bridge Committee.

From W. C. Cummings complaining that boys and loafers steal from those who offer produce for sale on the market. He asked for police protection. Referred to Market Committee.

From Jane Barrie, asking for a remittance of taxes on account of the illness of her husband. Referred to Charity Committee.

From Street Inspector Pope, submitting an account of work done on the streets during the month amounting to $1,017.50. Street and Bridge Committee.

From John Kelly, complaining of overcharge of taxes. Court of Revision.

From A. H. Cobb, secretary of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society, asking for a grant of $500 for the Society to maintain Court House Park, in compliance with a request embodied in a resolution passed by the Society. Finance Committee.

From E. B. Edwards enclosing a draft memorial to the legislature praying that the assessment law may be amended by making all taxes by land payable by the owners and not by the tenants thereof. Received.

From Louis F. Heyd, of Heyd & Earngey acting for Mrs. M. S. Chysler, of Peterborough, who wants a compensation for injuries she received from a fall on the streets of Peterborough. Unless the matter was adjusted a writ for damages would be issued.

From the Peterborough Central Exhibition Company asking permission to stretch a streamer across the street for three weeks previous to the exhibition.

A PETITION.

A petition, signed by numerous citizens, was presented asking that a footbridge be built across the Otonabee at Auburn and detailing the necessity for it.

Councillor Stone thought, in reference to the request, that every company, from a knitting machine to a pot factory, wanted a bonus and generally got it. When bone people, citizens and ratepayers asked for something so necessary to their confidence and safety, he believed they should have it, and it would be outrageous if they didn't get it. He hoped the Street and Bridge Committee, to which the petition was referred to report, would do what was right and just.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That as the present arrangement has been found beneficial to the town, no action be taken with reference to the resolution in regard to the bank account.

3. Your Committee further considered the application of Messrs. Carnegie and Dennistoun for the privilege of placing poles and wires on the streets for electric purposes and the by-law will again be submitted to you.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

THOS. CAHILL,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Property Committee beg to report that, having been instructed to purpose a typewriting machine they have got one on approval, and recommend that if accepted, a cheque be issued to I. E. Cross on the certificate of the chairman of this committee for the amount of the purchase money. The price

A COMPLICATION

In the Matter of the Outfall Sewer Arbitration Award.

Yesterday, March 4, was the limit of the extension of time allowed Judge Ketchem in which to make his award in the outfall sewer arbitration. The extension was until March 5, but not inclusive, and only with the consent of the counsel for both town and township can today be included in the order of the court.

Judge Ketchem has telegraphed Judge Edmison that he must have a few more days in which to make the award. And right here arises a complicated question of law. An application for an order of extension should properly be made before the previous extension has expired. The serious aspect of the case, as it effects the town, will be seen when it is known that any award the arbitrator might make after the extension has expired, would be worthless.

The matter was brought up in council last night. Judge Edmison was present and made the statement that the case did not stand exactly as it did before. He was willing to consent to March 5th being included in the present extension, and he thought that the courts would grant a further extension until March 10th, or 15th with the consent of counsel for town and township, but he wasn't prepared to say that the township would consent.

The town solicitor who was at the rink, was sent for. He didn't consider the case in as serious a light as did Judge Edmison and Councillor Stone. The latter thinks the town is in "a sorry plight."

The town may not be in a sorry plight but it is assuredly placed in the position where the consent of the township is necessary to allow an order for extension of time to be made. Should this consent be withheld the award would be worthless and would not be binding upon either the town or township. If the township has any feeling of apprehension about the decision of the arbitrator, it can refuse to consent to an extension of time, and thereby nullify all that has been done in the matter.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

More winter weather.

The Board of Education tonight.

Mr. George Guy, the well known manager of Guy Bros.' minstrels, is dead.

A concert in aid of the piccolo band will be held in Unity hall on the evening of March 12.

A quantity of local news is crowded out on account of the lengthy report of the Council meeting.

Ashburnham Council did not meet last night, having postponed the session until next Monday night.

The evangelistic services in St. Paul's church last night conducted by Rev. J. W. Moore and Mr. Whyte, were largely attended. A great deal of interest is being taken in the meetings and the attendance is increasing.

Barrie is after Trinity College School. At the meeting of the Barrie town council, Mr. Strathy spoke of the burning of Trinity College at Port Hope, and stated that as the Board had not as yet decided to rebuild at Port Hope it might be as well to suggest Barrie as a fine situation for the college.

The Reform Association of South Victoria held a convention Saturday to nominate a candidate. Several candidates were nominated, viz., G. McHugh, Thomas Stewart, Wm. Lownsboro and E. A. Bowes. After the second ballot it was seen that the contest lay between George McHugh and Thos. Stewart, but as neither candidate could secure a two-thirds majority the convention was adjourned for a week.

Last night the police pulled in a couple of suspicious looking characters. The men had more clothes on their backs than were required and the question is whether they belonged to them. Woods said he came from Peterborough while Smith claimed Belleville as his home. The police suspected that the clothes were stolen and have written Peterborough and Belleville about the men.—Kingston Whig.

A CORRECTION.

Editor of the Times.

DEAR SIR,—I wish to contradict the statement which appeared in yesterday's TIMES that I was upset and my horse ran away on Sunday night. Neither my horse or myself was out Sunday night, therefore it could not have been me that was dumped out of a cutter. The boys that were upset thought it clever to tell the night watchman that it was my horse. If they would drive a little more careful they would not need to tell falsehoods to screen their careless driving.

Yours respectfully,
THOS. JOHNSTON, V.S., V.D.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

VALLEYFIELD'S TRAGEDY.

MURDERER SHORTIS SENT TO BEAUHARNOIS FOR TRIAL.

Shortis Primed Himself With Cocaine to Murder—His Career and Attachment for a Young Girl.

Special to The Times.

VALLEYFIELD, March 5.—Wept over by their heartbroked relatives, deeply mourned by all the town, the victims of the foul murder in the Montreal Cotton Mills were buried today, while their murderer calmly slept through the night, and is now amusing himself the best way he can during the day in one of the seven small cells of the town gaol.

He is a subject of general execration, and the people's hatred seems excusable. There seems to be only one thing that can save Shortis from a legal death—a plea of insanity. A more cold-blooded sort of a man than Shortis is at present is impossible to imagine. Not a thought does he seem to possess but for his own comfort; not a thought for his poor victims or their families; not a thought even for the father and mother over in Ireland, whose only child he is, and who were told by a cablegram from a Montreal friend of their son's terrible handiwork.

If Shortis has any real feelings he managed to hide them remarkably well. Not a word has he voluntarily spoken about the regret he feels at what he has done. Whatever remarks he has made to that effect had to be dragged out of him by questions from those who were allowed to converse with him. On the other hand he rather seems to which he has gained for himself. For once, in a murder case, there are no theories, simply a consensus of opinion to the effect that the killing was done deliberately to secure the large amount of money which was in the mill office on Friday night. It was a desperate attempt, and it was a diabolic plan. If the plan had succeeded Shortis would have had the murder of three more men upon his conscience, and it is very possible that he might have managed to escape, for a while at least, the consequences, for, though he was wild and peculiar and not any too well liked by most of the serious thinking people here, no one would have suspected him of so heinous a crime, and with a little care nothing need have betrayed him. No one but the dead men would ever have known that he had been in the mill, and none but the paymaster's own weapon would have been used to silence them. That Shortis was desirous of having money is well known here.

Shortis was somewhat given to braggadocio and used to tell that when he became of age he would receive from his parents a matter of £5,000 to do with as he pleased. This statement is rather contradictory by letters from his mother, which he has shown now and again to friends, and in which it is reported she said that his remittances will soon have to cease, as she and his father are rapidly reaching the end of their resources.

Earning nothing and spending whatever he received from home, he had to do something.

Then, of course, there comes the lady in that case, Miss Millie Anderson, a most estimable girl and a daughter of an ex-mayor. Unfortunately Shortis took a liking to her. It seems difficult to believe that a man with his record could feel real love for any one, but, to do him justice, the majority of the people here think that he really.

LOVED THE YOUNG LADY.

At any rate, he appeared to be devoted to her and as often as possible was in her company.

There is little doubt but that he was anxious to make her his wife. He often spoke of this, and it was but a very short time before the tragedy that he told Mr. Lowe that if things went right with him, and he expected they would shortly, he would marry her. It was directly from her house that he went to the mill, no doubt full of his murderous designs. He was then armed with a chisel, which he kept hidden in his clothes, and a revolver, which was suspended beneath his shirt front and strung around his neck. Shortis was not a drinking man. He admitted to the writer of having taken a couple of drinks on Friday, but as a rule he drank very little. He was addicted to the cocaine habit, however, though but few people knew it, and it is pretty certain that he primed himself with this drug for the awful deed.

SHORTIS' CAREER.

VALLEYFIELD, March 5.—Though Shortis has hardly many friends left here—and he never had many beyond the men he so cruelly murdered or tried to kill—there are two who remain to him as staunch and as true as ever, and it will be most in his favor if the line of defence is insanity. These are Miss Millie and Master John Anderson. The young lady is the one whom he so much professed to love and who for months has visited constantly, much to the regret and against the wishes of her mother and stepfather. The boy is the young lady's younger brother. To understand this thing thoroughly it is necessary to go back a little into the history of the Anderson family. The young lady's mother was Mrs. Anderson, the wife of the last Protestant Mayor of Valleyfield, before Mr. Loy was elected. Her husband died, and the estate has never been settled; and as the daughter is now 21, she counts on her claim to the estate to assert what she considers her own rights and privileges, and does pretty much as she pleases. In addition to this, the relations between mother and daughter and son have have become somewhat estranged on account of Mrs Anderson's second marriage to Mr. McGinnis which did not meet with her children's approval. It was to this Mr. McGinnis that Shortis, according to the story of both himself and his wife, proposed six weeks ago.

A DELIBERATE PLOT TO KILL.

Mr. Louis Simpson, the manager of the Montreal Cotton Mill. This has thus far only been known to a very few. Shortis had gained a foothold in the Anderson house by being especially kind to the boy John. John is a great sportsman in his way and goes out fishing and shooting a great deal when he has time. In him, though much younger than himself, found a sort of kindred spirit, especially in the matter of fire arms. Of these Shortis always was passionately fond. He never went out of town but he brought home a new revolver. John himself said that these revolvers were hidden about the Anderson house. Shortis was also very fond of fruit and sweets, and it was seldom that he visited the Andersons without bringing a bag of something which he always shared faithfully with John, and later on with Millie, in whose good graces he gradually managed to ingratiate himself. Seeing how much pleasure John took in the company of his new friend, Mrs. McGinnis, like any other mother would have done, let the intimacy grow, and even when he began to pay attentions to Miss Millie, did not see any serious objections. Miss Anderson herself is a very good looking and clever young lady, who is fond of a good time, and found Shortis rather an interesting companion. He took her skating and used to sing with her, she being an accomplished pianist, and in many ways made himself a pleasant friend. Whether she ever thought of the friendship in any other way than that of a flirtation or whether she ever was really in love with him, is difficult to tell. From her own words it would seem that she merely looked upon him as a friend. Anyhow his visits became more frequent and his stays longer, so long in fact, that Mrs. McGinnis had often to tell him that she wished he would not stay till midnight or as late as he usually did. As to Mr. McGinnis he never liked the young man. From the first time he saw him he took a dislike to him, though he tried not to show it. According to Mrs. McGinnis, he was always most gentlemanly in his behavior at the house, and often used to speak of his people and his great expectations. Sometimes they used to see letters which his mother wrote him—such beautiful, pathetic letters as only a fond mother can write to her only son. They were full of good advice and encouragement and love. He was very liberal with his gifts to both the children, and the boy especially was inordinately fond of him, and used to take his part on every occasion, even after he had been arrested.

THE VICTIMS' FUNERAL.

The funerals of the two victims of the murderer took place today in a blinding snowstorm. The weather, however, did not prevent an enormous crowd from gathering at the Catholic and Presbyterian churches, where the services were held, and which were packed to the doors, and hundreds had to be turned away. Hugh Wilson, the third victim, is doing as well as can be expected, although his wounds are very painful today. The preliminary examination began at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

SHORTIS COMMITTED.

The preliminary examination in the murder case here, which was commenced at 3 o'clock this afternoon, was rushed through in quick time. There was really nothing new in the evidence, it being a rehash of that given at the coroner's inquest. Shortis was as stoical as ever. Mr. St. Pierre just sat and watched things, but did not make any objections and had no evidence to offer. The prisoner had nothing to say and pleaded "not guilty;" after which he was committed to Beauharnois for trial. He will be taken there tomorrow so as to give Mr. St. Pierre a chance to consult with him.

IMPERSONAT ON.

It is Alleged that Mrs Bella Pillow Impersonated Mrs Hyams in an Effort to Secure Policies on Her Life for $80,000 and $20,000.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, March 5.—Word has been received from Montreal of the arrest in that city of James Mossberger Pillow and his wife Bella, charged together with the Hyams twins now under arrest here on a charge of murdering Wm. C. Wells two years ago, with conspiring to defraud the Equitable Life Insurance Company out of $80,000 and the Sun Life Insurance Company out of $20,000.

Pillow is the manager of the Crescent Chemical Works in Montreal owned by the Hyams brothers. It is alleged that his wife impersonated Mrs. Harry P. Hyams on the application for the two insurance policies.

Detective Cuddy went to Montreal last night to bring the prisoners to Toronto.

Crown Attorney Curry went along to keep Cuddy company and to look up some evidence.

A MODEL PRISONER

Is Clara Ford, the Self-Confessed Murderess of Frank Westwood.

TORONTO, March 5.—Clara Ford, the mulatto girl, accused of the murder of Frank Westwood early in the month of last October, and who has for the past two months been living a quiet life over at the jail, was seen for a few minutes this morning by a newspaper reporter.

She is occupying one of the most cheerful and commodious rooms in the jail and Governor Green states they have never had in their charge a prisoner who caused them less trouble.

During the past six weeks, however, Clara has been far from well, but she is now recovering. About seven weeks ago she had a tooth extracted and subsequently she caught cold in her mouth. A gathering asserted itself and gave her much pain. She has lost considerable flesh and shows signs of having undergone a severe siege of sickness.

BURGLARS LED BY A WOMAN.

Dressed in Man's Attire when She Robbed Stores and Houses.

Special to the Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Ala., March 5.—Almost nightly recently the stores here have been robbed. Suspicion fell on an unknown man as the leader of the gang of thieves, and yesterday the police tracked the robber to a hut where a large quantity of stolen goods was found. The supposed man proved to be Jane Creek, a well known widow, dressed in male attire. She was heavily armed.

The woman, the officers think, has been the leader of a band of burglars for years. Her sons, Hiram and Bob, were also arrested.

CHICAGO'S WRATH.

Aldermen Severely Roasted by Indignant Ratepayers.

Special to The Times.

CHICAGO, March 4.—So many people attended the indignation meeting held this afternoon at the call of the civic federation that Central Music Hall was inadequate for the crowds and an overflow meeting was held in battery D. on the lake front The meeting was called to protest against the actions of the members of the city council in granting a gas and an electric ordinance last Monday evening, giving valuable franchises to unknown parties and to make action to prevent the ordinance becoming a law. During the speeches the members of the council were branded as thieves, robbers, scoundrels bloodsuckers and various other epithets were applied to them. Any detrimental reference to the council members brought forth the greatest applause. Resolutions were introduced expressing the sentiment and wishes of the meeting, and were voted forthwith at will.

True Bill Against Miss Bergin.

SHERBROOKE, Que., March 5.—The Grand jury brought in a true bill against Josephine Bergin for the murder of Joseph Herbert. The case will come before the

CANADA AND THE CAPE.

SIR CECIL RHODES OFFERS CANADA FREE TRADE.

The Offer is for Practical Free Trade between the Two Colonies—A Canadian Commissioner May be Sent to Negotiate.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, March 5.—An offer has been made by Cape Colony of free trade with Canada, with all the advantages which that means, to both countries, including an advantage to Canada in the markets of Cape Colony, equal all round to 20 per cent. over us and even Great Britain. It is the first practical move in the direction of acceptance of the principle of preferential trade, which was so emphatically endorsed by the Dominion Parliament two years ago.

Substantially, these are the facts. Shortly before Sir John Thompson's death, he and Sir Cecil Rhodes, Premier of Cape Colony, had a conference in London, at which the question of closer trade relations was discussed. Some time before then an offer had been made by Canada to the Cape Government for the establishment of a direct steamship service between the Dominion and Cape Colony. It was thought that if Cape Colony joined in the subsidy there would be little difficulty in rearranging the present Demerara service so as to extend it to South Africa, with the addition of one of the two steamers. In talking over the matter with Sir John Thompson, Mr. Rhodes took the ground that there would be no need for subsidizing a steamship line. He proposed that Canada and the Cape should each remove their tariff barriers to the products of each other, in other words that there should be free trade between the two colonies. With the establishment of a policy of this kind and the tremendous increase in trade that must follow, a direct line of steamers would be the result without either Government paying one cent of subsidy.

THE BEARING OF THE FRENCH TREATY.

As stated in my despatch of last evening the Government is desirous of securing a definite interpretation both from the French Government and Home Government, as to the effect of the most favored nation clause in the French Commercial Treaty. They desire a specific declaration that the term "Third power" in the treaty would not apply to a British colony. In the event of a satisfactory answer being received under this head, it is probable that the Government may commission a gentleman to proceed to Cape Town to negotiate a treaty with the Cape Government. In this connection the name of Senator W. E. Sanford, of Hamilton, is favorably mentioned. Mr. Sanford had the good fortune to meet Mr. Rhodes in London, after Sir John Thompson's death, when the Cape Premier unfolded to him his plans of preferential trade arrangements. Accompanied by and with the assistance of such an astute public official as Mr. Parmalee, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, the two gentlemen ought certainly to come back to Canada with a favorable treaty.

TRADE OF THE CAPE.

In view of the consideration which the Government is now paying to this question it may be well to mention a few figures showing the trade of the Cape which would be open to our manufacturers. The imports of Cape Colony in 1893 were valued at $56,161,270. These include manufactures of wool, cotton, iron leather, furniture, doors and window sashes, hardware of all classes, agricultural implements and all machinery, paper, beer and ale, bags and bagging, wearing apparel of all kinds and many other articles which are manufactured in Canada. The exports of the Cape are not likely to interfere with our manufactures. The total exports of the Cape amount to $64,000,000 annually. Of this $25,000,000 was gold bullion, $18,000,000 diamonds, $9,000,000 wool, $2,500,000 Angora hair, $2,500,000 ostrich feathers. Practically the only thing the Cape could send to Canada would be wool and brandy. Mr. Rhodes was willing to negotiate upon the basis of free trade, and seeing that Canada has so much to gain it would be worse than folly if this grand opportunity were not seized.

IN NORTH HASTINGS.

Two Patrons in the Field—Only One the Order's Nominee.

Special to the Times

STIRLING, March 5.—Samuel Harryett, of Bancroft, and James McCombe, both members of the Hastings County Council and Patrons, the latter being the nominee of the Patrons, will no doubt be placed in the field. Both are great friends of James Haggerty, M.P.P., whom they personally supported and worked zealously for, and it is safe to predict that either will get the support of the Haggerty family and its numerous supporters: and also the Patron vote, which is very strong in the northern townships, can be relied on for either of the two men.

Mr. Haggerty has already obtained for his riding greater grants than have ever been given, such being for the extreme northern townships, thus increasing his popularity as an independent.

DEATH OF DEAN CASSIDY.

The Well-Known Rector of St. Helen's Church Passes Away.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—Very Rev. Dean Cassidy, who for the past two years had been failing in health, died yesterday morning at 5 o'clock at the parochial residence of St. Helen's Roman Catholic church, Brockton. In November, 1893, the reverend father contracted typhoid fever, from which he never recovered perfect health.

MARKHAM FIREBUGS

At their Devilish Work—Vanzant's Hardware Store.

Special to the Times.

MARKHAM, March 4.—An incendiary fire in Vanzant & Co's hardware and tin shop at 2 o'clock yesterday morning caused $6,000 damage to building and contents, insurance $4,400. Coakwell's harness shop suffered about $400 damaged with $200 insurance.

A number of similar fires have occurred recently and the town is excited.

To Make Him Live Up to His Vows.

BUFFALO, March 5.—Minnie Synder, the girl who married Lewis Bacon of Philadelphia, a student, one night on a frolic, was brought into police court this morning on a charge of truancy, by her father, but the court held that so long as she was a married woman he could not hold her on such a charge. She swore out a warrant for non-support against her husband. Bacon will try to have the marriage contract annulled.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 6, 1895.

Good morning !

There was no fire, to speak of, in Toronto to-day.

Toronto is rapidly requiring a red-hot reputation.

Advertisements as the legs that business walks on.

Since Lord Roseberry began to suffer from insomnia it has been quite correct to call him the most wide-awake statesman in Europe.

It is perhaps lucky for Toronto that her three big fires had burned themselves out before the city goes into the fire insurance business.

No less than five State Legislatures are, or have been, considering bills prohibiting high theater hats. Which of the political parties is going to make denunciation of the theater hat the leading plank in its next platform ?

One of the ablest and best citizens of Brantford, Robert Henry, has been selected to cross swords with the veteran politican gladiator, Wm. Paterson, in South Brant. Pretty soon the great question, " Who struck Billy Patterson ?" will be answered.

The Toronto Globe is writing up the Grit members of parliament. Every man written up so far, seems to be cleverer than all the rest. It makes one tremble to know what an extraordinary aggregation of the brightest, best, ablest, and most earnest men the poor tories have to run up against.

The Globe published a long editorial on the Manitoba school case. It holds that the question must be decided either by the Federal Government or by the Manitoba people themselves. If the former undertake the settlement the decision would be made on the eve of a general election, and in such a way as would add strength to the party in power. If the matter were left in the hands of the people of Manitoba the Globe thinks that the decision of the majority would be fair and just. This the Liberal organ thinks should be the course pursued, the more so because the people themselves know the requirements of their young country.

The new Czar has given an indication of his pacific disposition by decorating his ambassador at the Court of St. James' for his efforts to " secure a favorable settlement of questions between Russia and England, and to strengthen the friendly relations which are so important in assuring the general peace.' These significant words will be warmly welcomed by England, and also by the members of the Triple Alliance. The world has anxiously waited every utterance of the Czar, and this one is the most satisfactory that he has yet made. The auguries of the first weeks of the new year have been hopeful for Europe.

In 30 years the consumption of tobacco in England has risen from 29,000,000 to 62,000,000 pounds, and from an average of 19 ounces a head to 26 ounces. In the same time the consumption of non-alcoholic drinks has grown far in excess of alcoholic. In 1861, 125,000,000 pounds tea, coffee, cocoa and chiccory were imported to 265,000,000 pounds in 1893, while the rise in wines and spirits was from thirty-five to fifty-one million gallons. Beer rose from 24 gallons a head in 1861 to 33¼ gallons in 1874, but has fallen off again to 29½ gallons.

MUNICIPAL FIRE INSURANCE.

The Bulletin, the organ of fire insurance companies, has something to say about the proposed scheme for municipal fire insurance. Of course the Bulletin is opposed to the measure. It makes its living out of the fire insurance companies, and cannot afford to see anything good in a scheme which would deprive them of a large share of business. It may be interesting to some of our readers to know what the Bulletin has to say about the matter. Here it is :

Regarding this, as we do, as a measure that would interest the readers of the Bulletin, we give it entire, at the sacrifice of much space. We do not, however, deem the measure of sufficient importance to fire insurance companies and underwriters that we should warn them against it, nor advise them to put their house in order for a flitting from Ontario to other hunting grounds where they may pursue their vocation in accordance with sound business laws and the dictates of common sense. We do not, in fact, attach much importance to this municipal grasping-at-power scheme.

At any rate, as things now present themselves, municipalities are not yet competent to perform the functions of insurance bodies, nor will they be for many years to come, if ever.

There need not, we think, be any apprehension of the bill becoming a law, for, though some members of the legislature may have promised their support, it is not at all likely that the majority will cast their votes in its favor. It is to be hoped that the bill will be turned down at sight. If, however, the reverse of this should be the case and that fire underwriters experience any disaster or inconvenience from it, their own anti-insurance practices and usages should be held accountable for any such results. If our space permitted we would point out several parts of the bill that should condemn it off hand as being arbitary and as giving too many, and by far too extensive, powers to the commissioners. But we must leave this for the present.

It will be noticed that the Bulletin, says the Hamilton Spectator, while professing to pooh-pooh the scheme, " sacrifices " much space to its publication, and would give it particular fits if it had space. It will also be noticed that the Bulletin decides, off-hand, that " municipalities are not yet competent to perform the duties of insurance bodies." But why ? Is there anything peculiar about the men who govern municipalities ? Is it impossible to elect people who can read and write, and " cipher " a little ? But perhaps the non-competence is due to the fact that the legislature has not given the municipalities power to act as insurance bodies. That's true. But how does the Bulletin know that that power will not be given " for many years to come, if ever ? " Has the Bulletin got the Legislature in its pocket ?

The striking portion of the Bulletin's article is found in its admission that fire underwriters have been guilty of " anti-insurance practices and usages," which would be adequately punished by such a "disaster" as the passage of the proposed municipal insurance bill. That is precisely what the people in favor of the bill have been omplaining about ; that is where the trouble is.

KEENE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

It is with feelings of regret that we chronicle the demise of Mr. David Nelson, who expired on Saturday night last at the age of 57 years. Some few years ago the deceased had the misfortune of getting his hand amputated with a mowing machine which proved a great strain on his nervous system. He sat in our Council as deputy reeve for some years but resigned his position on account of ill health. The deceased was a member of the Presbyterian Church and a staunch Reformer in politics and was considered an honest, upright man in all business transactions as well as a loving father and husband. We tender our sympathy to the sorrowing family, trusting that their loss is his gain.

A landlord of no small dimensions had a dispute one night last week with a farmer of rather small dimensions. Although some loud chat was indulged in by the pugilists, we are happy to learn that neither party was seriously hurt. We advise the small fellow to shy clear of Jumbo in the future, for it is a certainty if he falls on him the midge will be smashed into jelly.

Rev. E. E. Howard, pastor of the Keene Methodist Church, has been holding protracted meeting at Bethel Church for the past three weeks and reports many converts and prospects of more.

CAN YOU GET IT?

Many who should kno wbetter, are well pleased to get a good sized glass jar or tin of bulky alum, ammonia or other powerful but injurious mixture, for use as Baking Powder, at much less, perhaps even half the price, of the really good article, overlooking the fact that the amount thus APPARENTLY saved is of small moment in comparison with the real but not always immediately observed inevitable injury following the use of these articles. If in addition to the seemingly low prices, there is attached some showy gift or prize to give the impression of extra value, the inferior or hurtful nature of the powder is lost sight of in the expectation (a vain one) of getting "something for nothing."

ANOTHER STRANGE CASE.

A WOMAN MYSTERIOUSLY BURNED TO DEATH.

Heavy Insurance on Her Life—The Husband's Doubtful Story—He States that the Furnace Was too Near the Woodwork.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—Fire broke out in the house of Mr. A. Dick, upholsterer and manufacturer, 228 St. Helens avenue, shortly after one o'clock yesterday morning. The fire spread rapidly and in a short time the building was enveloped in flames

The occupants of the house at the time were Mr. Dick, his wife and four children. Mrs. Dick was burned to death.

The Dick premises, which rent at $3 per month, were located in a lonely spot at St. Helens avenue and Dora street. When the firemen arrived, Dick and his children were outside the house. According to his story the fire originated in the basement and was caused by the furnace which was set too near the woodwork and evidently took fire on account of being overheated. "We were awakened shortly after 1 o'clock," said Dick, "by the cries of the baby. The house was filled with smoke and I awoke my wife and the three children in the next room and made for the rear of the house, where there appeared to be the least fire. I went first with the children, my wife following me, carrying the lamp. She turned down the stairs and I threw a mattress out of the window and dropped the children to the ground, a distance of about 15 feet, and none of them were hurt. I became alarmed when my wife did not appear below, and not receiving any reply to my repeated calls, crawled on my hands and knees to the stairway, down which she had gone, but could not get down, and escaped from the building by jumping."

After the fire had been subdued the firemen discovered the body of Mrs. Dick lying in the storeroom on the ground floor.

There was not much furniture in the house, owing to the family having rented premises at 1164 College street, and most of their effects were taken there on Friday, and the family intended taking possession on Saturday. The remains of the dead woman were removed to the Morque, where an inquest will be held by Coroner Johnson on Monday afternoon.

When the inquest opens some starting developments may transpire. Mrs. Dick's life was insured in the Covenant Mutual Insurance Company for $5,000, the policy having been taken out within a year.

Dick claims that the furnace was too near the woodwork, and that he had repeatedly asked the landlord to remove it, but he declined to do so.

About a year ago Dick and his wife applied to the Covenant Mutual Insurance Company, of Galesburg, Ill., for policies of $5,000 each on their lives. Both man and wife seemed entirely in accord, and the policies were made in trust for the benefit of the children in each case. After inquiry the agents of the company reported the risks good. Dr. Little examined the applicants on Jan. 19, 1894, and the policies were granted. At the same time the first six months' premiums were paid upon both policies, and in due course the second premium, which would fall due about the middle of 1894, so that the third instalment will be about due at the present time.

On Jan. 22, 1895, Dick took out an additional policy for $1,000 on his own life and paid six months' premium.

When Dick and his wife applied to the company Dick seemed to think some explanation necessary for seeking the policies canvassed, and said that he had read some literature of the company, and was pleased with it. He also said that application had been made to another company, which was considering the matter.

QUARRELED AND TOOK POISON.

Annie Howard Takes Carbolic Acid Because of a Tiff with Her Lover.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—Miss Annie Howard, 18 years of age, Logan avenue, attempted to commit suicide last evening in a small store at 601 Queen street west, occupied by Thomas Hudson, weaver. Miss Howard had been spending the evening at Hudson's house, in company with her lover, Robert Huptins, 41 Claremont street, and a young girl friend. It is supposed a jealous quarrel arose between Miss Howard, her lover and the second girl, and finally ended by the former snatching up a small bottle of a carbolic acid which standing at a table near at hand. Her companions quickly sprang up to intercept the deadly draught, one of them striking the bottle as its contents were being emptied into the girl's mouth. The greater portion of the acid had not passed her lips, and was thrown over her face and arms, seriously injuring the sight of her right eye

The young man rushed from the house, and meeting Sergeant Mulhall and P. C. Bestard he informed them that a young girl had accidentally poisoned herself. He then summoned Drs. T. S. Webster and H. Hamilton who administered antidotes successfully. Efforts to induce her to induce her to consent to being taken to the hospital, where the injured eye might be attended to, proved futile, and Miss Howard was driven away in a closed cab by her lover. His version of the occurrence was that the girl was playing with the bottle containing the poison and accidentally it spilled over her face and arms.

BARLOW GETS THE "CAT."

A Toronto Convict Flogged at the Central Prison this Morning.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, March 4.—Up at the Central Prison this morning Henry W. Harlow, 27 years of age, was flogged. Barlow was convicted in October last at the General Sessions of committing an indecent assault on a 12 year-old girl named Martha Ellison. Judge McDougall sentenced him to six months' imprisonment and 12 lashes within one month of the expiration of his sentence. The flagellation was administered this morning, the "cat" being wielded by a muscular guard. Barlow winced under the first blow, and thereafter kept up a dismal wailing, twice roaring outright for mercy. He was pretty badly punished.

Baron Hirsch has just purchased a very large tract of land in the Province of Buenos Ayres upon which he intends to establish a new Hebrew colony.

Assassin Foiled.

BERLIN, March 4.—The Neuste Nachrichten says that an Austrian Anarchist, went to Cape Martin recently to assassinate Emperor Franz Josef, but was arrested soon after his arrival by the French police acting upon information received from Vienna.

A despatch to the London Globe says a battle was fought near Ta Ping Shan on February 24, in which the Chinese suffered defeat.

HOW TO CLEAN HOUSE

THE WAY ONE WOMAN MAKES HARD LABOR SEEM EASY.

She Learned to Economise In Strength and Has a System—Taking Up Carpets and Scrubbing Floors—Battling With Moths and Getting Rid of Rubbish.

I always begin to clean house at the top—in the attic, which is the storeroom for castoff things of the year in clothing and furniture. In the course of six months an awful lot of rubbish accumulates there, and at housecleaning is a good time to get rid of it. In a house where there are children there is always considerable castoff clothing to look over. Some of it will do very nicely to cut over for younger children, and that should be brushed and aired, then folded away in a box kept for that purpose. The garments that are outgrown and cannot be remodeled should be put in another box, ready to bestow on some worthy person less fortunate than yourself.

Do not hoard up old garments against possible need "next year." If you do not see a possible chance of making use of them in the next six months, put them in the poorbox. They will bring you a richer blessing there. Examine the broken furniture that has been stowed away. If it can be mended, have it done at once, before knocking about has destroyed the usefulness of a piece to which you are attached. If you find that it is too worn and shabby for your own house, perhaps you know some deserving person who is ingenious enough to fix it up and would be very glad to do so for the gift of it. Otherwise throw it into the kindling wood heap. There isn't a particle of sense in cluttering up a house with a lot of useless old rubbish. Unless you are sure that dilapidated furniture can be fixed up it is bad judgment to send it to the attic anyhow.

Look over the old papers and magazines and make a package of those you do not intend to have bound to send to the hospital or some institution, where a bit of reading material is a perfect boon. After sorting over and putting away all the trash in the attic you have a heap of litter that it is useless to try to put away. Dump it on the ash heap or bribe your scrubwoman to relieve you of it. Then sweep and dust and mop out the attic all ready to receive the stores that will come up from the lower part of the house. It will probably take you a whole day to go over the attic properly. If you discover any signs of that terror of the housewife—bedbugs—make war on them at once. A machine oil can of gasoline is a good companion in such an emergency. Use it freely on infected spots. It will kill eggs and insects instantly and evaporates almost as soon as applied. Do not have a lighted lamp or gas around when you use it, though, nor for some time after, unless you have raised the windows and aired the attic.

If you have found moths, take all the infected clothes out into the sunshine. Beat and shake them well, then brush and if practicable dampen and run a hot iron over them. Moths are the meanest pests that ever got into a house. They do more damage in a day than can be repaired in a year, and there is absolutely no way known yet, except vigilance, that will keep them out of woolen clothing and furs. After you have everything cleaned and sweet smelling in the attic, get a pint of sulphur and put in an old iron kettle and set it over an oil stove or charcoal fire in the attic. Close the windows and doors and let it burn itself out.

Then you may be reasonably sure that there are no microbes or bacilli lurking around to descend upon and destroy the family. Be sure to remove all clothing that sulphur will be apt to discolor. It will injure nothing else. After cleaning the attic I go through every closet in the house next and give each the same treatment. Then I begin on the house proper.

In cleaning the other rooms of the house I seldom attempt more than two at once. I select one room on the floor to be cleaned—that I want for a workroom—and have the carpets taken up and the furniture covered. Into this room I have all the pictures, bric-a-brac and furniture carried and piled up out of harm's way. The carpets from the two rooms are carried out to be shaken and dusted, and then I have the dusty floors sprinkled with bits of torn paper that have been dampened. When swept, no dust is raised to penetrate other portions of the house. The walls are swept down with a broom, over which a flannel cloth is pinned, and an application of elbow grease.

If there are grease spots, I take them out with an application of pipe clay made into a paste and applied damp. The grease is generally extracted by the time the clay is dry. Where there are smoke stains from gas or from the register I have the places rubbed with a rag and corn or oat meal. This will not remove the smoke stains always, but will as a general thing. I have taken such stains off with a rag saturated with gasoline, but that has to be done very carefully, or you will smear the paper. After the walls are cleaned the woodwork should be washed with ammonia water, or borax if you like. I use borax for everything because I like its action better. If you have soap used, see that it is not lye soap, because that will take the life out of the paint and make it look dead. It will soon wear off, too, after being washed with strong soap.
